RAILROADS LEAD LOBBYISTS IN MID-1956

The Assn. of American Railroads said it spent $94,527.69 for lobbying during the first six months of 1956, the most reported spent by any group. Congressional Quarterly's survey of official reports filed with the Clerk of the House showed the AFL-CIO in second place. It said it spent $69,582.32 to influence legislation from Jan. 1 through June 30, 1956. The AFL-CIO placed fourth at the end of the first quarter, with a natural gas group and truckers ahead of it.

The railroad organization also led the list of top spenders in the first quarter. It spent $28,782 more on its lobbying activities as of June 30 than its commercial-legislative competitor, the American Trucking Assns. ATA said it spent $65,745.69, placing it third on the list of top spenders.

A total of 252 groups reported they spent $2,545,-432.04 to influence legislation during the first six months of 1956. In 1955, 251 groups reported spending $2,486,243.77 during the comparable period. Some late reports from lobby groups could swell the final figure. Under the law the spending reports for the first six months of the year are due by July 10. CQ's survey contains data filed as of Aug. 3.

According to the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act of 1946 all groups whose principal purpose is to influence legislation are required to register and file quarterly accounts of their receipts and expenditures. (1954 Almanac, p. 674; 1955 Almanac, p. 680)

While climbing to second place, the newly combined AFL-CIO reported considerably less than it did as separate organizations during the three previous years. For example, in 1955 the AFL said it spent $63,780.88 for the first half, and the CIO reported $66,809.66. The total, $130,590.54, is $95,314.97 more than the $69,582.32 the combined groups reported for the corresponding period of 1956. Similarly in 1954 the two groups' spending totaled $111,946.43, and in 1953 a total of $80,610.61.

Lobby Campaigns, Spending

The correlation between funds spent for lobbying and legislation before Congress is apparent. For instance, railroad and trucking interests have been lobbying on opposite sides of proposals to change the nation's transportation policy. The rail groups favor 1955 recommendations of a Presidential advisory committee that would lessen government regulation of transportation. Truckers oppose this. (For summary of the report, see 1955 Almanac, p. 531)

Action in behalf of farm legislation placed two farm organizations among the top 10 spenders filing in 1956. The American Farm Bureau Federation reported spending $61,432, fourth high for the half year; the National Farmers Union was seventh high with reported spending of $49,861.43. The Farm Bureau Federation favored flexible farm price supports -- continued in the second bill sent to the President -- while the NFU pressed for rigid price supports, a provision of the first farm bill vetoed by the President. A third large farm group, the National Grange, had not yet filed a half-year spending report by Aug. 3.

Others in the top 10: The U.S. Cuban Sugar Council, fifth, reporting $61,022.11; the Southern States Industrial Council, sixth, reporting $52,586.65; the National Committee for Insurance Taxation, eighth, reporting $48,820.68; the American Legion, ninth, reporting $42,187.18; the National Federation of Post Office Clerks, 10th, reporting $41,264.14.

The Sugar Council, representing 13 companies owning or operating sugar properties in Cuba whose stockholders were predominantly U.S. citizens, worked for advantageous sugar quotas for Cuba.

The American Legion actively sought liberalized veterans' pensions but lost out in the Senate. It also opposed revision of the immigration laws and favored an extension of the veterans' home loan program.

The National Committee for Insurance Taxation was a newcomer to the list of top 10 spenders. Formed in November of 1954, the group describes itself as a "research, statistical and activity lobbying" organization. Since the second quarter of 1954, when it first reported its spending, most of its money has come from the Allstate Insurance Co. of Skokie, Ill. Allstate is a subsidiary of Sears Roebuck Co.

In a pamphlet issued in December, 1955, the Committee for Insurance Taxation claimed "202 chief executive officers of fire and casualty insurance companies" as members. The Committee's objective was "to secure equality of federal taxation within the fire and casualty insurance industry."

During its three years of operation, NCIT reports show receipts of $133,832.50. Of this total, $100,394.27 is listed as having come from Allstate.

A single asterisk (*) denotes funds reported spent at the end of the first quarter of 1956; a double asterisk () denotes groups who had not filed spending reports for 1956 as of Aug. 3, but who did file 1955 spending reports.

- What were their interests?
- What were the year-by-year registrations?

Registration figures compiled by Congressional Quarterly showed that 315 persons and organizations registered as lobbyists from Jan. 1 through July 27, 1956, the date Congress adjourned. This compares with 329 registrations during the first session of the 84th Congress.

The Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act was enacted Aug. 2, 1946. It requires all persons who "shall engage himself for pay or for any consideration" for the purpose of attempting to influence, either "directly or indirectly," the passage or defeat of legislation to register with the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate.

Many lobbyists registered twice or more during the Act's 10-year life, usually each time for a different organization. The total registrations reached 4,382 through the 1956 adjournment, but this total represented only 3,273 lobbyists because of the duplications. The law does not require withdrawals from the registration lists when a lobbyist stops working for an organization.

The breakdown by category of the 3,273 lobbyists: individuals, 2,794; law and public relations firms, 147; organizations, 332.

The 315 registrations added in 1956 to the lobby rolls represented 191 new registrants: individuals, 131; law and public relations firms, 19; organizations, 41. The one-year high for registrations was 731 in 1947, the first full year of the Act's operation, while the low was 204 in 1952. (See accompanying registration chart.)

Lobbyists' Interests

Lobbyists' wages and expenses varied as widely as their interests during the second session of Congress.

Robert M. Burr, registered for the National Electrical Manufacturers Assn., listed his salary and expenses as $30,000 annually. John A. Reynolds of the Western Cotton Growers said he would receive $24,000 in compensation and expenses. Many lobbyists said on their registration forms that they worked for no compensation.

The company working for the most lobby groups in 1956 was the law firm of Covington & Burling of Washington, D.C. It had 15 registrations in 1956. Former Secretary of State Dean Acheson and U.S. Chamber of Commerce Treasurer Joel Barlow are among its attorneys.

The group employing the most lobbyists was the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen (Ind.), with seven registered for 1956. The Brotherhood was interested in passage of bills to amend the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937 by increasing pension benefits. Congress July 23 passed a bill to provide an increase in benefits estimated at $10 a month. (See p. 602)

Registration Totals

The Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act of 1946 requires the registration of all persons attempting to influence federal legislation. The year-by-year picture of total registrations since the law was enacted:

YEAR	REGISTRATIONS	YEAR	REGISTRATIONS
1946*	222	1951	342
1947	731	1952	204
1948	447	1953	296
1949	599	1954	413
1950	430	1955	383
		1956	315
TOTAL			4,382

*Last four months only.
From Jan. 1 through July 27.

A spokesman for the group said it had "difficulty in getting hearings going" on increased pensions. He said the high number of registrations was due to bringing state representatives of the union to Washington to talk to legislators from their home state. He said this was an "effective lobbying technique."

Congressmen Lobbyists

Seven ex-Congressmen were employed as lobbyists in 1956 to attempt to influence legislation. Registrations showed the ex-lawmakers and their employers included:

Ex-Rep. Alfred J. Elliott (D Calif., 1937-49), County of Tulare, Visilia, Calif.; ex-Rep. J. Hardin Peterson (D Fla., 1933-51), Peoples Lobby Inc., Washington, D.C.; ex-Sen. James P. Kem (R Mo., 1947-53), Washington Gas Light Co., Washington, D.C.

Former Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (D Ill., 1939-51) filed for the State Loan & Finance Corp. of Washington, D.C., Republic of Panama, Panama City, Panama and the Bicycle Manufacturing Assn. of America of New York, N.Y.; ex-Sen. Francis J. Myers (D Pa., House 1939-45, Senate 1945-51) filed for Transamerica of San Francisco, Calif. Myers died July 5.

Ex-Sen. Burton K. Wheeler (D Mont., 1923-47) filed for the Montana Power Co., Butte, Mont., Pacific power & Light Co., Portland, Ore. and the Washington Water Power Co., Spokane, Wash. Ex-Rep. Harry L. Towe (R N.J., 1943-51) filed for Associated Railroads of New Jersey, Pennsylvania Station New York, N.Y.

Perhaps 1956's most unique lobby registration was that of Michael P. Egan, "philosopher and philosophical consultant" of Warrensville, Ill. Egan said his legislative interest was "to serve as lobbyist in the public interest, promoting the general welfare of the U.S. and its citizens."

Registrations by Lobbyists

According to official records, 383 persons and organizations filed lobby registrations in 1955 and 315 registered between Jan. 1, 1956 and July 27, 1956, the date on which the 84th Congress adjourned.

The 329 who registered between Jan. 1 and Aug. 2, 1955, when the first session adjourned, are listed in the 1955 Almanac, p. 683. Between Aug. 3 and Dec. 31, 1955, an additional 54 registered, bringing the 1955 total to 383.

CONGRESSIONAL SPENDING FOR PROBES SETS RECORD

The 84th Congress set aside a record $11,321,849.27 for investigations and studies by Senate and House committees. Of this amount, $10,799,205.27 was "new" money; $522,644 was Senate "carryover" funds -- money authorized for probes but unspent by the 83rd Congress. By comparison, the 83rd Congress had $7,606,973 in new money and $568,421 in carryover funds, the previous high. (See chart, p. 701)

About $6 out of every $10 authorized for inquiries during the 84th Congress was earmarked for Senate committees. The breakdown was $4,510,199.89 for the House and $6,289,005.38 for the Senate in new funds, plus the half-million dollar carryover figure in the Senate. All House probe authorizations called for expenditure of new money.

The Senate Judiciary Committee had the largest investigation authorization -- $1,932,338.69 in new money plus $135,464 in carryover funds. Second place on the Senate side went to the Appropriations Committee with $800,000 authorized, and third place was held by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee with $479,166.67 in new money plus $60,564 in carryover funds. In the House, the Appropriations Committee was authorized $1 million, the Government Operations Committee $995,000 and the Un-American Activities Committee $500,000. Appropriations Committee authorizations were for fiscal 1956-57, not for the two-year span of the 84th Congress.

Each Senate standing committee and the Small Business Committee has automatic authority to spend up to $10,000 for probes during each Congress. Spending in excess of $10,000 must be authorized by special resolution. Unlike the Senate the House has no automatic spending authority for investigations, and funds must be authorized by special resolution.

Two exceptions are the Senate and House Appropriations Committees. Funds listed for each were earmarked in Legislative Appropriation bills for fiscal 1955 and 1956. In addition, select committees in both chambers must get authority in the form of special resolutions to undertake a probe as well as money to finance it.

Probe Spending

Of the $11.3 million available for investigations in the 84th Congress, more than $6 million remained to be spent during the last half of 1956. According to reports filed with the Secretary of the Senate, Senate committees had spent $3,150,128.84 of their probe funds as of June 30. House committees reported spending $2,121,362.26.

Committees are required by the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 to report their investigation expenditures semi-annually. Spending figures for joint committees are not reported. Figures from reports covering the period from Jan. 1, 1955, to June 30, 1956, are totaled below:

JOINT COMMITTEES

Five joint committees with essentially investigative functions were allotted $906,049 by the 84th Congress. The money was set aside in the Legislative Appropriation Acts for fiscal 1956 and 1957 and the Defense Production Act amendments of 1955 and 1956. Money allotted to the five committees to cover all committee expenses:

Committee	84th Congress	83rd Congress
Defense Production	$130,000	$100,000
Economic Report	271,049*	254,050
Immigration and Nationality Policy	40,000	40,000
Internal Revenue Taxation	420,000	392,000
Reduction of Non-essential Federal Expenditures	45,000	40,000
Total	$906,049	$826,050

*Includes $10,914 contained in the Second Supplemental Appropriation bill for fiscal 1956.

In addition the 84th Congress set aside $480,835 for all expenses of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee during fiscal 1956 and fiscal 1957. This committee handles legislation as well as investigative work, and no breakdown is available on what portion of its funds went for probes.

Major Probes

The most prominent investigations conducted during the second session of the 84th Congress were those connected with the alleged attempt to influence the vote of Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) on the natural gas bill. A select committee headed by Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga.) held hearings in February and March, issued its report April 7. A special committee headed by Sen. John L. McClellan (D Ark.) began hearings May 1 on "attempts to influence improperly or illegally the Senate or any Member thereof or a candidate therefor, or any office or employee of the executive branch of the government, through campaign contributions, political activities, lobbying or any and all other activities or practices." The special committee had until Jan. 31, 1957, to file its report.

As in 1955, Communism and subversion, military programs and business were favorite subjects for Congressional investigation in 1956. The following list includes major investigations undertaken since Aug. 22, 1955. (For 1955 probes, 1955 Almanac, p. 496)

Each inquiry is listed by subject under the committee and subcommittee that conducted it. The list shows when hearings started and concluded and cites official committee reports where applicable.

Only investigations in which committee hearings were held are listed. Staff studies which did not reach the hearings stage are omitted. The number of hearings held during an investigation does not necessarily indicate the scope of the inquiry. A one-day hearing may have been the result of weeks or months of preliminary staff work. (For CQ's definition of an investigation, see box).

No investigations were listed for the House and Senate Appropriations Committees, whose staffs conduct continuing studies on appropriations, operations of executive departments and disposition of government funds.

Fact-finding for possible special and remedial legislation.
Fulfillment of Congress' function as "watchdog" over operation of the government and its programs.
Informing the public.
Resolving questions concerning membership or procedure, such as conduct of elections or fitness of Members of Congress.

Footnotes

 New money. In addition, $568,421 was available in Senate carryover funds, thereby providing the 83rd Congress with a grand total of $8,175,394 for probes.*

 In addition, the Senate Feb. 8, 1956, authorized eight committees to make expenditures at the recent monthly rate until new fund resolutions, then pending, were acted on by the Senate. Amounts so authorized are not available.*

† Committee no longer in existence.

Totals for Senate committees include (1) funds authorized for probes by special resolution, (2) the $10,000 fixed authorization for probes granted each standing committee and the Small Business Committee under Section 134(a) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, and (3) carryover funds authorized but unspent by the 83rd Congress.

All money for House committees was set aside by special resolution. Funds listed for the Senate and House Appropriations Committees are earmarked, on a fiscal-year basis, in legislative appropriations bills. Joint committees receive their funds in a similar manner.

CAMPAIGN SPENDING SURVEY

The Privileges and Elections Subcommittee of the Senate Rules and Administration Committee in 1956 began its semiannual probe of campaign contributions and expenditures after two special committees investigated the revelation by Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) that an oil company lobbyist had attempted to influence his vote on the natural gas bill with a $2,500 campaign contribution. (See story, p. 469)

For reports of political contributions in 1955, see p. 705.

Subcommittee Chairman Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (D Mo.) resigned from the Subcommittee Feb. 13 and Albert Gore (D Tenn.) moved up to the chairmanship. Sen. Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) was named to fill the vacancy. Hennings said he resigned because the third Subcommittee Member, Carl T. Curtis (R Neb.), upheld by a majority of the Rules Committee, objected to Hennings conducting campaign investigations when he was up for re-election.

Gore Sept. 1 said the Subcommittee would make a "thorough scrutiny" of Presidential and Senatorial campaign fund raising and spending while the campaigns were in progress rather than after the elections.

Gore said the inquiry would be aimed at "honest public reporting" of election finances and practices and laying the groundwork for new laws. His ultimate goal, he said, was "to free federal elections from private subsidy." Gore said he hoped the investigation would not "discourage legitimate contributions."

HEARINGS -- Began Sept. 10 and continued intermittently throughout the rest of the year.

TESTIMONY -- Sept. 10 -- Democratic National Chairman Paul M. Butler said campaign spending should be limited "to make impossible the control of elections merely through expenditures of money." The Democrats would not be able to spend as much money as the GOP in 1956, he said, because "we have not been and will not be able to raise as much." He advocated free radio and television time for candidates in the campaign. Butler said the Democrats had $35,655.54 in the bank and unpaid bills of $49,000.

Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall opposed radio-television subsidies because they might start a chain "that would lead to the destruction of the two-party system." Hall said the GOP was trying to "broaden the base of financial support." The GOP had $646,625.22 in the bank as of Sept. 1, he said.

Prof. Alexander Heard of the University of North Carolina said his research showed that in 1952 about $140 million was spent in political campaigning "at all levels of government." He estimated 1956 campaign spending at $175 million.

Jack Kroll and James L. McDevitt, co-directors of the AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education (COPE), said they had $107,605 in COPE's "voluntary independent fund" for political contributions and $117,754 in its "educational fund." Money in the two funds was never mixed, they said.

Sept. 11 -- Network officials reported that more than $2 million worth of radio-television time already had been booked by the Republican and Democratic National Committees for the 1956 campaign. Each Committee had pledged a little over $1 million, they said, with the bulk of the money going for television time. The witnesses estimated their combined losses in covering the national political conventions were above $2.5 million. Testifying were: Joseph A. McDonald, National Broadcasting Co.; Richard S. Salant, Columbia Broadcasting System; and Ernest Lee Jahncke Jr., American Broadcasting Co.

In letters to the Committee, Sens. George A. Smathers (D Fla.) and Andrew F. Schoeppel (R Kan.), chairmen of the Democratic and Republican Senatorial Campaign Committees, reported they had bank balances of $26,541 and $692,439, respectively, as of Sept. 1. The Democrats said they raised another $35,000 with a special dinner honoring retiring Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga.).

Sept. 12 -- Gore, after a closed session, announced the Subcommittee had denied a request by former Sen. Glen H. Taylor (D Idaho, 1944-50) for a recount on the Idaho Democratic Senatorial primary. The contest was won by Frank Church by a 200-vote margin. The Subcommittee also asked Nevada Republican State Central Committee Chairman Emery W. Graunke to supply sworn affidavits to back his complaint that the winner of the Democratic Senatorial primary, Sen. Alan Bible, had spent in "excess of $100,000." The Subcommittee took no action on a request by Sen. Curtis that New York Gov. Averell Harriman be called to testify on his expenses as a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

INDIRECT CONTRIBUTIONS DESCRIBED

Oct. 8 -- Prof. Heard, describing his extensive investigation of campaign costs, said although direct campaign contributions from corporations and unions were banned, large amounts of money were made available indirectly from those sources. He said "various techniques" were used, including buying of large blocs of tickets to campaign fund dinners, providing stamps and free printing, furnishing free office space and equipment and providing "free rides" on airplanes. He produced charts showing that most of the 1952 contributions ranging from $500 to more than $10,000 went to Republicans except for funds reported by labor groups. (See p. 704)

Robert R. Nathan of Americans for Democratic Action urged a change in the law to require that the radio-television industry "make a reasonable amount of free time available to candidates of the major parties" because the "tens of millions of dollars paid to the radio-television industry for...campaigning is an unconscionable and indefensible levy on the American voter."

Chairman Gore said a staff tabulation showed that Republicans had spent $411,651 to date and had contracted for an additional $1,489,668 of radio-television time while the Democrats spent $384,617 and contracted for additional time costing $690,026.

Sen. Curtis said dues collected from labor union members "in order to hold their jobs" were being spent on political campaigns "in violation of the law."

Oct. 9 -- Walter Reuther, AFL-CIO vice president and UAW president, said all contributions to candidates from the UAW and from the AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education came from "the voluntary contributions of union members and other individuals, not out of moneys collected through regular union dues or assessments." He reported that through Sept. 30, the UAW had received from its locals $145,152.17 from $1 contributions which he said totaled $194,070.97. He said the remaining $48,918.80 was kept by local unions or sent to state and county councils. He said donations from his union's members totaled "considerably less than the contributions made to the Republican party...in 1952" by the Pews, the Rockefellers, the Mellons and the DuPonts. He said their political gifts aggregated $259,275 in the 1952 campaign.

Oct. 10 -- Asst. Attorney General Warren Olney III said the Justice Department was investigating a complaint from Chicago alleging both state and national banks in that city had made substantial contributions "for a political purpose."

Olney said thousands of qualified Negro citizens in Louisiana were being denied their legal right to vote in the current election because white citizens councils took them off the official election lists.

Attorney General Herbert Brownell had asked Congress for legislation to allow federal court injunctions to protect the rights of voters in such cases, but such legislation, passed by the House, was "bottled up in the Senate Judiciary Committee." (See p. 458)

Democratic National Chairman Paul M. Butler said the Republicans were exerting "tremendous pressure" on business to collect campaign funds in 1956. Butler cited a letter he said William F. Keady, president of Fibre-Board Products Inc., San Francisco, had written to his employees Aug. 6. Butler said "he not only reminds them they have 'an economic reason' for contributing to the Republican party, but...asks them to send him a memorandum of how much they contribute."

Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall said, "We feel that when a party has the respect of the people they can get the money."

REPORT RELEASED

The Subcommittee Nov. 2 released an interim report on campaign contributions and expenditures.

The statistics were based on questionnaires filed with the Subcommittee and on reports filed with the Clerk of the House. The Subcommittee did not request information from organizations working for House candidates.

"Since it was obviously impossible to ascertain, identify and canvass all political committees...formed everywhere on behalf of Presidential, Vice Presidential and Senatorial candidates of both parties," the report said, "the study has been confined to the national committees which are required to file reports with the Clerk of the House, and to the state central, executive and finance committees" and to organizations in counties where the population was 500,000 or more, according to the 1950 census.

"Accordingly," the report said, "although the figures ...indicate a total aggregate amount for both parties in excess of $11 million, this is only a fractional part of the total cost of the elections of 1956."

The Subcommittee's figures showed the Republican party received $10,134,000 in campaign contributions from Sept. 1, 1956, through Oct. 21, 1956, while the Democrats received $3,750,000. The Subcommittee emphasized these totals were not accurate because amounts often were counted more than once when they were transferred from one committee to another. The Subcommittee said the total party spending figures for the Sept. 1-Oct. 21 period were more significant because there was no duplication. Those spending figures: Republicans, $5,743,000; Democrats, $3,071,000; Labor, $216,000.

In its report the Subcommittee proposed a limit on the amount of funds one person could contribute, better publicity on contributions made and rewording of the law governing free time for political candidates.

It gave these figures for funds received and spent by Senate candidates, according to reports filed with the Secretary of the Senate by Oct. 24, 1956:

1952 Campaign Contributors

Hugh Roy Cullen, Houston, Texas, oil millionaire, was listed as the biggest 1952 political campaign contributor by a political scientist who testified before the Senate subcommittee investigating campaign finances. Cullen put up $53,000 in 1952 -- $39,000 for Republicans and another $14,000 split among five Democratic candidates, according to a check of contributions made by Alexander Heard, political science professor at the University of North Carolina.

Heard gave the Subcommittee a list of 109 campaign contributions of $10,000 or more. He said the list may not be complete because official reports from which it was compiled are not always accurate. He said the large contributors supplied $1,892,869, of which $1,192,614 went to Republicans and $700,255 to Democrats.

Second on the list were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Newton Pew Jr. of Philadelphia, who gave $45,570 to the Republicans. Several large contributors split their gifts among the parties. Publisher Henry R. Luce and his wife, Clare Boothe Luce, Ambassador to Italy, were listed for $28,000 to Republicans and $500 to Democratic Sen. Symington of Missouri. CQ Fact Sheet On 1955 Contributions

1955 POLITICAL SPENDING REVIEWED

The Federal Corrupt Practices Act of 1925 requires political committees and organizations to file with the Clerk of the House periodic reports on contributions received and expenditures made during each calendar year.

Forty-five organizations filed reports with the Clerk of the House that in 1955 they spent $4,323,394.55 for general political activity. The groups also reported receipts totaling $4,965,707.40.

Following is a list of the groups, divided into four sections: those identified with the Republican Party; those which worked for the Democratic Party; labor organizations; miscellaneous organizations.

The figures for receipts are followed by (c) when these figures are total contributions. An (r) represents total receipts (including contributions and other receipts).

For cases in which an organization did not file reports covering all of 1955, figures in parentheses indicate the quarters reported.

Republican Groups

Fifteen Republican groups reported 1955 spending of $2,446,162.17, or 57 percent of the total spending reported. Receipts of the GOP groups came to $2,728,191.70.

The New York State Salute to Eisenhower organization received a loan of $10,000 from the United Republican Finance Committee of the State of New York, repaid during the calendar year. This was not included in the totals of expenditures and receipts.

The Salute Dinner Television Committee (Eisenhower) of New York City had been in existence only since October, 1955, therefore submitted only one quarterly report.

Donations of $1,000 or More

Following is a state list of individuals and organizations contributing $1,000 or more to political committees in 1955.

This information was obtained from reports of 45 political committees filed with the Clerk of the House. Only 17 committees, however, reported receipts of $1,000 or more from individuals as well as organizations. These 17 groups are identified in parentheses after each contribution, according to the key. (See box below)

The Hatch Act makes it illegal for one person to give more than $5,000 to one group or individual, but permits him to give that amount to any number of different groups. Family members are regarded individually under the law.

Contributors represented all states but Nevada; also, the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

Some Congressmen and Senators may be found under the District of Columbia.

ECONOMIC REPORT

The Joint Senate-House Committee on the Economic Report held public hearings in February, 1956, on President Eisenhower's Jan. 24 Economic Report to Congress. In it the President predicted "high levels of production, employment and income will be broadly sustained" in 1956 though expansion would be "tamer." (See p. 69)

The Committee, chaired by Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.), departed from its 1955 practice of having panel discussions on the Report, and instead heard individual witnesses. (1955 Almanac, p. 507)

On March 1 the Joint Committee released a report (S Rept 1606) based on the hearings. The majority found it "unlikely" that the 1955 rate of economic expansion could be maintained in 1956. They said the "challenge" for 1956 was "one of adjusting to a more sustainable pattern of balanced growth."

A general dissent was registered by Sen. Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah). Supplemental views were added by several Democrats and Republicans.

Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Joint Committee on the Economic Report.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 30 - Feb. 28, 1956.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 30 -- Dr. Arthur F. Burns, Chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, testified at a closed session.

Jan. 31 -- Robert R. Nathan, Washington economic consultant who served under Democratic administrations, said there was a "basic inconsistency" between the economic assumptions of the budget and the Economic Report. Whereas the report forecast rising output and income in 1956, the budget was based on assumptions by which unemployment would rise to the four-million mark by the end of the year, he said. "If the budget estimates of receipts fully reflect the Administration's economic expectations," Nathan said, "then there must be serious concern about the economic outlook. On the other hand if the views expressed in the Economic Report properly reflect the views of the Administration, then the estimates of receipts are understated."

Nathan agreed with the President's recommendation "that an early reduction of taxes cannot be justified." His reasons were that "too many essential government services are sadly inadequate," such as schools, housing, roads and health. Nathan endorsed the President's request for stand-by authority to impose consumer credit controls, though he said they would "very likely not be needed in 1956." He said consumer credit was "tremendously over expanded" in 1955, but added it would not "exert as strong a stimulating force in 1956 as it did in 1955."

Nathan also urged tax relief for lower income groups, with revenue losses made up by eliminating dividend credits and by "closing some of the many loopholes" in the tax laws.

Feb. 1 -- Douglas said the President's budget message assumed the nation's economy in the year ahead was going to level off at the point reached in the last three months of 1955. That would mean rising unemployment because of normal growth in population and increasing productivity, he said. The Budget Bureau had become "a prophet of doom and gloom," Douglas said.

Budget Director Rowland R. Hughes disputed the suggestion, saying that in making up the budget "we have to be on more firm ground than in estimating economic trends."

Feb. 2 -- Gerhard Colm of the National Planning Assn. said he expected both spending and revenue to be larger in fiscal 1957 than indicated in the budget. He agreed with Douglas, however, that if the economic assumptions upon which Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey said the budget was based were correct, unemployment would grow to about five million by the end of 1956.

NO TAX CUTS

Feb. 3 -- Secretary Humphrey said he was opposed to standby consumer credit controls, although the President's Economic Report had recommended they be studied. He also said there was no room for a tax cut in current budget estimates, and it "would be the height of folly to give a tax reduction out of borrowed money." He opposed a graduated corporate tax rate aimed at helping small business, but said the Treasury Department was "very interested to study" a proposal to reverse the normal and surtax rates for corporations (30 percent and 22 percent, respectively). He said the decline in farm prices was "undesirable" but not "alarming."

Feb. 6 -- Randolph E. Paul, a Treasury Department tax expert under the Roosevelt Administration, criticized the President's program for failing to do enough in the spheres of welfare and economic development. He agreed with the Economic Report that taxes should not be cut, but for economic rather than budgetary reasons. He called the current tax structure "inequitable" and said the tax base had been "eroded" by special provisions.

Feb. 7 -- Chairman William McChesney Martin Jr. of the Federal Reserve Board said the Board agreed with the President's request for a study of standby controls. "The Board does not seek such authority," he said, "but if it were to be enacted, the Board would prefer that it be made a part of the basic Federal Reserve Act, to be used as and when economic circumstances require."

Feb. 8 -- Marriner S. Eccles, former Federal Reserve Board Chairman, said that with population growth and technological advances, "We must have an increase in gross national product at stable prices of 3 to 4 percent per year to maintain employment." He recommended that the Federal Reserve Board be given authority to "encourage or curtail the expansion of housing mortgage credit and consumer installment credit." He also urged a study of "the entire private and public structure of banking" and legislative action to "create a banking and finance structure adequate to perform all of the financial and credit requirements" of the economy.

FARM PROGRAM

Feb. 9 -- President Murray D. Lincoln of the Cooperative League of the U.S.A. said "we need desperately" to reverse current and proposed farm programs, which were based, he said, on "scarcity devices." Lincoln recommended: an insurance program to protect farmers against crop losses; investigation into the spread between prices paid to farmers and those charged to consumers for farm products; creation of a new government agency to "promote and assist in the financing and setting up of cooperatives;" government subsidy for new industries that would consume farm products; domestic and international food stamp plans; incentive payments to encourage wheat growers to shift to production of other crops; and immediate withdrawal from production of "the millions of acres of government-owned lands now leased to farmers and stockmen."

Feb. 14 -- Former Secretary of Interior Oscar L. Chapman said "national power policy and resource development has been and is being reversed" by the Eisenhower Administration by "a system of nullification, indirection and obfuscation." He said reclamation "would be in liquidation if the Congress had not insisted on carrying through some going construction projects and proceeding with some additional ones the Administration did not want." The average annual budget for the Army Engineers' flood control program was about $54 million less under the Eisenhower Administration than it had been for the preceding eight years, he said.

LOWER TAXES

Feb. 15 -- Ralph W. Robey of the National Assn. of Manufacturers said NAM was "frankly disappointed" the Administration recommended postponement of the April 1 reduction in corporate tax rates. He urged a gradual reduction of both individual and corporate tax rates to a maximum of 35 percent.

Emerson P. Schmidt of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. recommended fiscal 1957 tax cuts of $1.7 billion in individual taxes, $800 million in corporate taxes and $500 million in excise taxes.

Stanley H. Ruttenberg of the AFL-CIO recommended individual income tax cuts with special emphasis on low and middle income families.

Charles B. Shuman, American Farm Bureau Federation president, backed President Eisenhower's policy of putting national debt reduction before tax cuts. He recommended reducing or eliminating excise taxes that boosted agricultural marketing costs.

Herschel D. Newsom of the National Grange said a program was needed to support the income of farmers, not to support the price levels of their products.

J. D. Zellerbach of the Committee for Economic Development said the Economic Report expressed "a sound and constructive philosophy about the role of government in our predominantly privately managed economy." He listed four "problem areas" affecting economic growth: population increases, national security requirements, need for "a substantial foreign aid program for as many years ahead as we can now see," and technological advances.

POWER AND WATER

Feb. 17 -- Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay said the Eisenhower Administration "has sought to curtail governmental activities that could be handled as well or better by private enterprise." He said the policy of encouraging local interests to assume their "fair share" of power development had a "concrete result" in increased authorizations for non-federal power development from "less than 1,200,000 kilowatts in 1951 to more than 5,400,000 kilowatts in both 1954 and 1955."

McKay said Administration policy in the field of water resources was to "encourage state and local responsibility and private enterprise...avoid greater demands for federal investment than our national income will permit and...support the federal government's proper participation in developing" water resources.

FARM SURPLUSES

Feb. 28 -- Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson said government-owned surplus stocks, currently valued at $8.7 billion, "reduced farm income in 1955 by the staggering sum of more than $2 billion." For each bushel of surplus crops sold out of stored stocks, "approximately one and a half bushels have replaced it," Benson said. "Mandatory 90 percent parity piles up surpluses which then depress farm prices and farm incomes." He said the wheat carryover, by the marketing year's end, would exceed 1 billion bushels -- more than a year's crop; the cotton carryover, a "new high" of over 14 billion bales; corn, more than 1 billion bushels. Rice stocks, he said, were at "record levels, and increasing."

Committee Report

The Joint Committee March 1 issued its report (S Rept 1606) on the President's Economic Report. A majority of the Committee (Sen. Watkins dissenting) said:

"1955 was clearly a good year and in most respects a record one" but "it seems unlikely that this rate of expansion can be maintained in 1956.

"The challenge for the coming year is thus one of adjusting to a more sustainable pattern of balanced growth.

"Events of the past year further substantiate the likelihood that the struggle against Communist ideology throughout the world is developing into a long drawn-out test of economic strength.

"The Committee...endorses the President's recommendation for maintaining corporation income tax and excise tax revenues at present levels.

"The Committee is alarmed by the continued decline in farm prices and agricultural income.... In the face of the...decline, we must accept the...'soil bank' as a desirable aid in helping avoid further additions to our already large surpluses (and), as a temporary expedient, strong price supports.

"A comprehensive program is needed for dealing with excessive unemployment in economically depressed industrial areas.

"The United States should...approve the agreement calling for participation in the Organization for Trade Cooperation.

"We agree with the President that present conditions do not call for the use of governmental authority to limit terms of consumer installment credit.... However... unless private enterprise exercises self-discipline...it may be necessary to reestablish standby federal authority in order to protect the overall economy against needless fluctuations in employment. We agree...with the suggestion that power to regulate terms of consumer installment credit be restudied (in conjunction with) government, corporate, and private debt as a whole.

"We especially commend as a minimum program the President's recommendations for strengthening federal antitrust policy.

"We recommend that more vigorous efforts be made in the future to assure the coordination of the assumptions underlying the various parts of the budget, and of the budget with the Economic Report."

DISSENTING VIEWS

In his dissenting statement, Watkins said:

His decision to dissent was based on "the partisan nature of the 1956 hearings" and on the majority findings which were "couched...in verbiage...to minimize the economy's progress in 1955" and "unsupported by economic evidence" at the hearings or in staff documentation.

Agriculture "is not on the rocks." Its "basic soundness" is proved by the small number of 1955 bankruptcy cases involving farmers -- .6 percent. "If the soil bank proposal is to be effective...certain changes (must) be made in the conditions of eligibility for assistance under the price support program and the agricultural conservation program.... It is sheer nonsense and a waste of public funds to pay out money to increase production and then not to require participation in an acreage reserve program..."

AL SARENA MINES

Investigation of the grant of Oregon national forest land as mining claims to the Al Sarena Mines, Inc., of Mobile, Ala., and Trail, Ore., provoked a full-scale political battle during 1956. Republicans said the probe was an attempt to smear the Administration with a "give-away" charge. Democrats countered that the Interior Department's action in granting the land patents was the result of political pressure and set a "dangerous precedent." They said the mining company secured the patents solely to gain timberland and not for mining.

Under Secretary of the Interior Clarence A. Davis, who granted the patents in 1954 when he was the Department's solicitor, said he merely was complying with the mining law of 1872, which gave locators of mining claims on public lands the right to all surface resources on the claims. He defended the mining company's decision to cut trees instead of to mine ore as "normal."

Following joint Congressional hearings, sharply worded reports were issued by both the Democratic majority and the Republican minority. The majority recommended an investigation of the case by the Attorney General and cancellation of the company's patents; said Al Sarena had not mined "one cupful of ore" since it got the Rogue River national forest land for $2,375 but had cut more than 2 million boardfeet of timber. The minority said there was no evidence of any improper action, that the case had been "adroitly manipulated into a give-away cause celebre."

The Committee's report was forwarded in July to the Department of Justice, where it was referred to the Lands Division.

Background

In 1948 Al Sarena Mines, Inc., applied for 23 land patents in the Rogue River National Forest in southern Oregon. Mineral tests were made by the Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management and the Agriculture Department's Forest Service. They said the mineral content did not justify the land transfer, recommended that the claims be denied.

In 1950 the Forest Service filed a protest against 15 of the 23 claims. In 1951 the Bureau of Land Management ruled against Al Sarena's claims and the company appealed to Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman (D), who took no action.

In 1953 the mine's owners, Charles R. McDonald and Dr. Herbert P. McDonald Jr., asked Rep. Harris Ellsworth (R Ore.) to intercede in their behalf. Interior Under Secretary Davis, then department solicitor, ordered the Bureau of Mines to take new ore samples. He directed that they be assayed by an assayer acceptable to the company as well as the Bureau. Testimony at hearings disclosed that Al Sarena rejected three suggested western assayers, chose the A.W. Williams Inspection Co. of Mobile, Ala., with which it had done business previously.

Davis received the Williams company's report, showing mineral values higher than in earlier reports, Dec. 24, 1953. He approved the patents Jan. 6, 1954. Democratic opponents of his action criticized his "haste", said he did not even wait for a written report from the government engineer, Richard N. Appling Jr., who took samples of minerals on the claims. They also said no notice was given to the contestant Forest Service of "a procedure without precedent in the administration of our public lands."

Sen. W. Kerr Scott (D N.C.) Dec. 11, 1955, said the Interior and Insular Affairs Legislative Oversight Subcommittee would hold hearings in Washington "to determine why, and upon whose orders, good judgment and normal procedures were thrown out the window in order to bestow upon the Al Sarena Mines corporation of Oregon one half million dollars worth of public property." Scott said there was a "frantic scheme" to give public timber to the firm. The Subcommittee had held a preliminary hearing in Portland, Ore., Nov. 25.

Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Senate Interior and Insular Affairs, Legislative Oversight Subcommittee and House Government Operations, Public Works and Resources Subcommittee, sitting together.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 10-31, 1956, on whether Al Sarena Mines, Inc., of Mobile, Ala., and Trail, Ore., conspired with government officials to obtain public timber rights in Rogue River National Forest, Ore., under the guise of mining the land.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 10 -- Commissioner A.J. Walsh of the General Services Administration's Emergency Procurement Service said in a letter that the firm which tested mineral content of the land for Al Sarena, A.W. Williams Inspection Co. of Mobile, had made "many" inaccurate assay reports in the past for the government.

M.E. Volin, former Bureau of Mines official, said he told Richard N. Appling Jr., a Bureau of Mines engineer at Grants Pass, Ore., to store ore samples for the government from the forest so the samples could be double-checked.

Jan. 11 -- Appling said he helped throw the government samples in the Rogue River without testing them after he learned other samples had reached the Williams Co. Volin said Under Secretary of Interior Clarence A. Davis had told him to send the company's ore samples to a laboratory "mutually acceptable" to Al Sarena for testing.

Jan. 17 -- Appling produced his Jan. 2, 1954, letter which had accompanied the private laboratory report on the Al Sarena claims. The letter indicated Under Secretary Davis knew the gist of Appling's report before granting Al Sarena mining rights.

Sen. Scott, who Jan. 12 charged Davis with approving the claim before reading the report, said Appling's letter would be turned over to the FBI to determine "how much it's been doctored, if any."

Jan. 18 -- Forest Service Chief Richard E. McArdle and E.F. Mynatt, legal adviser to the Forest Service, said it was not customary for the Bureau of Mines to be asked to sample mineral deposits on disputed mining claims. Such cases were usually referred back to the Bureau of Land Management, Mynatt said.

TIMBER CUTS

Jan. 19 -- McArdle said Secretary of Interior Douglas McKay had the right to grant 15 mining patents to Al Sarena Mines over the objections of the Forest Service. He said the company had cut 962,000 board feet of timber from the contested claims as of Nov. 21, 1955, and another 1,658,000 board feet from eight claims whose patent was not disputed by the Forest Service.

McArdle said the Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management had agreed it was questionable whether there was a sufficient showing of mineral content on the 15 claims to justify the patent.

Jan. 26 -- Under Secretary of Interior Davis said the Sarena owners had protested they were not getting fair treatment from the Interior Department in the processing of the patents which were applied for in 1948 and still pending when he became solicitor in 1953. He said he considered it a "fair thing" to refer the assay "to someone in whom they had confidence." He ordered the Bureau of Mines to get together with Al Sarena and decide on an assayer "acceptable" to both. The assayer selected was the A.W. Williams Co. of Mobile, Ala. Davis said he had received a duplicate copy of the assay report and had verified it with the field representative of the Bureau of Mines before deciding to grant the patents. Neither President Eisenhower nor Secretary McKay had influenced his decision, he said.

Jan. 31 -- Davis said he was only complying with the law in granting the Al Sarena patents and defended as "normal" the company's decision to cut trees rather than dig gold on the land.

Chairman Scott said Davis was under pressure from Congressmen while weighing his decision. He said that was a "shabby and shoddy way for government to operate."

OWNERS DECLINE TO TESTIFY

ACTION -- The Committees Feb. 7 voted unanimously to end the inquiry into the mining patents. Scott said the action was taken after principal officers of Al Sarena, Charles and Herbert McDonald, said they did not wish to testify. Scott said Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay "apparently" did not wish to testify either:

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Feb. 8 -- Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) said the Al Sarena case dictated the need for a "new regime" in the Department of Interior. The Department "cavalierly shunted aside" the judgment of the Forest Service in granting Al Sarena mining rights, he said, to enable the company to obtain "timber virtually for nothing under the guise of so-called mining claims." Neuberger Feb. 10 said Secretary McKay should ask Al Sarena to "stop cutting fir trees and pine trees" on its Oregon holdings and operate a mine there. If the company does not comply, Neuberger said, McKay should "bring suit in federal court to recover these claims for the government."

Committee Reports

The House Public Works and Resources Subcommittee June 7, by a party-line vote, approved a report (H Rept 2408) on the Al Sarena investigation. The report was released June 20.

The Democratic majority called granting of licenses to Al Sarena by the Interior Department "a procedure without precedent," declaring the firm "has not mined one cupful of ore" from 475 acres but "has cut more than two million board feet of timber from this former national forest land." The licenses were granted Feb. 15, 1954.

The Subcommittee majority recommended that the Attorney General investigate the case and cancel the licenses "in order to protect the interests of the United States." The majority said Al Sarena's efforts to mine the forest under former Secretary of Interior Chapman failed, but that Under Secretary of Interior Davis and Rep. Ellsworth "worked out a novel procedure for reappraisal of the company's claims outside of the record previously made under normal administrative procedures."

Republican Subcommittee members said that under long-standing law a profitable mining operation was not required when a license was granted and "thousands of mining claims have been lawfully patented with absolutely no history of production." They said Al Sarena had done $100,000 to $200,000 worth of "building toward a mining enterprise." They said the only value officially attached to the timber sold was $77,000 but that the Democrats have used "political quotations of value" ranging from $185,000 to $500,000. "There is no evidence in the record of any improper action or any effort to use pressure, political or otherwise, on department officials by either Congressmen or Senators," the Republican minority said.

PUBLIC POWER REPORTS

Two reports based on 1955 hearings on public power regulations were issued in 1956 by the House Government Operations Committee's Public Works and Resources Subcommittee (H Repts 1975, 2279). The Democratic majority dealt harshly with the Administration's public power policy in both reports, with special criticism of Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay, Under Secretary Clarence A. Davis, and Assistant Secretary Fred G. Aandahl.

Background

The 1955 hearings of the Public Works and Resources Subcommittee covered an Interior Department regulation allegedly based on a memorandum prepared by a private utility company, and a proposed government contract with a Georgia utility that was ruled illegal by the Justice Department. (1955 Almanac, p. 523) Subcommittee Chairman Earl Chudoff (D Pa.) said the Administration was guilty of a "shocking and sordid" giveaway of power resources. Interior representatives said the charges were "completely unjustified."

Members of the Subcommittee were: Chairman Chudoff, Robert E. Jones (D Ala.), John E. Moss Jr. (D Calif.), Dante B. Fascell (D Fla.), Robert H. Mollohan (D W.Va.), Victor A. Knox (R Mich.), Charles R. Jonas (R N.C.) and William E. Minshall (R Ohio).

House

COMMITTEE -- Government Operations, Public Works and Resources Subcommittee.

ACTION -- March 28 filed a report (H Rept 1975) on "Certain Activities Regarding Power, Department of the Interior," and June 7 filed a report (H Rept 2279) entitled "Effect of Interior and REA Policies on Public Power Preference Customers."

H Rept 1975 said:

Administration officials in 1953 "commenced a determined effort to sabotage and wreck the federal power program."

Subcommittee hearings showed Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay, Under Secretary Clarence A. Davis and Assistant Secretary Fred G. Aandahl had "little concern" for "Congressional intent, objective analysis and fair dealing...in their rush to cripple and thwart a sound federal power program as established by Congress." They "have repeatedly attacked as socialistic the program established by Congress to preserve for the people the benefits of their own God-given natural resources. The Committee believes that if these public officials feel that they cannot carry out in good faith the laws they have sworn to uphold, they should resign their offices and be replaced by men who will do so."

Power regulation changes were "willfully" adopted Aug. 11, 1954, by the Department as part of a policy to "subvert" federal laws giving first preference to rural cooperatives and public agencies in the marketing of federal power. The regulation changes "(gave) away valuable rights the government otherwise would have had" and "(made) the sale of federally generated power more difficult and costly." Some (regulation) changes were copied "verbatim from an anonymous document delivered personally" to Davis by a registered lobbyist for the Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

A minority report signed by the three Republican members of the Subcommittee said:

The power regulation changes were legally made "in the public interest.... The previous regulations were a deterrent to western development."

Subcommittee hearings were "prejudiced" and Chairman Earl Chudoff (D Pa.) publicly "impugned the motives and integrity" of Interior officials during the hearings.

The "compulsory wheeling authority" revoked by the Department, and described in the majority report as the most important change in the regulations, had never been invoked in its six years of existence. (Under it, the government could compel private companies with lines across federal lands to carry power for government preferential customers.)

In a separate minority statement, Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.), ranking GOP member of the full Committee, said, "As political propaganda to be used in the coming campaign by those who have little if any regard for the facts, the report may be helpful to the politically ambitious."

SECOND REPORT

In H Rept 2279, the Democratic majority said the Eisenhower Administration was attempting to destroy public power and establish "a complete private power monopoly in the United States." Republican members said the majority report was "a vicious attack upon the Administration and...an attack of calculated insidiousness upon the American system of free enterprise."

The Democrats asked President Eisenhower to fire Under Secretary Davis and Assistant Secretary Aandahl on the grounds they "have demonstrated that they are out of sympathy with and unwilling to carry out the laws which they are responsible for executing." The Democrats further charged that "the activities of the Interior Department and the private companies are completely coordinated in each region of the country." The majority recommended an investigation "to determine whether or not there is an organized effort of the private power companies to influence the federal Administration, the Congress, the governments of the states and the political life of the nation."

AIR POWER HEARINGS

Richard B. Russell (D Ga.), chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Feb. 25, 1956, named a Special Subcommittee to investigate the adequacy of United States air power. Sen. Stuart Symington (D Mo.) Subcommittee Chairman and former Secretary of the Air Force (1947-50), had pressed for an investigation mandate.

Speaking on the Senate floor May 17, 1955, Symington said, "It is now clear that the United States...may have lost control of the air.... In any case we should be given an accounting, a balance sheet as to our strength against that of the Communists." On Feb. 25, 1956, Symington said "we are now being forced to follow a secret policy, never explained and never justified."

The "accounting" that followed in the 41 open and closed hearings held by the Subcommittee (March 16-July 19) underscored conflicting opinions among top-level planners about the adequacy of present and planned air power. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, chief of the Strategic Air Command, testifying April 27 said "we will be inferior in striking power to the Soviet long-range air force by 1958-60." On June 26 Secretary of the Air Force Donald A. Quarles said "it is not a logical conclusion to say they (Russia) have overtaken us or they will." The experts also disagreed about the comparative progress made by the two countries in the race to develop an intercontinental ballistic missile (ICBM).

COMMITTEE -- Senate Armed Services.

ACTION -- Feb. 25 appointed a five-man Subcommittee to ascertain "if present policies, legislative authority and appropriations are adequate" to maintain an Air Force capable of carrying out its assigned missions. Committee Chairman Russell named Symington (D Mo.), Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D N.C.), Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.), Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.), and James H. Duff (R Pa.) to the Subcommittee.

Symington Feb. 25 said the United States had "no stockpile of intercontinental ballistic missiles whatever - and under present conditions won't have any for years to come." Jackson said the major issue to be investigated was "our ability, or lack of ability, to maintain an effective air-atomic retaliatory force...a grave question is raised as to our capability to do this."

Symington March 6 said his group would get "the whole story of guided and ballistic missiles." He named Fowler Hamilton of New York as Subcommittee counsel.

C. C. Furnas, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Research and Development, March 25 warned that Russia was "closing the gap" on the U.S. in the race to develop the ICBM and new jet bombers. With respect to guided missiles, Furnas said, "We are not lagging behind if you take the whole program. I feel quite certain it is correct to say we are well ahead."

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson March 27 named Eger V. Murphree, president of the Esso Research and Engineering Co., as military missiles czar with special responsibility to produce a missile that can span the oceans. Murphree's responsibility: "direction and coordination of research, development, engineering and production of guided missile activities."

HEARINGS BEGIN

COMMITTEE -- Senate Armed Services, Air Force Subcommittee.

BEGAN HEARINGS -- April 16 on the present and planned strengths of the Air Force.

TESTIMONY -- April 16 -- Gen. Omar N. Bradley, former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said "I firmly believe" that if World War III came, it would erupt in a Russian attack on the United States "very much like Pearl Harbor." He said the U.S. must maintain forces adequate "to hit back very hard," but added, "I don't think we ought to do like Russia and devote our whole industry to the production of war materials."

Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, Chief of Staff to Gen. Eisenhower in World War II, said it would be "disastrous" if the U.S. lost to Russia in the race for supremacy in aircraft and long-range missiles. He said Russia had "closed the gap" in training technical personnel and developing scientific weapons. Smith said it was essential to be "ahead or at least abreast" of the technological advances in the missile field.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- April 17 the Department of Defense appointed Adm. Arthur C. Davis (ret.) as security officer for the hearings. Davis served similarly during 1951 hearings on the firing of Gen. Douglas MacArthur. Secretary Wilson said the Pentagon would "cooperate fully" with the Subcommittee and recognized the "importance of expeditious release of testimony...."

TESTIMONY -- April 18 -- Secretary of State John Foster Dulles testified at a closed hearing.

ACTION -- April 19 -- The full Committee voted to broaden the scope of the hearing to include Naval and Marine air arms.

TESTIMONY -- April 20 -- Adm. Robert B. Carney, retired Chief of Naval Operations, said Russia's rapid strides in the fields of nuclear, air, land and sea power "could result in tacit stalemate tantamount to disarmament." If that happened, emphasis on research and development of new weapons would be "the guts of the whole business," Carney said.

GENERAL STAFF PROPOSED

Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, retired former Air Force Chief of Staff, said that at current spending levels, the U.S. could become adequately prepared only by reorganizing the Department of Defense and putting a single general staff over all the armed forces. Spaatz said the U.S. should concentrate on keeping ahead of Russia in the race for an ICBM. The Russians have 400 submarines, Spaatz said, and the U.S. is not prepared to meet the threat of submarines "lobbing guided missiles with atomic warheads" at coastal areas.

TESTIMONY -- April 27 -- Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, chief of the Strategic Air Command, said: "I consider the lack of skilled manpower to be my most critical deficiency.... Unless something is done we will face the very critical situation of not being able to man the aircraft we have." He proposed a five-point program which he said would enable SAC and the Air Force to retain more skilled career men and officers and improve combat efficiency. It included higher pay for skilled technicians and officers, more adequate family housing, complete dependent medical care, restoration of former commissary and post exchange privileges and educational rights. LeMay said the U.S.S.R. had "a more professional air force" than the U.S. because of better relative pay and other benefits.

April 30 -- LeMay: "...The Soviet Union has a long-range attack capability that it did not have five years ago. This factor creates the possibility of an initial surprise attack upon SAC which in turn would reduce its deterrent power and retaliatory capability. However, under any reasonable set of assumptions, we believe we now have the capability of winning any war the Soviets might start. We are not capable of winning it without this country receiving very serious damage. Five years ago we could have won the war without the country receiving comparatively serious damage." LeMay said on the basis of current warplane building programs "we will be inferior in striking power to the Soviet long-range air force by 1958-60." He said he did not believe the intercontinental ballistic missile would replace all manned bombers "in the foreseeable future."

April 30 - May 1 -- Gen. Earle E. Partridge, Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Air Defense Command, said the "threat of Soviet attack by ICBM is so frightening to me that we just cannot afford to put less effort into the defense than we can put into the offense.... We are studying the problem. We are making preliminary estimates on what is required in the way of hardware and locations, communications and anti-missile and so on, but we still do not have a workable solution.... In principle we have one according to the scientists, but it has not yet been translated into any hardware...." He said estimates indicated "that the Soviets, if they attack at all, would launch a very large-scale attack against this country, and that they will do their best to achieve surprise." Partridge said he doubted that "we could prevent all bombers from getting through," and "one airplane with a thermonuclear weapon can readily destroy one city."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Secretary of Defense Wilson May 1 said: "From the best information I have they (the Russians) are currently building long-range bombers at a higher rate than we are." He refused to say whether he agreed with LeMay's statement that the U.S.S.R. would lead the U.S. in long-range striking power by 1958-60.

B-52 PRODUCTION

TESTIMONY -- May 2 -- LeMay said 57 long-range B-52 jet bombers were produced prior to Jan. 1, 1956, but only 41 of them were accepted by the Air Force. Only two of the 17 B-52's produced in February, March and April of 1956 had been accepted "because of a component failure for which we now have a solution."

SAC had no jet tankers, he said, to refuel its jet bombers. He added: "We have a reasonably adequate refueling capacity at the present time. However, it is true that we could get more bombs on the target in a shorter period of time if we had more tankers.... I know of no plan that will furnish the number of tankers necessary to give us maximum efficiency."

LeMay said the U.S. should maintain more air striking power than Russia because the U.S. would not "make the first all-out nuclear attack" and so might have part of its air strength destroyed.

LeMay, in closed session testimony released May 27, said it was his "guess" that by 1959 Russia could destroy the U.S. "with a complete surprise attack." He said it was expected that in 1958 Russia would have an ICBM and an intermediate-range ballistic missile. LeMay said he did not think it was possible "to catch SAC unaware even though the Russians would outnumber us under present production estimates by at least 2-1 in intercontinental bombers." LeMay said the Air Force had decided to keep the SAC on an "alert" basis instead of the current "ready" basis. He said this would enable SAC to "more effectively deal with (a) Soviet surprise attack and be in a position to retaliate against it."

May 8 -- Gen. Otto P. Weyland, head of the Tactical Air Command, in closed hearing said if the U.S. had had adequate tactical air power before 1950 "it is questionable whether the Korean war would have started." He said TAC must assist theater commanders by providing air superiority, air defense and close support for ground forces. He said TAC's most critical problem was retention of skilled technicians and mechanics.

May 9 -- Allen W. Dulles, Central Intelligence Agency director, testified in executive session. Dulles' testimony was not released by the Subcommittee.

PRESIDENT DISPUTED

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- May 9 -- Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga.) said he doubted the country would accept President Eisenhower's thesis, stated at a May 4 press conference, that it was not necessary for the U.S. to outbuild the Russians in long-range bombers. George said: "The country has been taught that the long-range bomber is the core of our striking force. It will remain disturbing to the country to be constantly reminded that the Russians are building an enormous air force but that we are not keeping pace."

In Chicago, Secretary of Defense Wilson warned, "We must be careful not to go off the deep end in our national security programs." He said "no recent development and no forseeable development will basically change" U.S. ability of "inflicting vast destruction upon any aggressor anywhere in the world. This capability cannot be thwarted."

May 8 -- In testimony before the Senate Appropriations' Defense Department Subcommittee considering the Department's proposed $36.2 billion budget for fiscal 1957, Wilson said the production schedule for B-52 bombers had been raised from 17 to 20 a month. He said some critics of current military policies failed to take into account the "total" air strength of the U.S. and cited the B-47 medium jet bomber, which he described as "the heart of our striking power," as "the most powerful single element of air power in the world today."

May 9-- Wilson told the Appropriations Subcommittee the Department's budget carried funds for 202 B-52s, 12 more than the Air Force had requested. He said the 202 bombers would be produced "in four or five months' quicker time" than originally anticipated, but gave no dates for delivery.

TESTIMONY -- May 10 -- Lt. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell Jr., chief of Air Force personnel, said by June, 1957, there would be a 57,192-man shortage of such "hard core" technicians as radar, armaments, atomic weapons and airplane maintenance mechanics in the Air Force. "One of the major reasons for our losses is the high-pressure competition offered by a booming civilian economy" for trained technicians, he said.

Lt. Gen. C.S. Irvine, deputy chief of staff in charge of Air Force production, said the production goal for B-52s was formerly 12 a month, or 400 by 1959. Subsequent step-ups in production goals "would get us up to 598 airplanes," he said. He said his "personal feeling" was that the U.S. still led Russian airpower "on the broad front," but "the thing that worries us old-timers is the rate at which they have been closing the gap...."

May 16 -- Lt. Gen. Donald L. Putt, Air Force Deputy Chief of Staff for Development, said "the Air Force has been able to maintain the technological lead. But this lead has become progressively more expensive and decreasingly strong in comparison to Soviet power. If we are to maintain the required deterrent force-in-being, we must keep this lead while we have it.... Dollars spent for less than the best Air Force, as measured against requirements, is a total waste. In fact, it is national suicide."

May 17 -- Putt said the U.S. had "a real, firm program" for development of an ICBM.

WIDESPREAD DESTRUCTION PREDICTED

May 25 -- Subcommittee member James H. Duff (R Pa.) asked: "If we got into nuclear war and our strategic air force made an assault in force against Russia with nuclear weapons so that those weapons were exploded in a way where the prevailing winds would carry them southeast over Russia, what would be the effect in the way of death over there under those circumstances, in your opinion?"

Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin, chief of Army research and development, replied: "Current planning estimates run on the order of several hundred million deaths that would be either way depending on which way the wind blew. If the wind blew to the Southeast they would be mostly in the USSR, although they would extend into the Japanese and perhaps down into the Philippine area. If the wind blew the other way, they would extend well back up into Western Europe."

Gavin also confirmed a published estimate that a total of 110 nuclear bombs dropped 10 minutes apart on the U.S. would kill or maim about 70 million people and leave hundreds of square miles of the country uninhabitable for a generation.

Gen. Partridge said any Russian attack by their newest jet bombers before 1958 would "give us difficulties." He said three new interceptors (F-101, F-102, F-104) would provide this country by 1958 with probably enough supersonic fighters to cope with the Russian jets. Partridge said Russian jet engines and fighter planes now were superior to those of the United States. He said an adequate program to meet the Soviet threat would total approximately $61 billion for the 15 years from 1951 through 1965. "Very little of this has been spent already.

The big costs still lie ahead," he said. (Partridge's testimony, cleared by the Defense Department, was in the form of printed questions and answers.)

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- June 11 -- Gen. LeMay asked the Senate Appropriation's Defense Subcommittee for $3.8 billion of additional funds in each of the next four or five years to provide more planes and bases and men to handle them. Subcommittee Chairman Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) June 14 said: "I think we will approve increases of from one-half billion to more than a billion dollars but this will go to all the services, not just the Air Force." (See appropriations bill, p.609)

TESTIMONY -- June 14 -- Former Assistant Secretary of the Air Force Trevor Gardner in closed session testimony said Russia and the U.S. might get an intermediate range ballistic missile (IRBM) at about the same time, and the U.S. might develop an ICBM before Russia. Gardner said there was no question in his mind that Russia was "ahead of us on the IRBM" but that "if the management structure doesn't slow it down we might get one about the same time they do." Gardner said the U.S. decision to "go for the ICBM in one jump" could give this country the missile before Russia. He said the Russians had been able to make "amazing progress" by taking "high technical risks" and using "good talent."

June 18 -- Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff, said "the consideration of the enemy strength, of course, is the guiding factor in developing armed forces."

TWINING LISTS NEEDS

June 19 -- Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Air Force Chief of Staff, was asked to elaborate on his prepared statement that "we have certain areas of weakness but they are not such as to presently place our national security in jeopardy." Twining said: "Some of our bases are very crowded.... We can't get (planes) off as fast as we ought to get them off.... Our air defense net isn't as comprehensive as we would like to have it...we would like (a comprehensive air defense system) now instead of maybe a year from now.... We are short technical people. That is a very great weakness.... I feel the first thing...is to take care of this personnel situation.... Second, I think we should fix our base situation.... Then I think we should have some help in research and development, and I would say the last priority is more B-52 s above the 20 a month rate.... I think it would give us a much better balanced force to have more jet tankers."

June 20 -- Maj. Gen. B.A. Schriever, chief of the ICBM program, said in closed session testimony, "we are actually meeting our milestones.... We think this is an extremely tight schedule, but we have a great deal of confidence."

SOVIETS OVERESTIMATED -- RADFORD

June 21 -- Adm. Arthur W. Radford, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said, "There is good reason to believe that we normally overestimate Communist capabilities in almost every respect.... I think we are in a dangerous position vis-a-vis the Communists in that respect today, because there is an almost hysterical assumption of great capabilities on the part of the Communists, some of which, in my opinion, actually do not exist."

June 25 -- Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker said it was possible the Army, Navy and Air Force soon might each have a guided missile of 1,500-mile range. He said the Army had no desire to covet the role of the Air Force, but added if there had been more Army aviation to support ground forces in Korea, many lives might have been saved.

June 26 -- Secretary of the Air Force Donald A. Quarles said the Administration's $15.6 billion Air Force budget for 1957 was "sufficient," but that it would have to be increased in 1958 to meet future goals. Quarles said total air power of the free world was greater than that of the Communist bloc, and that "it is not a logical conclusion to say they have overtaken us or that they will."

June 27 -- Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas said the Navy air arm was "far more powerful than many of us have realized," and that carrier-launched bombers could deliver hydrogen bombs on all but "a few important targets in the world." He said the Navy recently had developed and "has on hand an anti-submarine weapon which will revolutionize anti-submarine warfare." He did not elaborate.

Army spokesmen, in secret testimony made public June 27, said the Army was confident it could achieve a successful counter-weapon against ballistic missiles in time to meet "the described threat of 1960 or 1961."

June 28 -- Quarles said the Air Force might need $23.6 billion for the year ending July 1, 1958, compared with the $16.5 billion recommended by the Administration. Quarles said his figure was a "flash estimate" by Gen. Nathan Twining, Air Force chief of staff, and that no "firm" figure had been reached. Quarles said B-52 production, set back by failure of one small part in the bomber, would be back on schedule in September.

WILSON DEFENDS PROGRAM

June 29 -- Secretary of Defense Wilson said he had not put economy above the security of the country. "The combined total" of America's armed forces provides a "dynamic military power of true substance," he said. A major problem in planning the defense program is "its effect upon the economic virility of our country. We recognize that while our military strength must be adequate, it must not be excessive to a degree that could seriously impair the economic vigor of our country or the will and ability of the American people to support it.... We deplore efforts to belittle the capacity and resolve of this government to be prepared to meet any recognized threat." Wilson said President Eisenhower had not dictated any defense budget cuts to him.

July 2 -- Wilson said the extra $800 million voted by Congress for aircraft would be "money in the bank" instead of being used to increase B-52 long-range bomber production. He said he had received no recommendations from the Air Force to increase B-52 production. He said U.S. military strength in general and the B-52 in particular was superior to that of Russia.

July 3 -- Chairman Stuart Symington (D Mo.), at the close of Wilson's testimony, said: "Two conclusions are now inescapable: One, you are considering going against the expressed will of the Congress by refusing to increase B-52 production, and two, either you are misleading the American people or responsible military officials of the Defense Department are misleading the American people as to the relative strength of the U.S. vis-a-vis the Communists. Specifically, during the past few days we have received from you testimony which has differed most significantly with the previous sworn testimony and I here note a few of those differences:

"One, the effect of fiscal policies on research and development. Two, whether or not the Soviets are outproducing the U.S. in modern jet aircraft. Three, the quantity of bombers and tankers needed by the U.S. for its security. Four, whether the policy of handling our national security strength is not being carried out on the basis of the tradition of past wars instead of on the basis of that progress which will be utilized in case of any future war.

"In view of the direct conflicts in the sworn testimony presented in these hearings, this Committee must take further evidence before it can reach final conclusions."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- July 19 -- Wilson, in a letter to Symington, disputed the Senator's comment that there were "direct conflicts" between Wilson's testimony and that of Air Force and Pentagon witnesses. Wilson said it "certainly does not surprise me that differences of opinion have developed," and added that he considered it "normal for divergent opinions to exist whenever individuals express their honest views on complicated and important matters that have different degrees of responsibility." Wilson wrote that "I do not propose to impound" the extra Air Force funds voted by Congress, in keeping with Air Force recommendations and "my own best judgment as to the security needs of the nation."

TESTIMONY -- July 19 -- Air Force Chief of Staff Twining said the Soviet Union had "thousands more combat planes in operational units" than the U.S. Air Force and Navy combined. He said the U.S. continued to hold an advantage in aerial striking power. Twining called for stepped-up production and research by 1957 to keep the U.S. edge.

AVIATION HEARINGS

The Civil Aeronautics Administration, its personnel and its general policies were the object of Congressional investigation by both House and Senate committees during the second session of the 84th Congress.

The Congressional spotlight first focused on CAA when Administrator Frederick B. Lee resigned Dec.10, 1955 and wrote President Eisenhower that his resignation had been requested by Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks. Deputy Administrator Charles J. Lowen Jr. was named by the President to succeed Lee.

Chairman A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) of the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Aviation Subcommittee said Weeks and Under Secretary Louis S. Rothschild were part of a "ground-minded transportation clique" trying to control aviation. Monroney's Subcommittee opened hearings in January, 1956 on Lee's resignation and also on a Monroney-sponsored bill (S 2818) to make the CAA an independent agency.

In May, the House Judiciary Committee's Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee began hearings on the problem of monopoly in the aviation industry, with the spotlight this time focusing on the Civil Aeronautics Board, which is responsible for policy decisions. In June, the House Government Operations' Legal and Monetary Affairs Subcommittee opened hearings on civil aviation problems. The hearings were prompted by a Jan. 13 report of the Aviation Facilities Study Group, appointed in May, 1955, which found that civil and military air traffic outpaced "the capabilities of outmoded traffic control facilities." The study was made at the request of the director of the Bureau of the Budget.

Background

The CAA and CAB were created by government Reorganization Plans 3 and 4 in 1939. These plans, effective June 30, 1940, abolished the Civil Aeronautics Authority, established in 1938. The Authority had included an Administrator and a three-man Air Safety Board. After the reorganization, an independent, five-man CAB was set up, with responsibility for policy decisions, including airline routes and rates. The CAA was given responsibility for air operations and placed within the Department of Commerce.

In 1946, Congress passed the Federal Airport Act, authorizing a seven-year, $520 million program of federal grants, to be matched by local airport construction funds. CAA was assigned to administer the Act. The Act was extended for five years in 1953, and in 1955 it was amended to authorize $231.5 million in federal aid to airports for fiscal 1956-59. (1955 Almanac, p. 465)

The 1955 measure was opposed by the Administration as a departure from normal budgetary procedure. CAA Administrator Lee supported the bill.

The CAA also proposed in 1955 a five-year, $250 million modernization program. The program was studied and endorsed by the Air Coordinating Committee, an interdepartmental group representing all federal agencies with aviation interests.

Early in 1956 Congress approved $40 million for the first phase of the program. In July, Budget Director Percival Brundage asked for a $54 million supplemental appropriation for additional air traffic control and navigation facilities for fiscal 1957. He said the additional money was needed because rapidly growing demands on the federal airways system made "a substantial acceleration of the five-year program....necessary." Congress granted only $35 million of the supplemental request.

When Lee resigned, Monroney called hearings, said Lee had been "dumped" because he supported legislation "displeasing to members of the Administration." Monroney introduced a bill (S 2818) to divorce CAA from the Commerce Department. The bill was supported by the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Assn., representing private fliers; and by the Air Line Pilots Assn., representing commercial pilots.

President Eisenhower, in his Jan. 16, 1956 Budget Message, said he was recommending "new authority to incur obligations of $40 million in 1957" to meet "serious traffic congestion." The Budget Bureau Jan. 13 released the report by the Aviation Facilities Study Group, which pointed up the critical lag in airport and navigation control systems. The eight-man Study Group urged a "national plan for aviation facilities of the U.S. for the next 20 years."

CAA Inquiry

COMMITTEE -- Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Aviation Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 4-24; March 5, May 10-28 on the resignation of CAA Administrator Frederick B. Lee and a bill (S 2818) to make the CAA an independent agency.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 4 -- Lee, a Vermont Republican, said his resignation first was requested Oct. 17 by Under

Secretary of Commerce Louis S. Rothschild, who told him, "we haven't been getting along too well, and I don't think we are going to get along, and we've reached a parting of the ways." Lee said he went to Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks on Oct. 29 but nothing more happened until Nov. 29 when Weeks asked him to resign, offering to hire him as a consultant for a limited time if he complied. Lee said his relations with Rothschild seemed to cool in May when the Under Secretary sent him a new deputy, Charles J. Lowen Jr., former Denver Airport administrator. Lowen worked principally on direct assignments for Rothschild, Lee said.

Chairman A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) said the hearings would show "an assumption of Presidential powers by those not entitled under law to exercise them."

Jan. 5 -- Lee said he sent two letters to President Eisenhower on Dec. 8, one stating his case for wanting to remain with CAA, the other a formal resignation to give the President freedom of action. He said he did not know if Mr. Eisenhower ever saw them. His resignation was accepted Dec. 10.

COVER-UP CHARGED

Jan. 6 -- Monroney said the Commerce Department was giving Senate investigators "a runaround" by refusing to provide the Subcommittee with a copy of a management study of CAA made under Department orders. He said Secretary Weeks was trying to cover up a blunder in hiring the Chicago consulting firm of Cresap, McCormick and Paget by "wrapping a phony cloak of secrecy" around the report. (Lee said the firm had no experience in technical aviation matters, yet recommended wiping out 304 ground-to-air transmitters.)

Jan. 9 -- Carlton Hayward, Commerce Department personnel director, said "I have never sought political clearance in career service."

Jan. 10 -- Monroney said that the position of Deputy Administrator of CAA was "not needed, not asked for, not wanted and not used." Hayward said the job was requested by Weeks and was cleared with the Civil Service Commission.

Lee said his advocacy of a plan to improve the nation's airways system at the cost of $250 million got him into hot water with "the top echelon" in the Department as it conflicted with orders from Weeks to hold down on money requests.

Jan. 12 -- Monroney said the Commerce Department had stated it would forward the management study report for Subcommittee study. He said it should be "exposed to the light of day so the aviation industry and the public ...can learn about it," despite the Department's request to keep it private.

A.B. McMullen, executive secretary of the National Association of State Aviation Officials, said that aviation "is of sufficient importance to justify cabinet or equivalent status in the executive branch of our government."

Jan. 24 -- Under Secretary Rothschild said passage of S 2818 "would be a backward step, creating confusion, waste and inefficiency, thereby blocking progress and jeopardizing (aviation) safety." He said there was "no truth whatsoever" to a charge that "we...have pinched pennies at the expense of air safety." Rothschild said Lee "was not salesman enough to sell" to Congress his money requests.

EFFICIENCY REPORT

ACTION -- The Subcommittee Feb. 4 released, over the protests of the Commerce Department, a survey of the CAA by the Chicago firm of Cresap, McCormick and Paget.

The report recommended:

Cutting 3,350 persons from the CAA payroll, to save $13 million a year.

Consolidating 26 air traffic control centers and 169 airport towers into 50 "major terminal areas" and eight "express centers" for long-distance traffic.

Eliminating 304 of the agency's 548 ground-to-air communications stations and replacing them with remote control stations operated from central points.

Restricting CAA's safety activities to setting safety standards.

Transferring CAA airport construction responsibilities to the Bureau of Public Roads.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Feb. 4 -- Monroney said the survey was "a threat to aviation" that would "scramble air traffic control as only Rube Goldberg could." Rothschild said that "no portions of the survey have been formally and finally abandoned."

TESTIMONY -- March 5 -- Stuart G. Tipton, Air Transport Association president, said that "at the present time and under existing circumstances" he was opposed to S 2818. "As long as the CAA remains in Commerce," he said, "civil aviation interests...will have a spokesman in the Cabinet" along with military aviation.

May 10 -- Lowen, appearing at a hearing on his nomination as CAA Administrator, said he believed the CAA had the authority to deny applications for federal aid to airports where segregation was practiced. Asked by Sen. Thomas A. Wofford (D S.C.) if the CAA had sent out a letter to the effect that federal aid would be withheld in such areas, Lowen agreed but said the statement did not mean federal aid would be withheld completely.

May 11 -- Albert J. Forte, executive assistant to the Administrator, and CAA General Counsel Robert P. Boyle testified on CAA procedures.

May 14 -- Lowen said he considered himself a Presidential appointee responsible to the President. He said Secretary Weeks and Under Secretary Rothschild told him "they expect me to run the agency and to bring up the budget I think is needed." Monroney said he feared Lowen would be subservient to "pennypinching policies" of Weeks and Rothschild.

May 17 -- Charles A. Parker, executive director of the National Aviation Trades Assn., recommended prompt confirmation of Lowen. Parker also recommended passage of S 2818.

Sen. Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) said he doubted if independent CAA status would solve aviation's problems. Payne said a cabinet post for air, with its accompanying prestige, was needed to coordinate military and civil aviation.

May 28 -- Clarence N. Sayen, president of the Air Line Pilots Assn., said the Department of Commerce had piled "frustrations" on efforts to plan properly for aviation's growth. He said Congress should strip the Department of its authority over CAA and consider placing a Secretary for Air at its head. Sayen said the frequent turnover of CAA officials made it "impossible to do adequate, consistent, long-range planning."

Joseph F. Marriott, director of airports in Riverside County, Calif., said he was able to get "only a trickle" of needed equipment as regional CAA administrator. Marriott said his resignation from the administrative post was "influenced in some measure by the frustrations encountered trying to get programs approved and implemented" by the Commerce Department.

LOWEN APPROVED

The full Committee May 23 favorably reported to the Senate the nomination of Lowen as Civil Aeronautics Administrator. Monroney said Lowen's approval did not in any way prejudice the study of the merits of S 2818.

Sen. Wofford May 29 filed a minority report (Exec. Rept 6) on Lowen's nomination. Wofford said Lowen had "exceeded any authority granted or implied by Congress" when he ordered federal aid funds withheld in April for segregated public facilities at the Hawkins Field Airport, Jackson, Miss.

Lowen was confirmed by voice vote of the Senate June 6. He died Sept. 5.

Monopoly Hearings

COMMITTEE -- House Judiciary, Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- May 2-June 15 on the problem of monopoly in the aviation industry.

TESTIMONY -- May 2 -- Comptroller General Joseph Campbell reported on a two-year study of operations of the Civil Aeronautics Board. Campbell said the Board showed "an apparent lack of interest" in conducting a general airline fare investigation. He questioned the necessity of charging the government more for airmail than other freight and said "serious doubt" existed over justification of a fare increase granted in 1952. "We believe that the airlines should be able to carry mail at rates and yields that are closely related to those of freight," Campbell said. He also said that although CAB auditors had "frequently taken exception" to airline accounting and reporting practices, "there was no indication that such practices were brought to the attention of the Board."

May 3 -- Stuart G. Tipton, Air Transport Assn. president, disputed a charge that the scheduled airlines had conspired to prevent new competition. "I take this opportunity to confirm that the accusation is false," he said. "I can add that the accusation made against companies which constantly...have assumed the obligations as well as the benefits of the Civil Aeronautics Act was particularly offensive, coming as it did from a combine which has evaded those same obligations and governed its operations by the sole standard of maximum profit for itself."

(Tipton was referring to charges by a leading non-scheduled airline, Trans American, formerly called North American Airlines.)

May 4 -- Tipton said: "The scheduled airline industry does not oppose, endorse or fear a general investigation of passenger fares.... We do not oppose a general fare investigation because we are certain that it would only show what we already know -- that scheduled air travel is one of the best bargains in the country today.... We do not endorse such an investigation because we feel it is an unnecessary waste of time and money to prove what is already known by anybody who is familiar with the economics of the industry, and we don't fear an investigation for the very same reasons."

Tipton said the Association in the past had tried to line up support for candidates for appointment to the CAB but had been unable to reach agreement on whom to support. Endorsement of candidates for judgeships, he remarked, was "standard practice among bar associations."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- May 10 -- The CAB said it would investigate airline passenger fares. It said the investigation was prompted by 1955 financial reports of the 13 trunkline carriers operating within the U.S.

TESTIMONY -- May 11 -- Donald Markham, ATA attorney, said the big airlines in the Association do not freeze out travel agents who also sell tickets for non-scheduled airlines. He said the ATA had drawn up such a regulation but it never went into effect.

May 16 -- Subcommittee Chairman Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) ordered transcripts of the hearings turned over to the Justice Department to see "whether the Air Transport Assn. violated the antitrust laws by cooperating with its members to keep competitors out of the air freight field and in carrying on a campaign to cast discredit on the non-scheduled airliners."

May 17 -- Tipton said the Association was considering charging higher rates for people who reserve seats on airliners but do not show up to use them.

NORTH AMERICAN CHARGES DISPUTED

May 22 -- Alexander G. Hardy, senior vice president of National Airlines, said charges made by North American and other non-scheduled airlines that the certificated airline industry was monopolized were "false and misleading.... I charge North American with a deliberate campaign of wholesale violation of the law and defiance of the Civil Aeronautics Board" because it is not certificated to fly with the frequency it does. Hardy said the Subcommittee should investigate North American Airlines to ascertain the depth of their lobbying.

He charged these people with being, or having been, in the employ of North American: Hardy McClay and William C. Burt, former CAB lawyers; Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.), "a North American lobbyist, lawyer and director;" Laurence Henderson, "formerly staff director of the Senate Small Business Committee;" Morris Rosenblatt, "a high-powered lobbyist...and campaign director of the National Committee for an Effective Congress;" Gardner Jackson, "an effective lobbyist and a top officeholder in the Americans for Democratic Action;" and "politically well-connected Murray Chotiner and Raymond Bowles." He said that Gen. Omar N. Bradley had written Maj. Gen. Wilton B. Persons, deputy assistant to the President, in 1955 asking White House backing of North American because it was veteran-owned and furthered low fare travel. (Sen. O'Mahoney said he was connected with North American between 1952 and 1954 when he was out of the Senate and in private law practice. See 1953 Almanac, p. 590)

Thomas J. Donovan of the American Society of Travel Agents described the workings of the Society in regard to airline ticket sales.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- May 22 -- Chairman John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) of the Senate Select Small Business Committee released a 228-page study on competition in the regulated civil aviation industry prepared for the Committee by the CAB. Sparkman said: "It appears to me that the favored few grandfather carriers are still being allowed to split up all of the greatly increased revenue traffic on the nation's trunk routes."

May 23 -- Trans American Airlines, formerly North American, wrote the Subcommittee requesting an "exhaustive investigation of the whole story of airlines pressure" on the CAB and other government agencies. It charged testimony given the Subcommittee showed the "CAB capitulated to airline pressure in granting a trans-Atlantic fare increase; major airlines contributed to a slush fund to take legislators on hunting trips; CAB member Harmar Denny, after being visited by the head of the airline lobby, switched his vote and thereby killed a general investigation of passenger fares."

PAN AMERICAN DEFENDED

TESTIMONY -- June 14 -- Juan T. Trippe, Pan American World Airways president, said his company, "which its competitors have sought to paint as a monopoly, in reality is subject to an amount of competition on its international routes which makes United States domestic airline operation...a pink tea party." Trippe said that in the domestic air business, in contrast to the foreign field in which Pan American competes, "the CAB provides protection against uneconomic and wasteful competition. Our government has no power to control the subsidy or other aid granted to our foreign-flag competitors or to require them to conform to labor standards Americans would think proper."

June 15 -- Chairman Celler said the Defense Department had refused on security grounds to tell the Subcommittee the details of PAA's operations in Latin America and the U.S.-sponsored airfield building program the company undertook in South America during the war.

Trippe denied he ever negotiated with the British Overseas Airways Corp. for a cartel arrangement so the two firms could share European business.

Aviation Traffic

COMMITTEE -- House Government Operations, Legal and Monetary Affairs Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- June 25 - July 18 on civil aviation problems and the report of the Aviation Facilities Study Group headed by W. Barclay Harding (submitted to the White House Dec. 31, 1955, published Jan. 13, 1956).

TESTIMONY -- June 25 -- Chairman Robert H. Mollohan (D W.Va.), in an opening statement, said the Subcommittee was concerned with the Harding group's findings that: risks of mid-air collisions had reached critical proportions; airport and navigation control systems were lagging far behind aeronautical development and the nation's needs; only a piecemeal approach was being followed to solve air problems; and coordination of groups working with aviation problems was highly complex and often ineffective.

Harding said "central planning and central direction" were needed to meet mounting aviation control problems. He said his group had been told that more than $3 billion had been spent on military airports in the United States since 1951, while only $116 million went into civil airports.

Vice Admiral Charles E. Rosendahl (Ret.), executive director of the National Air Transport Coordinating Committee, said NATCC had conducted an effective voluntary aircraft noise-abatement program since 1952 in the New York-New Jersey air terminal area. Rosendahl said both Boeing and Douglas aircraft companies had told NATCC that commercial jet planes scheduled for delivery in about three years could operate from civil airports because of noise suppression equipment.

June 26 -- Clarence Sayen, president of the Air Line Pilots Assn., said there had been a "failure of the Department of Commerce to assert leadership in the aviation field." He said the Civil Aeronautics Administration should be taken out of the Department of Commerce and should have firm central control over the nation's air space.

June 27 -- Chief Engineer Maynard Pennell, of Boeing Aircraft Co.'s transport division, said airports in the future would have to be some 10,000 feet long, instead of the present 6,000 feet, for long distance jets. Pennell said the jet planes due to go into operation in about three years could fly nonstop from Chicago to London and from Seattle to Tokyo.

Warren T. Dickinson, Douglas Aircraft Co. executive engineer, said the CAA had been as much as five years off in its predictions on the size of air traffic. Air travel in 1955 reached the figure the CAA had predicted for 1960, he said.

VOICE FOR PRIVATE AVIATION ASKED

July 2 -- Milton W. Arnold, Air Transport Assn. vice president for operations and engineering, said civil aviation, as represented by aircraft and airport operators, was not consulted on joint use of airports by the Joint Use Panel of the Air Coordinating Committee. Arnold said under ACC procedures government agencies sat in judgment as to whether they should have private air space. He said the Air Navigation Development Board was "dead," and that new machinery should be created. Arnold said a one-man post would be more effective than a committee, with that person responsible to the President and empowered to deal with military as well as civil aviation.

He said it was his "guess" no air traffic control system could have prevented the June 30 collision of two airliners over the Grand Canyon. No absolutely "foolproof" system could be developed because "human beings and machines are not going to function perfectly," Arnold said. (For hearings on the crash, see below)

TESTIMONY -- July 9 -- CAA Administrator Lowen said the agency's five-year plan to expand and improve facilities was "the greatest federal airway program in history." He said the program which would cost approximately $246 million would put the country "in a state of readiness for the first stage of the jet age," and give the CAA traffic controller "radar eyes." When the plan was put completely into effect, Lowen said, "we will have radar coverage of the entire airspace of the United States at high altitudes."

David D. Thomas, CAA director of air traffic control, said the U.S. had "the finest air-traffic control system known in the world." He said, however, that "inadequate emphasis has been placed on developing new tools for air-traffic control," and that "we need to reinforce radar signals so that we can see aircraft through precipitation clutter."

July 10 -- William B. Davis, CAA director of the Office of Aviation Safety, said there had been two near-collisions over Cleveland and one over Pittsburgh within the last six months. He said all planes should be required to carry radar sets to show how close they were to other craft in the area.

July 12 -- Under Secretary Rothschild said "...the executive branch has already expanded its efforts to assure that everything possible will be done so that our aviation may continue its tremendous progress."

July 13 -- Edward P. Curtis, President Eisenhower's Special Assistant for Aviation Facilities Planning, said "about as good a guarantee as you can get" against plane collisions at this time is to have pilots observe existing federal regulations.

July 16 -- Robert J. Wilson, Capital Air Lines vice president, William Joy of the Detroit Aviation Commission and Cass S. Hough, former Michigan director of aeronautics, opposed shifting airplane operations from Willow Run to the Detroit-Wayne Major field.

July 17 -- John H. Witherspoon, Detroit controller, said the Detroit-Wayne Major Airport "should be completed as the commercial port to meet the needs of the Detroit area."

July 18 -- Herbert H. Howell, director of the Office of Airports of the CAA, said movement of scheduled air carrier operations to Willow Run "was generally regarded as a temporary solution" because of its distance from Detroit. He said the CAA still supported the development of the Wayne-Major Airport as the best solution to the area's air problems, with Willow Run Airport assigned to the military.

ADMINISTRATIVE CHAOS REPORTED

ACTION -- The full Committee July 27 filed a report (H Rept 2949) on the "Federal Role in Aviation," based on the Subcommittee's hearings. It called for a "drastic reorganization" of federal aviation agencies.

The report said there were 75 committees and agencies dealing with aviation, found: "A lack of well defined authority and responsibility in aviation matters.... The multiplicity of agencies has resulted in compounding confusion rather than in the resolution of critical problems." The report recommended: granting additional funds for the air-traffic study started by Edward P. Curtis, President Eisenhower's assistant on aviation planning, so his committee could finish its work ahead of the estimated Sept. 1, 1957 completion date; resolving by Oct. 1, 1956 the controversy over whether the military or civilian air navigation system should be adopted; acceleration of the five-year CAA modernization plan.

The report said "participation by regulatory bodies in Air Coordinating Committee matters and according ACC decisions binding effect, without adherence to procedures prescribed by the Congress, represents a flagrant flouting of the will of Congress." It said the CAB and Federal Communications Commission should get off the ACC and expressed concern at "the predominance of the military services" on the ACC and Air Navigational Development Board.

Grand Canyon Crash

COMMITTEE -- House Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

ACTION -- July 3 ordered a general investigation of all airspace problems by a Special Subcommittee on Airspace Use. Chairman J. Percy Priest (D Tenn.) appointed Rep. Oren Harris (D Ark.), chairman of the Transportation and Communications Subcommittee, to head the Special Subcommittee. Priest said the group would begin its study by investigating the Grand Canyon crash of a Trans World Airlines plane with a United airliner, which killed 128 persons. "Definite action must be taken at once," Priest said, "to improve the means of handling our high-speed air traffic. The special study will explore the Committee's legislative responsibility in this all-important and highly technical field."

HEARINGS -- July 7 in Las Vegas, Nev., and July 18, Sept. 11-13 in Washington.

TESTIMONY -- July 7 -- William K. Andrews, Director of Safety Investigation for the CAB, said the Grand Canyon crash was "a definite collision" and that primary responsibility before the crash rested with the Trans World Airlines pilot. "TWA had full responsibility for maintaining separation," he said.

July 18 -- Witnesses were: C.N. Sayen, president, Air Line Pilots Assn.; Capt. Jasper Solomon, TWA pilot; Capt. Lionel Stephan, American Airlines; Capt. David Halperin, chairman, TWA Air Safety Committee; Capt. John A. Lovett, chairman, United Airline Central Committee; and other TWA pilots.

Halperin said a survey of pilots showed there was an average of four "near miss" air collisions every day. Solomon said he had flown over the canyon about one and one-half hours before the crash, had good visibility, so turned over the canyon so the passengers could get a better view.

SIGHTSEEING THE CAUSE?

Subcommittee Member Carl Hinshaw (R Calif.) said the crash probably occurred because the two pilots "were both looking at the Grand Canyon."

TESTIMONY -- Sept. 11 -- Oscar Bakke, deputy director of safety regulations for the Civil Aeronautics Board, said existing air traffic control machinery of the Civil Aeronautics Administration had a "traffic handling capacity" equal to only one-fifth of the total movements of aircraft. He said the most obvious solution to the problem of increasing speeds of aircraft was to extend positive control of planes to all altitudes in which high speed planes operated. He said, however, that CAB had concluded that CAA's air traffic control system lacked the capacity to accommodate more than a small percentage of the airplanes using controlled airspace.

Arthur C. Peterson, chief of the Weather Bureau's domestic aviation section, said the airliners that collided had been flying in relatively clear skies with good visibility. He said he could see no direct relationship between the weather and the accident.

Sept. 12 -- Acting Civil Aeronautics Administrator James T. Pyle said the existing airways traffic control system was "a good and a safe system," but was "not adequate to meet all the demands placed upon it without imposing extensive delays on the users." Pyle said the system lacked sufficient geographical coverage of traffic control facilities. He said the projected federal airway plan provided for expanded traffic capacity in three broad areas -- radar, communications and navigation aids.

Sept. 13 -- Under Secretary of Commerce Louis S. Rothschild said the nation's new air navigation system was "the best we can now devise," adding that it will be several years before it is fully applied. The new system, called Vortac, is a compromise of the civilian and military air traffic control systems.

Milton W. Arnold, vice president of operations and engineering for the Air Transport Assn., said his group asked more than two years ago for an airway over the Grand Canyon area where the airliners collided. Arnold said the CAA did not have adequate funds to fulfill the airway request.

HODGE EMBEZZLEMENT

The July, 1956, indictment and subsequent conviction of resigned Illinois State Auditor Orville E. Hodge and two fellow-conspirators for embezzling $1.5 million in state funds touched off a front-page Congressional investigation. At the instigation of Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.), Chairman J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee ordered hearings to determine the involvement of federally insured banks and the role of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in the case.

The hearings, to which Hodge was taken from prison to testify, brought charges of "politics" from Illinois Governor William G. Stratton, Republican candidate for re-election. Stratton testified at the hearings and indicated he thought the Democratic-controlled Committee was using its investigation to provide fodder for the Democrats in the Nov. 6 election. (Stratton was successful in his bid for re-election but ran far behind the rest of the GOP ticket.) Fulbright attempted to get Stratton to admit he was slow to act after discovering something was wrong in Hodge's office. Stratton insisted he was responsible for bringing Hodge to justice.

The hearings also brought into the news ex-Illinois Gov. Dwight H. Green (R) chairman of the board of a bank in which Hodge was a secret stockholder. (Green was defeated by Adlai E. Stevenson in the 1948 race for governor.) Newspaper stories during Hodge's trial said Hodge had been revealed as a collector of gambling payoffs during Green's administration.

When the hearings concluded, Fulbright said they had been "both frustrating and fruitful" and that testimony "demonstrated conclusively that several changes must be made in the FDIC statute and the federal banking laws in general." He said he questioned "seriously the advisability of federal deposit insurance for any bank in which a state supervisory official has substantial stock holdings."

This was a reference to Hodge's procurement of a secret interest in about one third of the stock of the reorganized Bank of Elmwood Park after Hodge, as State Auditor, closed its predecessor.

The hearings disclosed that an FDIC attorney, John Russell, drew up the papers for the reorganization and became president of the new bank.

Background

The FDIC is a government agency whose management is vested in a three-member board of directors. The President appoints two members for six-year terms, with Senate approval. The third member is the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency. FDIC's main functions are: to pay off depositors of insured banks which close without making adequate provision for payments; to act as receiver for all national banks placed in receivership and for state banks in receivership when the state designated it as the receiver; and to prevent continuance or development of unsafe and unsound banking practices.

Hodge's scheme involved the issuance of state warrants (checks) in the names of firms or individuals not entitled to receive money from the state, forging the payees' names on the warrants and cashing them. As Hodge's other major function was the supervision of state banks, he had the needed bank contacts to carry out his frauds. While the State Treasurer was required to countersign the Auditor's warrants, his only official function was to make sure there was sufficient balance in the account against which they were issued to pay the warrants when presented.

When the scandal broke, Hodge, 52, was a candidate for re-election and also a delegate-at-large to the Republican National Convention. He had served three consecutive terms in the Illinois General Assembly, beginning in 1946, and in 1952 won his State Auditor's post over five opponents. He had made a bid for Governor in 1952, but withdrew in favor of Stratton. He had been mentioned as a possible Gubernatorial candidate in 1960. Hodge resigned his Auditor's job July 16, when an investigation of irregularities in his office began to gain momentum. He also withdrew his candidacy and gave up his convention assignment.

Disclosure of his embezzlement resulted from a reader's tip to a Chicago Daily News reporter, George Thiem. Other Chicago newspapers and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch joined in the investigation. A full-scale investigation was ordered July 12 by State's Attorney George P. Coutrakon of Sangamon County. The amount of money involved was estimated at $540,000 until July 19, when State Attorney General Latham Castle announced that "an estimated $800,000 paid out upon fraudulent or forged warrants" had been issued by Hodge's office.

FEDERAL, STATE INDICTMENTS

Hodge was indicted on 54 counts July 21 by a federal grand jury which charged him with misapplying funds in a federally insured bank. Indicted with him were: Edward A. Hintz, ex-president of the Southmoor Bank and Trust Co. which cashed Hodge's warrants; and Edward A. Epping, Hodge's administrative assistant. Hintz had resigned as bank president July 13 without giving a reason.

The indictment charged the three men with conspiracy in the cashing of $516,000 in state warrants. Hodge was charged with transferring $356,000 from a special state unclaimed-property trust fund to the Southmoor bank, where it was placed in an envelope made available to Hodge and his wife.

A second, 46-count indictment was handed up July 24 by a Sangamon County grand jury, charging forgery, embezzlement and confidence game. All three men were named in the state indictments, which covered 46 state warrants allegedly fraudulently issued and cashed for a total of nearly $650,000.

State's Attorney Coutrakon July 25 released a statement by Hodge in which the latter said he had used the money to further his political career and meet large hotel and entertainment bills. "I must have been temporarily insane," Hodge's statement said.

SENTENCES IMPOSED

Hodge July 26 pleaded not guilty to charges of embezzling state funds but changed his plea to guilty at his arraignment Aug. 13. At his federal trial he pleaded guilty to 51 of the 54 counts. The government dropped three counts for technical reasons.

Both Hintz and Epping changed their pleas from not guilty to guilty of state and federal charges.

Hodge was sentenced Aug. 15 in federal court to 20 years' imprisonment for misapplying $816,427 in state funds deposited in federally insured banks. The sentence was subject to a 10-year reduction if Hodge made good on his promise of complete restitution. The state court Aug. 20 sentenced Hodge to 12-to-15 years for embezzlement of $637,000.

Hodge's confederates received the following sentences: Hintz -- in federal court, three years and an additional five years' probation; in state court, one-to-three years and a $3,000 fine; Epping -- in federal court, five years and an additional five years' probation; in state court, four-to-five years.

Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Senate Banking and Currency.

HEARINGS -- September in Washington and October in Chicago, to determine the involvement of federally insured banks and the role of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. in ex-Illinois State Auditor Orville E. Hodge's embezzlement of $1.5 million of state funds.

TESTIMONY -- In Washington, Sept. 21 -- FDIC officials, led by board member and former chairman Maple T. Harl, denied charges by Committee Chairman J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) that the FDIC had "established a pattern" of lenient supervision in several Chicago banks which "ended up in the Hodge affair."

Much of the testimony centered on Henry J. Beutel, who in 1954 pleaded no contest to an indictment charging misapplication of bank funds and was put on probation for five years. One of the banks controlled by Beutel and his associates was the First State Bank of Elmwood Park, a suburban Chicago community. Hodge as State Auditor closed the bank in 1953. Fulbright said it was discovered when the Hodge scandal broke in 1956 that Hodge owned "a substantial interest" in the successor institution, the Bank of Elmwood Park, and that the FDIC permitted Hodge and former Gov. Dwight H. Green to open the bank with reduced capital.

Fulbright said Eugene Gover, supervising examiner for the FDIC in the Chicago district, had made a series of critical reports on Beutel, starting in 1949, yet "played along with him for three years."

Sept. 22 -- Fulbright told reporters the FDIC had "permitted itself to be used for...private purposes" of Hodge. He said testimony had shown that FDIC "conducted its dealings" with Hodge "without sufficient vigor."

Sept. 25 -- Neil Greenside, assistant to the FDIC board chairman, and Gover said there was no way their examination of the Southmoor Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago could have uncovered Hodge's embezzlement, in spite of the fact that fraudulent state warrants were cashed in the bank while examiners were in the bank investigating its records. They said their examination of the bank was concerned with questionable real estate loans.

Sept. 26 -- Fulbright said Congress should consider revising the basic legislative charter of FDIC.

BANK PRESIDENT INVOLVED

In Chicago, Oct. 8 -- Ralph K. Schlitz, assistant cashier of the Southmoor Bank and Trust Co., said he had cashed large checks for Hodge because they were approved by bank president Hintz. He said he otherwise could have refused to cash them, but "I have loyalty to my superiors." Schlitz said Edward A. Epping, Hodge's administrative assistant, usually was in Hintz' office when the checks were brought out for him to cash. Records of Hodge's cashing of state warrants were kept in a private ledger maintained by Hintz, Schlitz said. The warrants were unusual, he said, because in practically all cases the payees did not have accounts at Southmoor Bank. Schlitz said he would hand the cash to Hintz or put it in a "brown envelope" used to provide cash for any of Hodge's personal checks.

HODGE'S EXPLANATION

Hodge said he could not explain why he pocketed state money. "I suppose it was temporary insanity," he said.

Hodge said he closed the First State Bank of Elmwood Park in April, 1953, because it held too many small loan notes. Its successor, the Bank of Elmwood Park, in which he purchased stock, was opened seven weeks later, he said. He said he made several trips to Washington, D.C., to get authorization for the bank to open with $600,000 capital instead of the $1 million asked by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. He said he did not discuss the matter with any Members of Congress, or seek White House help, but talked only with FDIC staff members. He said he bought 3,200 shares of stock in the new bank, at $20 a share, because it was "short of needed capital." Later, Hodge said, he bought 7,000 shares because "by then it was a good investment." The shares were put in an employee's name, he said, because he did not think the State Auditor should be identified with the transaction. Organizers of the new bank included ex-Gov. Dwight H. Green of Illinois, currently bank board chairman.

Hodge said he saw nothing wrong in the fact that John Russell, an FDIC official, later became president of the new bank.

Oct. 9 -- Hintz, serving a three-year prison term for conspiracy, refused to testify because "of present circumstances." Committee Chairman J. William Fulbright (D Ark.) said he would recommend that Hintz be cited for contempt.

Epping, serving a five-year term for conspiracy, also refused to testify under the Fifth Amendment and "because of pending indictments."

Fulbright questioned Hodge on what he had done with the stolen cash. Hodge said he had no written documents to show where the funds were spent, but enumerated the following expenditures: $200,000 on a hotel at Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; $75,000 for an interest in a small loan company; $60,000 on a farm; $100,000 for airplanes, which he said all had been turned over to the State.

Fulbright said Hodge's testimony left more than $600,000 unaccounted for. Hodge said "I don't think you're being fair with me." Fulbright replied, "You are lying to this committee."

Hodge also said: he did not share the embezzled cash with anybody; he was not "covering up" for anyone; he was not a target for blackmailers or extortionists; he neither reported nor paid federal income taxes on the state funds he pocketed.

Hodge said "everything I and my dear wife had is going to the state," and "I think it will exceed what I owe."

Oct. 10 -- Henry J. Beutel, who headed the Elmwood Park bank which Hodge closed, said the bank's closing was "unwarranted. A constructive auditor...could have straightened out our operation." Beutel said he had to make cash contributions from 1949 to 1952 to get state treasury funds for deposit in his bank.

POLITICAL CONTRIBUTIONS

Oct. 11 -- Charles O. Mensik, president of the City Savings Assn., said that in April of 1956 he gave Hodge $6,800 for "political advertising." He said Hodge told him "$4,000 would be used to get a good turnout in the primary and the other $2,800 would go to help legislators who were friendly to savings and loan associations."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Assistant Attorney General Warren Olney III Oct. 10 told the Senate Privileges and Elections Subcommittee the Justice Department was investigating a complaint from Chicago alleging that state and national banks in that city had made substantial contributions "for a political purpose."

TESTIMONY -- Oct. 12 -- John Russell, president of the Bank of Elmwood Park, said political contributions from banks were "standard procedure." Russell said he was serving as an FDIC attorney when he drew up organization papers for the bank, which promised him the presidency. He said he did not see any conflict of interest in his role as FDIC attorney and prospective bank president.

S. Edward Bloom, a director of the Elmwood Park bank before its reorganization, said he opposed having the old bank taken over by Hodge, ex-Gov. Green and others. Bloom said he signed only after Hodge threatened to send the bank into receivership if he did not sign papers clearing the way for assumption (the legal process where a new bank takes over the liabilities of an old one).

Green testified that $1 million in state funds were sent to his bank in 1953 by a State Treasurer he had helped to elect. "There's no sense in playing ostrich about this," Green said, "it is perfectly obvious that if someone does you a favor you will reciprocate if you can."

Arthur M. Wirtz, Chicago real estate broker, said in June, 1956, Hodge asked him to buy 11,165 shares of Elmwood Park bank stock held by the then Auditor. "This was the first time I really knew Hodge was the actual owner of these shares," Wirtz said. Wirtz said he paid Hodge $301,455 for the stock.

Oct. 15 -- Herbert C. Paschen, Cook County treasurer who resigned as a Democratic candidate for governor after criticism of an employee welfare fund in his office, said the fund was "for charitable bequests to help out, when people were sick or died, for flowers." He said banks contributed to the fund but were not deprived of deposits of county funds if they did not contribute.

PRESSURED FOR STATE FUNDS

Elmer J. Hoffman, former Illinois State Treasurer (R), said he was pressured by politicians and bankers for deposits of state funds. He said "party loyalty" dictated which banks got the most of the state funds. He said a favored bank was the Elmwood Park one, "out of deference" to former Gov. Green. He said the Southmoor Bank got special consideration because of pressure from Hodge and "out of a close personal friendship" for the former president, Hintz.

Frank Fish, an Elmwood Park bank shareholder, said he contributed to Gov. Stratton's campaign in 1952 and later succeeded in having $800,000 in state funds deposited in that bank. He denied there was any connection between the political contributions and the deposit of state funds in his bank.

Hodge Case

These are the principals in the case:

Orville E. Hodge -- Illinois State Auditor and a Republican candidate for re-election. He resigned when his misuse of state funds was discovered, and was convicted by both federal and state courts for misapplying and embezzlement of a total of $1.5 million. He received a 12-15 year prison sentence.

Edward A. Hintz--President of the bank which cashed Hodge's forged checks. He resigned suddenly when the scandal broke; was found guilty of conspiracy, and sentenced to one-to-three years' imprisonment.

Edward A. Epping -- Administrative assistant to Hodge and allegedly present in Hintz' office when check transactions were carried out. Found guilty of conspiracy, he was sentenced to four-to-five years' imprisonment.

Gov. William G. Stratton of Illinois -- Republican candidate for re-election. He charged the Senate investigation was a Democratic scheme to influence the Nov. 6 election, claimed credit for ousting Hodge.

Ex-Gov. Dwight H. Green (R) of Illinois -- He became Board Chairman of a bank reorganized by Hodge under questionable circumstances.

These are the banks involved:

Southmoor Bank and Trust Co.--Where Hodge's fraudulent checks were cashed, and where bank president Hintz kept state funds in an envelope for Hodge's personal use.

First State Bank of Elmwood Park -- Closed in 1953 by State Auditor Hodge, who then invested funds secretly in its successor, the Bank of Elmwood Park -- In which Hodge held $301,000 worth of shares under an employee's name and whose board chairman was ex-Gov. Green.

Oct. 16 -- Hoffman said he increased state deposits in the Granite City (Ill.) Trust and Savings Bank by $1.6 million in 1953 at the request of Auditor Hodge.

Oct. 18 -- Gov. Stratton said "I doubt if Hodge would be out of office yet if I had not taken firm effective action. We have already taken steps to see that a repetition of the Hodge case does not occur."

Asked about newspaper accounts that Stratton acted fast to put Hodge behind bars to save other big names from detection, Stratton said, "I think it is a dastardly and infamous inference." Stratton said the Governor has no jurisdiction over elective officers, adding he had no reason to suspect anything was amiss in Hodge's office before the scandal broke.

Oct. 19 -- State Treasurer Warren E. Wright said Hodge visited him in his office June 10 and asked him to withhold auditor records from newsmen investigating Hodge's activities. Wright described Hodge's view as, "if he went down, the whole Republican team would go down, toll road and all." Wright said he helped to uncover the embezzlements, beginning a check after he heard rumors of strange happenings in the Auditor's office. He said he made photostatic copies of 21 state warrants (checks) cashed by Hodge and gave them to Gov. Stratton in July.

Cook County Public Administrator Charles J. Fleck said bank president Hintz had contributed to Stratton's campaign in 1952, "probably...through me at my instigation and request." He said he did not remember the amount contributed. Fleck said he was "under the impression" a 1952 contribution also had been received from Leon Marcus, a principal stockholder and director of the Southmoor Bank. He said in June, 1955, Hintz gave him checks totaling approximately $4,600 "to be used, I thought, with no strings attached...for the entire state ticket." Hintz told Fleck the money was "a contribution from Marcus personally," Fleck said.

Chairman Fulbright said the inquiry "demonstrated conclusively" that several changes should be made in federal banking laws.

NICKEL PROJECT PROBE

The House Government Operations' Special Government Activities Subcommittee in 1956 conducted a politically explosive probe of the $43 million expansion of a government-owned nickel project at Nicaro, Cuba. In a June report the Subcommittee's Democratic majority charged that the Eisenhower Administration was guilty of "political favoritism" in awarding the construction contract for the expansion. The Republican minority rejected the majority's conclusions because they had not been "properly substantiated."

Background

The Nicaro nickel plant is owned by the U.S. government and operated under the management of the General Services Administration. It was built during World War II, as an emergency project, by Frederick Snare Corp. After 40 months of production, operation was discontinued in 1947, and the plant was surplus property from 1947 to 1951. It was restored to operation after the outbreak of the Korean War.

The Office of Defense Mobilization in December, 1953 authorized a 75 percent expansion of the plant, at a cost not to exceed $43 million. The construction contract for the expansion ultimately was awarded on a 50-50 basis to Frederick Snare Corp. and Merritt-Chapman and Scott, a construction firm controlled by financier Louis Wolfson.

Hearings

COMMITTEE -- House Government Operations, Special Government Activities Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 13, 16-18; Feb. 16; Oct. 18-19.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 13 -- Randall Cremer of the Frederick Snare Corp. of New York, supervisor of the nickel project, said General Services Administrator Edmund F. Mansure had recommended the Balmer and Moore Insurance Agency of Chicago as brokers for the workmen's compensation insurance contracts at the Nicaro plant. Cremer said Balmer and Moore ultimately received two-thirds of the plant's insurance business which brought $64,000 in brokerage fees.

Cremer, project manager of the plant, said the National Lead Co., which had charge of the expansion, selected Merritt-Chapman and Scott of New York, a construction firm headed by Louis Wolfson, for the building contract. Mansure, however, insisted that the Snare firm be given a share of the contract. Although the two firms were splitting the costs of the project, Cremer said, Merritt-Chapman had one employee in Cuba, while Snare had about 2,500.

Jan. 16 -- Mansure said he had submitted a list of four bidders for the Nicaro contract to Republican National Chairman Leonard Hall to get his views on their reputations but that Hall "took no part" in selecting one for the contract. He said he took Cremer to see Hall during the contract negotiations because he wanted all prospective contractors to have an opportunity to talk to "everyone." Cremer, he said, had been afraid "Washington" was "against his company."

Mansure said he had not recommended Balmer and Moore for the insurance brokerage but had only expressed the hope that a Midwest firm would get the business. He said he had named Balmer as a man able to advise Nicaro contractors, but at the time he had not known that Balmer himself was a broker.

Jan. 17 -- James P. Pinkley, head of GSA's nickel-graphite committee, said an offer from National Lead to supervise the project for "$10 and costs" was turned down because the GSA feared the work would be limited. Subcommittee Chairman Jack Brooks (D Texas) said National Lead was then paid a $30,000 fee instead.

William J. Balmer, a partner in the insurance firm and a Chicago Republican leader, said he recommended Mansure for the GSA job.

Jan. 18 -- Cremer said in a letter to the Subcommittee he did not call on Hall with Mansure in 1954 as Mansure had testified earlier.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Feb. 6 -- Mansure's resignation as General Services Administrator was accepted by President Eisenhower. In a letter dated Feb. 3, Mansure said he was resigning because of "personal obligations." Later, he said his resignation had nothing to do with the nickel probe.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 16 -- Cremer reiterated that Mansure had recommended the Balmer and Moore agency. When asked by Chairman Brooks if Balmer would otherwise have gotten the insurance business, Cremer said "no."

REPORT FILED

ACTION -- The full Committee June 19 filed the Subcommittee's report (H Rept 2390) entitled "Inquiry into the Expansion and Operation by General Services Administration of the Government Nickel Plant at Nicaro, Cuba." The Subcommittee's Democratic majority found that "political and private influence" had played "an active role" in awarding the construction contract; that, "since they were inexperienced in Cuba and had no permit to do business in that country," it was "seriously questionable" whether Merritt-Chapman and Scott should have been awarded any part of the contract; that Balmer and Moore was awarded the insurance brokerage contract "on the basis of political favoritism."

Subcommittee Members concurring in the report were Brooks, Lester Holtzman (D N.Y.), John E. Moss (D Calif.), Henry S. Reuss (D Wis.) and Porter Hardy Jr. (D Va.).

The Subcommittee's GOP minority protested that the majority findings were based almost entirely on the testimony of Cremer and that other vital witnesses were never called to testify. The three Republicans -- R. Walter Riehlman (N.Y.), J. Arthur Younger (Calif.) and Otto Krueger (N.D.) -- rejected all of the majority conclusions "simply because they have not been properly substantiated." They concluded that "the unwillingness of the majority to call and hear witnesses who could have corroborated raises the presumption that corroboration did not exist."

The Subcommittee Sept. 14 released a partial text of a memorandum by Randall Cremer. Cremer wrote that before the contract was awarded he called on Republican Chairman Hall June 3, 1954, and assured Hall "we have no Democrats in the higher brackets, and believe practically none in the lower." The memo said Cremer promised to "work with" Hall in placing bonds and insurance for the project "where it would do the most good" and to "do anything within reason."

Cremer's memorandum said he later called on James P. Pinkley, GSA official, and asked what was holding up the contract. Pinkley replied, according to Cremer, "the National Committee," and added he hoped "we can get Hall's clearance today -- thinks now this is essential."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Hall told reporters Sept. 14 he had "never cleared any contractor, big or small, for work with the government." Any suggestion that he did, he said, was "pure bunk."

HEARINGS RESUMED

The Subcommittee held further hearings Oct. 18-19. Republican Chairman Hall, invited to testify, said he was too busy to appear until after the election.

TESTIMONY -- Oct. 18 -- Cremer said "political pressure did get into this (contract) very early in the game and it was terrible." He said Hall had asked him if employees of the Frederick Snare Corp. had contributed to the Democratic party. Cremer said former GSA Administrator Mansure and Pinkley of the GSA had told him in the spring of 1954 that Hall felt Democratic companies had been favored for federal contracts under Democratic Administrations and it was now time to give Republican firms a chance.

Subcommittee investigators said that after the Snare firm and Merritt-Chapman and Scott were awarded the contract -- worth $500,000 to each of them -- officials of the Snare company increased their contributions to the Republican party from an average of $636 a year in seven previous years to $7,500 in 1954. Cremer said the increased contributions were made because it "looked important to elect a Republican Congress." He said six members of the Senate Appropriations Committee were responsible for Merritt-Chapman getting half the contract, adding Snare should have had it all.

Oct. 19 -- Mansure said he had taken to Hall in 1954 a list of six firms bidding for the nickel contract. He said his aim was to "forestall" later criticism of the contract award. Hall, Mansure said, had the mistaken impression that the Snare Corp. had been identified with past Democratic administrations and "he (Hall) didn't want a firm that had been in the political feed trough for 20 years."

Mansure denied telling Cremer his company had to make a political contribution to get the contract. He did say he had told Cremer one of Snare's difficulties was that there had "been no showing of Republicanism on the part of the Snare Co. in the past."

Mansure said he had been prodded into resigning his GSA post by Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams and Secretary of Interior Fred A. Seaton, at that time also a Presidential assistant, after he refused to fire career employees to make room for political appointees. He denied his resignation involved his failure to award government contracts to Republican firms.

UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES

Work of the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1956 included probes of Communists who had held government posts and an alleged Communist conspiracy in connection with securing and issuing passports. In July the Committee held hearings on a report, financed by the Fund for the Republic, on "blacklisting" in the entertainment industry.

The Committee Jan. 17 released its annual report (H Rept 1648) on Communism stating:

"The menace of Communism in America remains unabated; the Committee found out that 10 hitherto undisclosed Communist cells operated within the government; Communists have attempted to indoctrinate American youths in summer camps; radio and television networks continue to use the talents of Communist party members because of inadequate information and investigative facilities."

The report recommended:

Authority to use technical devices (such as wire taps) in "matters affecting the national security"; prosecuting willfully contradictory statements before federal bodies as perjury without making the federal government prove which statements were false; extending the statute of limitations for espionage; stiffening the penalties for conspiracy to overthrow the government to $20,000 in fines and 20 years imprisonment.

The House Jan. 31 adopted, by a roll-call vote of 385-1, a resolution (H Res 352) authorizing the Committee on Un-American Activities to spend up to $275,000 in the conduct of its investigations. The Committee was granted $225,000 in probe funds in 1955. There was no debate on the measure. Rep. Roy W. Wier (D Minn.), the lone dissenter, later said he had voted against giving the Committee more money because "they go out and smear people right and left, and then you have to go out and scrub it off." (For voting, see chart p. 186)

Communists in Government

HEARINGS -- Intermittently on Communist infiltration of the government.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 14 -- James E. Gorham, former chief of the Civil Aeronautics Board Routes Division, said he had been a member of the Communist party from 1934 to 1942. During that period Gorham said he was employed by the Federal Emergency Relief Agencies in New York and Washington, Railroad Retirement Board, Works Progress Administration, Securities and Exchange Commission and the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce's Subcommittee to Investigate Railroads, Holding Companies and Related Matters.

Gorham said during his 1934-38 service with the Senate Subcommittee it was headed by then-Sen. Harry S. Truman, but that Committee Chairman Burton K. Wheeler (D Mont.) actually ran the inquiry. Gorham said he resigned his CAB post Sept. 30, 1955, when he was subpenaed.

He said he did not know the current status of those who were members of Communist cells with him, but gave the Committee these names: FERA, in New York -- Louis Lehrman, Lawrence Elkind, Barbara Best; WPA -- Miss Edna Richter and her brother, Irving Richter; Marcel Kistin, Rebecca Pfferman, Sidney Katz, Bernard Greenberg; NRA -- Albert Blumberg, John Donovan, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rhine, Arthur Stein; SEC -- Meyer

Naigles, Doxey Wilkerson, Thomas Cox, Mrs. Polly Vibber, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Ball.

On the Subcommittee -- Herbert Fuchs, Samuel Konigsberg, Alfred Bernstein, Sylvia Soloff and Ellis Olin.

The Committee heard these witnesses invoke the Fifth Amendment when queried about past Communist affiliations: Irving Richter, Morris Levine and Miss Bertha Blair, Feb. 15; Henry Rhine and Marcel Kistin, Feb. 16; Joseph Robison, attorney for the American-Jewish Congress, who said he had not been a Communist since joining the Jewish Congress in 1946, Martin Kurasch, David Rein, Allan R. Rosenberg, Feb. 21;

Jacob H. Krug, Feb. 24; Mrs. Helen Hill and Mrs. Selma Rein, Feb. 28; Sidney and Julia Katz, Lawrence Elkind, Robert Ehrlich, Robert Greenberg, Feb. 29; Professor Lawrence R. LaVallee of Dickenson College (Pa.), Edwin S. Smith and Nathan Witt, March 1.

Feb. 23 -- Ruth Weyand, Washington and Chicago attorney, said she never had been a Communist. She said "prior to the time my interracial marriage became public in 1950, no one had ever accused me either publicly or privately of being a member of the Communist party so far as I am aware." Miss Weyand said she worked as an attorney for the National Labor Relations Board from 1938 to 1950 and never had been "subjected to any formal hearing on loyalty."

Entertainment Blacklisting

The Committee held hearings in July on a "Report on Blacklisting" in the entertainment industry, independently edited but financed by the Fund for the Republic.

According to the two-volume, 599-page report, "All the studios (in Hollywood) are now unanimous in their refusal to hire persons identified as Communist party members who have not subsequently testified in full before the House Un-American Activities Committee." In radio and television, the report said, "advertising agencies, networks, program packagers and sponsors all have a voice in deciding who will be used."

TESTIMONY -- July 10 -- Chairman Francis E. Walter (D Pa.) in an opening statement said the Committee "has for some time been concerned with ascertaining whether the Fund for the Republic stands as friend or foe in America's struggle against Communism." He said the report on blacklisting made "very serious charges against organizations and individuals who have been active in combatting the Communist threat in the entertainment industry.... It accuses them of having created -- for diverse motives -- a vast machinery of blacklisting which destroys the innocent as well as penalizing the guilty."

John Cogley, editor of the two-volume report and former editor of the Catholic lay magazine "Commonweal," defended the report. The report alleged the entertainment industry since World War II has been subjected to blacklisting practices and described an alleged "security clearance" system through which suspected performers could remove themselves from the blacklist. According to the report, the so-called "clearance men" were "often the same" individuals who initiated the charges. Cogley defended the report as a factual document and added: "I would resent heartily the implication that I was defending anyone or Communism in general. I am not putting forth any position of my own. I am only saying what happened to these people, and how they reacted." Cogley identified Arnold Forster, chief counsel of the B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League, as a "public relations expert" who, the report said, dealt successfully with a so-called "clearance ring." Cogley said Forster "was doing nothing he considered wrong -- he was merely trying to help people he thought unjustly accused."

July 11 -- Forster said his "concern with the quoted material (in the report) is that it is far from complete" and added: "From where I sat, the men who are referred to as clearance men were doing good, not evil."

James F. O'Neil, former national commander of the American Legion and editor of its monthly magazine, said the Legion "never engaged in clearance activities, never associated with blacklisting." He said the Legion was opposed to employment of entertainers identified with the "Communist apparatus."

Frederick T. Woltman, New York World Telegram and Sun reporter, and George Sokolsky, a columnist, denied that they had been "clearance men" as stated in the report. Sokolsky said the report suffered from "inadequate research, from either an unwillingness or an inability to get at all the facts and from a double standard of morals."

July 12 -- Vincent Hartnett, radio and television consultant, said he frequently helped to "rehabilitate" performers but was "never in the business of acting as a clearance man...." He said only about five percent of the Communists in the entertainment world had been uncovered. He termed it "dangerous slanting" to apply the word blacklisting to patriotic people who refused to hire Communists and sought to weed them out of the industry.

HUTCHINS PROTESTS INQUIRY

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- July 10 -- President Robert M. Hutchins of the Fund for the Republic said the Fund had "complete faith in the journalistic integrity of John Cogley" and his report. "The Fund," he said, "believes that this independent factual assessment of a major civil liberties problem has made a valuable contribution to the preservation of the Bill of Rights.... The Fund regards the subpenaing of Mr. Cogley...as an unprecedented invasion of freedom of thought and expression in the United States."

TESTIMONY -- July 13 -- Godfrey P. Schmidt, a New York attorney and president of Aware Inc., a private organization formed for the announced purpose of fighting Communism in the entertainment field, said the Fund report was a "political tract." Schmidt said "the Communist party high command would be glad to have a document like this come out every week."

July 17 -- At Philadelphia, actress Gale Sondergaard said her refusal to testify about alleged Communist activities hampered her movie career. She said she had appeared "in about 40 motion pictures, winning one Academy Award and the nomination for another." Since 1951, when she invoked the Fifth Amendment before the Committee, she said, she had not appeared in a single motion picture.

July 18 -- Actor Jack Gilford, also named by the Fund report as an example of entertainers denied work for political reasons, invoked the Fifth Amendment.

Mrs. Maureen Black Ogden of Short Hills, N.J., an investigator for the Fund for the Republic, defended the Fund's award of $5,000 to the Library Committee of the Plymouth Monthly Meeting of the Society of Friends. The award was made for what the Fund termed the Library Committee's "courageous and effective defense of democratic principles" in hiring Mrs. Mary Knowles after she had pleaded the Fifth Amendment in 1953 before the Senate Judiciary, Internal Security Subcommittee.

Mrs. Ogden said it was not her duty to probe the past of Mrs. Knowles. Walter said "the fact of the matter is neither you nor the Fund for the Republic was concerned whether she was a Communist." (Mrs. Knowles was cited for contempt of Congress April 30. See p. 588)

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- July 16 -- The Plymouth Monthly Meeting declined under the First Amendment to turn over minutes of its meetings to the Committee. In a letter to Chairman Walter the group said "...'Plymouth Meeting' is a religious society and its records protected by the First Amendment to the Constitution from subpena by a government body."

Passports

HEARINGS -- June 10-21 on an alleged Communist conspiracy in connection with securing and issuing passports.

TESTIMONY -- June 12 -- Walter said recent hearings revealed a pattern in the way American passports were secured by "Communists, those under Communist discipline and those used by Communists."

Paul Robeson, Negro singer, refused on the basis of the Fifth Amendment to say whether he was a member of the Communist party. He said refusal to issue him a passport was a denial of freedom which took place "because (Secretary of State John Foster) Dulles, (Sen. James O.) Eastland (D Miss.), (Rep.) Walter and their ilk oppose my views on colonial liberation, my resistance to oppression of Negro Americans and my burning desire for peace with all nations."

Otto Nathan, New York University economics professor, refused to tell the Committee whether an affidavit he submitted to the State Department in 1953 was true or false. In the affidavit, submitted in connection with a passport application, he swore he was not and had never been a Communist. He cited the First, Fourth and Ninth Amendments in refusing to answer the Committee's questions about his political beliefs.

June 21 -- Playwright Arthur Miller was questioned about passport applications he submitted in 1946, 1954 and 1956. He refused to answer questions about persons with whom he attended Communist party writers' meetings in 1947. "I am not protecting the Communists or the Communist party," he said. "I am trying to and I will protect my sense of myself. I could not use the name of another person and bring trouble on him."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- June 13 -- The Committee voted to ask the House to cite Robeson for contempt of Congress. It voted also to cite for contempt Clark Foreman of New York City, director of the Emergency Civil Liberties Committee, for failing to turn over his passport as directed. Later, the Committee recommended contempt citations of Nathan and Miller. These were adopted by the House July 25. No action was taken on Robeson and Foreman.

Communist Strategy

The Committee held hearings Sept. 10-11 on "the strategy and tactics of international Communism," taking testimony from Ernst Tillich, director of West Berlin's "Fighting Group Against Inhumanity."

It released two reports on Soviet tactics:

May 20 -- a study entitled, "The Great Pretense -- A Symposium on Anti-Stalinism and the 20th Congress of the Soviet Communist Party."

Sept. 23 -- the first volume of a symposium entitled, "Soviet Total War." It included statements on Communism by Eddie Rickenbacker, Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, AFL-CIO president George Meany and many others.

The Committee in November and December held hearings in Washington and Chicago on Communist efforts to influence immigration and security legislation. West Coast hearings focused on propaganda efforts dealing with the Far East.

INTERNAL SECURITY

The Internal Security Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee continued in 1956 its investigations of Communist influence in the United States and related security threats. Highlighting its hearings was testimony by a number of newsmen with former Communist affiliations (continued from 1955, see 1955 Almanac, p. 529).

The Subcommittee also questioned, at his request, Jacob K. Javits, New York attorney general and Republican candidate for the Senate, about statements that Communists helped his earlier political career. Javits was elected Nov. 6.

The Senate granted the Subcommittee $280,976.23 to carry out its investigations; it received $260,000 in 1955.

Press Communists

COMMITTEE -- Senate Judiciary, Internal Security Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 4-6 on Communism in the U.S. press.

BACKGROUND -- The Subcommittee June 29 and July 13-14, 1955 heard testimony from New York newsmen about past Communist party affiliations.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 4 -- James S. Glaser, copyreader for The New York Post, said he became a member of the Communist party 21 years ago. He said he was a copyreader for The New York Times when Communist party leaders "intoxicated me with flattery" and made him the managing editor of The Daily Worker, Communist newspaper. Party membership, he said, was a "dreadful mistake" which ended with his resignation.

Glaser termed himself still a socialist, an "archenemy of Communism." He protested that the Subcommittee was "placing him on exhibition" by quizzing him about his past but agreed to answer all questions.

Clayton Knowles, New York Times reporter, testified he joined a Communist party cell in 1937 at the Long Island Daily Press and quit the group "early in 1939." He said he left the party because "I made a bad mistake and rectified it as soon as I could."

Jerry Zalph, a Times proofreader for 20 years, challenged the Subcommittee's authority and invoked the First, Fifth, Ninth and Tenth Amendments in refusing to answer questions.

Samuel Weissman, for 20 years a member of the Times editorial and index department said, "I am not now a (party) member nor have I been a member in any way for the past seven years." He refused to answer other questions on Communism.

John T. McManus, listed as general manager of the National Guardian, invoked the Fifth Amendment on many questions on Communism. He was president of the New York Newspaper Guild from 1943 to 1947.

Allan James Aronson, listed as executive editor of the Guardian, invoked the Fifth Amendment and refused to say whether he held such a post.

Jan. 5 -- Otto Albertson, Times composing room employee, refused to tell the Subcommittee whether he was a member of the Communist party. He invoked the Fifth Amendment.

William A. Price, New York Daily News reporter, refused to say whether he was a Communist. He said, "I hold no office of public trust" and since "I draw no pay from government agencies the Subcommittee has no right to make an inquiry into my private affairs."

Don Mahoney, New York Daily Mirror rewrite man, when asked if he had ever been a member of the Communist party, said, "Not only am I not a member of the Communist party, but I have never in my life performed any subversive act of treason, espionage or sabotage." Mahoney invoked the Fifth Amendment when asked a second time about possible past connections with the party.

N.Y. TIMES PROTESTS

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Jan. 3 -- The American Civil Liberties Union urged the Subcommittee to "take special care to avoid even the impression that it is using its power to punish newspapers' editorial policies or the individual stories of their reporters."

Chairman James O. Eastland (D Miss.) said the statement by the ACLU "warns against offenses which they indicate they fear the Subcommittee will commit, while at the same time specifically stating the Committee has not yet committed any of these offenses."

Jan. 5 -- The Times in an editorial stated "it seems to us quite obvious that the Eastland investigation has been aimed with particular emphasis at the New York Times .... It seems to us to be a further conclusion that the Times has been singled out for this attack precisely because of the vigor of its opposition to many of the things for which Mr. Eastland, his colleague (Sen. William E.) Jenner (R Ind.) and the Subcommittee's counsel stand.... It (the Times) will continue to enlist good will against prejudice and confidence against fear."

Eastland said "the New York Times denies when no one has accused it.... The New York Times is not under investigation."

Counsel J. G. Sourwine said he was "flattered that the Times has seen fit to group me with two of the senior Members of the Senate...."

"TRAGIC MISTAKE" TO JOIN PARTY

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 6 -- Dr. Benjamin Fine, New York Times education editor, said he made the "tragic mistake" in 1935 of joining the Communist party for about a year while he was a graduate student at Columbia University.

Nathan Aleskovsky, former Sunday New York Times assistant book review editor, said he was not currently a Communist but refused to say if he ever had been one. He said his refusal was based on the First and Fifth Amendments.

Matilda Landsman, Times linotype operator, invoked the Fifth Amendment when asked whether she had conspired "to infiltrate and attempt to secure control of Typographical Union Local No. 6" in New York.

Jack Shafer, former Times copyreader, invoked the Fifth Amendment when asked if he was a Communist.

Seymour Peck, Times Sunday magazine staffer, said he had been a Communist from 1935 to 1949 but refused to reveal the names of former fellow Communists because it might "unnecessarily damage other persons whose activities...were in no way unlawful or dangerous to our national institutions." He said the Subcommittee's questions were outside its jurisdiction but did not plead the Fifth Amendment.

Robert Shelton, Times copyreader, refused to answer if he was a member of the Communist party on grounds the questions invaded his private rights set forth in the First Amendment.

Alden Whitman, Times copyreader, said he was a Communist until 1948 but refused to name party associates. He did not invoke the Fifth Amendment.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Jan. 6 -- Chairman Eastland and Vice Chairman Jenner said the hearings had "disclosed...a significant effort on the part of the Communists to penetrate leading American newspapers... We feel confident that the American press will prove fully competent to deal with the problem in its own American way."

Subcommittee Member Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (D Mo.) said "I've some misgivings and doubts about calling individuals" whose activities in the Communist party were of a brief duration and went back 15 or 20 years. He said none of the Subcommittee Members had been notified who the witnesses were before they were subpenaed. "I want to be sure we do not do injustice or cause unnecessary embarassment or humilation if (the witness) is completely rehabilitated and has no new information to give this committee."

William A. Price, New York Daily News reporter, and Dan Mahoney, New York Daily Mirror rewrite man, were fired from their jobs for refusing to tell the Subcommittee whether they had been Communists.

FOUR CITED FOR CONTEMPT

May 10 -- The Senate by voice vote adopted resolutions citing four newsmen for contempt of Congress because of their refusal to answer Subcommittee questions about Communism. Eastland said they had withheld "pertinent information."

The resolutions and the persons they cited:

S Res 253 -- Robert Shelton, a New York Times copyreader; S Res 254 -- Seymour Peck, desk man on The Times Sunday magazine; S Res 256 -- Alden Whitman, Times copyreader; S Res 257 -- William A. Price, former New York Daily News reporter.

The four men were indicted by a federal grand jury in Washington, D.C., Nov. 26.

Javits Hearing

HEARING -- Sept. 5 on N.Y. attorney general Jacob K. Javits, ex-Rep. (R N.Y., 1947-55) and 1956 GOP candidate for the Senate.

BACKGROUND -- Dr. Bella Dodd, a former Communist leader active in New York, June 14, 1956 testified in closed session that she had been told in 1945 or 1946 that a Jacob K. Javits had just come to New York from the West Coast and that "some of our people were very much interested in Mr. Javits' political future."

Julien G. Sourwine, former chief counsel for the Subcommittee and unsuccessful candidate for Nevada's Democratic Senatorial nomination, said in an August press release that Javits had been "mixed up" with a man who became an editor of the Communist Daily Worker.

Javits Aug. 3 requested a hearing before the Subcommittee to rebut charges of past associations with Communists. On Aug. 30 he said the charges were "vicious rumors" spread to prevent him from getting the New York Republican nomination for Senator. At the same time Javits made a "blanket denial" that he had ever been a member of or sympathetic to the Communist party.

TESTIMONY -- Sept. 5 -- Javits said his meeting with Dr. Dodd was made in connection with his first Congressional primary race: "I got...a long list of people that I ought to see, to get educated about what is going on in New York...in this period I went to see Dr. Dodd...(to) get educated about teachers.... I was told she had some connection...(with) the Teachers Union." He said he did not know then of her Communist ties.

Javits said he had exchanged some "pleasantries" with Frederick V. Field, at the time a Daily Worker editor, at the United Nations conference in San Francisco in April-May, 1945. "I may have seen him around the conference to say 'Hi' to -- that is all I know about Fred Field."

JAVITS PRAISED, ELECTED

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Sept. 5 -- President Eisenhower told his press conference he had never heard Javits "say a word...that wasn't that of a fine American."

Javits Sept. 10 was chosen for the GOP Senate nomination by the Republican State Committee Convention. He was elected Nov. 6 over NYC Mayor Robert F. Wagner, by a 3,723,933 to 3,263,159 vote.

Other Hearings

The Subcommittee also held hearings intermittently in 1956 on the scope of Soviet activity in the U.S. Witnesses included several former secret agents of the USSR and reporters for the Soviet news agency, Tass.

On May 1 and Oct. 22-24, the Subcommittee investigated two incidents in which Soviet officials were charged with pressuring citizens to leave the U.S. and return to Russia.

The Subcommittee Oct. 16 released testimony by William B. Stephenson, chairman of the expiring Commission on Subversive Activities of the Territory of Hawaii. Stephenson said most Communist activities in Hawaii were carried out by officials of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union and the United Public Workers, both of which were expelled by the Congress of Industrial Organizations in 1950. He said the ILWU, headed by Harry Bridges and convicted Communist Jack W. Hall, controlled the majority of longshoremen, sugar and pineapple workers on the islands.

The Subcommittee held hearings in Honolulu Nov. 30-Dec. 6 which centered on the ILWU's activities. Bridges charged the hearings were an attack on the union by Chairman Eastland and an opening gun in the Southerner's battle against statehood for Hawaii.

PERMANENT INVESTIGATIONS

East-West trade and armed forces textile procurement highlighted the activities of the Senate Government Operations' Permanent Investigations Subcommittee in 1956. Out of the textile probe grew demands for an investigation into the activities of Murray M. Chotiner, California attorney and 1952 campaign manager for Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

East-West Trade

The Subcommittee in February and March held hearings on East-West trade, issued a report charging the Administration with violating "the spirit, if not the letter" of the 1951 Battle Act in its 1954 relaxation of trade controls.

BACKGROUND -- The Mutual Defense Assistance Control Act of 1951 (Battle Act) was designed to cut off exports of so-called strategic commodities to the Communist orbit. Aid to friendly nations that violated controls on such trade was to be terminated.

The Battle Act embargo list, established unilaterally by the U.S., is only one of several lists used to control free-world exports to the Communist orbit. U.S. exports are controlled by the Department of Commerce, under authority of the Export Control Act of 1949. Exporters must secure export licenses from Commerce before they can ship goods out of the U.S.

Principal means of controlling exports to the Soviet bloc, however, is an agreement between the U.S. and 14 other free-world nations including most of the NATO powers, Japan and West Germany. Embargo lists enforced by this group are similar to, although not the same as, the Battle Act and Commerce Department lists.

All three lists were revised in 1954, the net effect being to reduce the number of embargoed items and to tighten controls on the remainder. Announcing changes in the Battle Act list Aug. 26, 1954, Harold E. Stassen, then Director of the Foreign Operations Administration, said:

"Although the Battle Act embargo list applies to shipments to every part of the Soviet bloc, the present changes reduce the scope of controls only on trade with the U.S.S.R. and its European satellites. This is because the international embargo on strategic trade with Communist China under the United Nations resolution of May 18, 1951, is much more extensive than the Battle Act lists and has not been relaxed by the cooperating nations." The U.S. itself prohibits all exports to and imports from Communist China and North Korea. Otherwise, however, free-world imports from the Soviet bloc are not subject to restriction.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 15-March 29, intermittently.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 15 -- Chairman John L. McClellan (D Ark.) said the Subcommittee had received "very disturbing" information on the extent of strategic trade to the Soviet bloc since controls were relaxed in 1954. He said the executive branch had "thus far declined to give to the Subcommittee the names of government employees and officials who made recommendations and decisions (or) to make available...certain documents."

Ralph R. Baldenhofer, vice president of Thompson Grinder Machine Co., Springfield, Ohio, said machine tools "essential to building up a war machine" had been removed from the international embargo list. Sen. Stuart Symington (D Mo.) said some tools taken off the list could handle up to 90 percent of a war plant's work.

Feb. 16 -- John H. Williams, a Defense Department machine tool specialist, said the U.S. agreed to relax embargoes on British sales to Russia of machine tools "whose use for peacetime purposes would be the exception." He said such sales amounted to "enabling them to overtake us" in arms production.

Feb. 17 -- Timothy C. May, Supply and Logistics Office, Defense Department, said he could not discuss details of the embargo list of strategic metals and those taken off it because it was secret information.

DOCUMENTS REFUSED

Feb. 20 -- John B. Hollister, International Cooperation Administration director, read a letter from Under Secretary of State Herbert Hoover Jr. agreeing to make public items removed from the international embargo list in 1954. Hoover refused to transmit certain documents demanded by the Subcommittee on grounds it would be "contrary to the public interest" and a violation of the rights of the executive branch.

Philip A. Ray, Commerce Department general counsel, said he could not produce documents of an interagency committee on trade controls because it would violate executive privilege. Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) said Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks should be subpenaed to produce the information and if he failed to do so "contempt should be voted and the case should go to the grand jury."

March 6 -- Weeks wrote the Subcommittee it would be "harmful to the public interest" to make public the documents requested.

Herbert Blackman, Commerce Department economist, said he had served as chairman of the Joint Operating Committee which advised on the 1954 Paris negotiations which resulted in agreement to allow more goods to be sent behind the Iron Curtain. He said the JOC was told to "come up with reduced commodity coverage" when they started to review the embargo list.

March 7 -- Park L. Bedford of the Army Signal Corps said one of the items taken off the embargo list in 1954 could be described as "the heart of our military communications system."

George A. Grimm, chief of the Utilities Division in the Defense Department, said the published British lists of disembargoed goods showed that "very little that amounts to very much" was currently under embargo. On the lists of released goods, he said, were electric generators up to 60,000 kilowatts, "very important" to atomic energy production, and mercury power rectifiers for producing aluminum.

PRESIDENT APPROVED CONTROL REVISION

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- March 7 -- President Eisenhower said he did not believe the 1954 embargo relaxation was a mistake. He said that this country could not absorb more European production at the end of the Korean war and did not want to keep giving cash grants to sustain Europe.

TESTIMONY -- March 8 -- Weeks quoted a letter to McClellan signed by himself, Under Secretary Hoover, Assistant Secretary of Defense Gordon Gray and Stassen: "The revision of the international control lists which occurred in August, 1954, was made upon the insistence of Western European countries for a relaxation of the controls after the ending of active hostilities in Korea and Indochina. The final action was taken with the concurrence of the Department(s) of State...Defense...Commerce; the Battle Act Administrator and with the approval of the President."

John C. Borton of the Commerce Department said that to achieve any controls at all the Paris agreements "had to be unanimous." He said that without U.S. concessions "the whole fabric of controls might have gone in the ash can."

March 9 -- Stassen said the pressure from Western allies reached a point where "it was no longer possible to hold the higher level of controls.... The entire control method would run grave danger of falling apart...unless the lists were narrowed." Despite the fact that "many commodities which the United States wished to keep under control" were dropped from the lists, "the results of the 1954 negotiations were to the net advantage of the United States and the free world."

Stassen said "it would serve the enemy" to make public details of the international embargo list. "The mere fact we've found something and control it might tip off the Communists we have it." "Don't discount" the value of the embargoes still in effect, he said.

March 26 -- Three witnesses -- Weeks, Hoover and Hollister -- refused on security grounds, .o produce documents or testify in public about the U.S. role in reshaping East-West trade policies. All said that only in a closed hearing would they give details of the 1954 agreement.

Asked by Sen. McCarthy why the U.S. should continue foreign aid to allied nations selling strategic war materials to Russia, Hoover said: "There are many interesting facets to the shipment of goods to the Communist countries...not the least...is the fact that the Chinese Nationalists are shipping to the Communist Chinese quite a number of millions of dollars worth of goods every year." Hoover said it would be "a very disadvantageous move on our part" to cut off all aid to allies who were "in any way shipping materials to the Communists."

March 29 -- Hoover, in a prepared statement , said he had not intended to convey an impression there was any direct trade between Nationalist and Communist China. "This trade took place through Hong Kong (British Crown Colony). There is no evidence of direct commercial contact...." he said.

McClellan said the Subcommittee had declined to accept custody of "classified" documents offered at the closed hearing by Hoover. McCarthy said he would not feel bound to keep secret the offered material, which included lists of items embargoed for sale to Russia by the Western allies.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- April 12 -- Weeks said reports that the Administration had placed a ban on making East-West trade information public were a "complete misinterpretation of the facts." He said he did not intend to make public "the strategic reasons why our allies do or do not control specific products" because of national security and defense reasons.

REPORT RELEASED

ACTION -- The Subcommittee July 18 filed a report (S Rept 2621) on the relaxation of controls over East-West trade. The report said the Administration had "violated the spirit, if not the letter" of the Battle Act that called for termination of aid to countries knowingly shipping strategic goods to Communist nations. The report recommended that the Act be thoroughly re-evaluated, and either repealed or amended to safeguard its intent.

Other conclusions of the report: Stassen was to be "severely criticized" for misrepresenting facts in his 1954 report on Battle Act revisions, and because he was "an arrogant, evasive and uncandid" Subcommittee witness. The Administration had "disregarded the clear intent of Congress" by going along with East-West trade in "highly strategic materials."

A minority report filed by Sens. Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.) and George H. Bender (R Ohio) said the majority gave "a wholly erroneous picture" and "deliberately fails to relate the entire program." The majority report was signed by: McClellan, Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.), Symington, Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D N.C.) and McCarthy.

Army Textile Contracts

The Subcommittee in 1956 followed up its 1955 probe of Navy cap procurement with hearings on textile procurement practices in the Army Quartermaster Corps, which brought in the name of Murray M. Chotiner.

BACKGROUND -- As a result of the 1955 hearings, the Navy and Army filed claims against contractors totalling $511,475 -- more than half of it against Harry Lev, Chicago hat manufacturer. (1955 Almanac, p. 514) Lev and eight other persons were indicted on charges of conspiracy March 22, 1956.

HEARINGS -- April 10-May 29, intermittently.

TESTIMONY -- April 10 -- Chairman McClellan said "millions of dollars of government and municipal bonds have been purchased by certain contractors using fictitious names or names of third parties who knew nothing of these purchases. We intend to inquire...whether the bonds were used as payoffs to government personnel... or...to avoid income taxes."

Testimony disclosed that Joseph Abrams, a blacklisted government clothing contractor, and Samuel and Herman Kravitz, N.J. clothing manufacturers, bought and sold $9 million worth of bonds under 28 accounts.

Gregory Harrington, who sold the bonds to Abrams, said Abrams set up one account for himself and the other 27 in names of others. Harrington testified that the only one he met beside Abrams was Herman Kravitz. He said Abrams told him the other people with accounts "didn't understand bond transactions very well."

April 11 -- Jack Schwartz, former business associate of Abrams, and Attilio Musto, head of Fashions Inc., testified they knew nothing about $198,000 worth of bonds purchased in their names by Abrams. Schwartz said that a "J. Schwartz" signed on a $558.40 check was "definitely not" his endorsement.

Charles P. Wood, treasurer of the Leonia, N.J., Bank and Trust Co., said that Herman Kravitz had opened a $40,000 account under the assumed name of E.W. Randal. He said he became "suspicious" when he noticed that all deposits had been made in the form of bond coupons.

April 18 -- Abrams refused to tell whether or why he allegedly bought nearly $6 million worth of bonds while making uniforms for the armed services. Abrams and two former associates, Murray Berman and Harold Hyman, invoked the Fifth Amendment. They said they were under indictment in a New York federal court.

Abrams said he never gave any bonds to government personnel. He said he believed that Berman at one time bought $2,000 worth of bonds for a Quartermaster Corps purchasing agent in New York. He said Berman told him it was only a "service" since the agent had paid for the bonds.

April 19 -- Abrams said he had "engaged in no criminal activities" and continued to invoke the Fifth Amendment, as did Samuel Leider, clothing manufacturer.

April 24 -- Nathan C. Lieberman, New Jersey clothing manufacturer, refused to say whether he ever made any "pay-offs" to government employees in connection with military uniform contracts.

Anthony Defero, an associate of Lieberman, said Lieberman took money from a special account in a New York bank of the firm "without authority." Defero said Lieberman admitted withdrawing $100,000 to reimburse himself for contract expenses. Robert F. Kennedy, Subcommittee counsel, said he estimated total withdrawals from the New York bank at more than $1 million.

CHOTINER HIRED BY WITNESSES

Murray N. Kinnel, a New York City accountant who kept books on the special account, said the heavy withdrawals did not make him suspicious. Kinnel said "M. Chotiner, a West Coast lawyer," received a $5,000 fee as counsel for Samuel and Herman Kravitz to defend them in 1953 from charges of stealing U.S. clothing material. Kennedy said Chotiner was "the same Murray Chotiner" who was Vice President Richard M. Nixon's campaign manager in 1952. Kinnel said he believed Chotiner was once counsel for Joseph Abrams "in connection with the theft of government-furnished materials."

April 25 -- Herman Kravitz, Atlantic City garment manufacturer and real estate operator, refused to tell the Subcommittee why he hired Chotiner, a Los Angeles resident, as his lawyer in 1953. Kravitz invoked the Fifth Amendment 148 times. Samuel Kravitz and George Klass, a Kravitz associate, also used the Amendment.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- April 25 -- McClellan said Chotiner would appear before the Subcommittee. (In addition to the 1952 campaign, Chotiner acted as Nixon's 1950 Senatorial campaign manager, was an aide to Sen. William F. Knowland (R Calif.) in his 1946 and 1952 Senatorial campaigns, and to GOP National Chairman Leonard W. Hall at an April, 1956, Washington, D.C., conference of Republican state chairmen and national committeemen. On March 22, 1956, Chotiner wrote to radio and television stations at what he said was "the request of the Vice President" to deny a report that Nixon and President Eisenhower met at Thomasville, Ga., to discuss Nixon's future.)

TESTIMONY -- May 3 -- Chotiner said he never had tried to "use any influence" in behalf of clients who were in trouble with the government. He said he had been counsel for the Kravitzes and Abrams, had received $6,000 from Herman Kravitz but no fee from Abrams.

He said he had conferred with Rex A. Collins, chief of the Justice Department's General Crime Section, on Feb. 17, 1955, to see whether the government would be willing to drop a charge that Kravitz had filed a false affidavit, if Kravitz in return would drop his appeal from a conviction on charges of the "theft" of furs provided by the government for the manufacture of parka hoods for U.S. troops. He had also, he said, called someone in the Justice Department in an attempt to settle the government's claim against Kravitz for the value of the furs.

His work for Abrams, Chotiner said, involved a claim by Abrams that the government owed him $30,000. He said he had conferred with the Justice Department "five or six times" about the Abrams case.

WHITE HOUSE CALLS

Chotiner said that "on one or two occasions" telephone calls were made for him at the White House to get information about pending cases or to set up appointments. He identified the officials who made these calls as Presidential Assistant Maxwell M. Rabb and former Eisenhower patronage aide, Charles F. Willis Jr. "At no time," he said, "have I ever used the name of the Vice President in connection with the name of any client."

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- May 3 -- Presidential Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said there was "not the slightest" thing wrong with Chotiner contacting Rabb and Willis. Hagerty said the calls the White House aides made for Chotiner involved airline cases which eventually went against Chotiner's clients: North American Airlines and California Central Airlines. He said neither Rabb nor Willis did anything to help or hinder the cases' outcome.

May 4 -- President Eisenhower told his press conference there was no reason to believe any of Chotiner's activities violated Administration rules of ethics.

May 7 -- Vice President Nixon said it would be "improper" for him to discuss Chotiner while the investigation was underway.

TESTIMONY -- May 9 -- Witnesses said over $19 million worth of uniform contracts with Kravitz-owned companies were being investigated.

May 23 -- Miss Jane Mackey, former head of the New York firm of J. Mackey & Son, Inc., said she paid $27,745 in "kick-backs" in 1951 to Sol Schlesinger, owner of the Ideal Uniform Cap Co., who figured in 1955 hearings. (1955 Almanac, p. 515)

John Wilson Roberts, one of Miss Mackey's former employees and a resident of the Bahamas, submitted an unsworn statement stating that he heard Schlesinger say he needed the kick-backs to pay off Col. Louis H. Shirley, a military procurement officer. Gennaro D'Adamo, chief Quartermaster Corps clothing inspector, said Schlesinger received a contract for 500,000 caps in 1950 from Shirley despite D'Adamo's protests.

May 25 -- Schlesinger testified under oath that it was "entirely untrue and a lie" that the six checks totaling $27,745 paid him in 1951 by J. Mackey & Son, Inc., were for "kickbacks" to pay off military procurement officers. He said the payments were for defective visors. Schlesinger refused to produce records and accounts of his company, pleading the Fifth Amendment.

Col. Shirley testified under oath he had not received any money from Schlesinger "or from anyone."

May 29 -- Leon I. Radin, a certified public accountant from Freeport, L.I., said he could not find evidence that more than about $300 worth of defective visors had been delivered to Schlesinger.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- June 2 -- Republican Chairman Hall said the GOP National Committee would conduct the 1956 campaign without the services of Murray Chotiner. Hall said the National Committee "is now staffed by experienced personnel sufficient to help meet the campaign staff problems of both the Presidential and Vice Presidential nominees."

CHOTINER PROTESTS PROBE

June 4 -- Chotiner said the Democrats, in probing his law practice, had started a "fishing expedition" aimed at Nixon and President Eisenhower. He said the Investigations Subcommittee was "conducting a campaign of vilification by innuendo and scare tactics through releasing statements to the press that my law practice is being investigated without stating what charges, if any, have been made against me."

"An investigation," he declared, "which started out to probe Army uniform contracts, and inadvertently ran across my name as having been paid a fee for an entirely unrelated legal matter, has now switched to investigating Murray Chotiner."

June 9 -- Chotiner wrote all lawyers in Congress protesting investigation of his law practice. He said Subcommittee Chairman McClellan asked him for a list of cases he had handled since January 1953 which had any thing to do with the federal government, and how he got the clients. He said "no lawyer in the United States who is prominent in political activities is safe from similar" investigation if this "most dangerous precedent" is set.

HEARING -- June 29 -- In executive session Chotiner reportedly was questioned about his contacts with government officials.

After the session, Chotiner told newsmen the Subcommittee had subjected him to "abuse," and that investigators had ransacked his files and invaded the financial records of his relatives. Sen. George H. Bender (R Ohio) said "this is obviously a smear on the Eisenhower Administration."

PUBLIC HEARINGS VOTED, POSTPONED

ACTION -- The Subcommittee July 20 voted 4-3 along party lines to hold public hearings on Chotiner's activities.

Chairman McClellan Aug. 4 said he would not make a decision on whether to hold the hearings until after the political nominating conventions. Later, he postponed a decision until after the November elections.

CLOSED HEARING HELD

HEARING -- Nov. 17 in Los Angeles, Calif., in closed session, on the activities of Chotiner.

TESTIMONY -- Nov. 17 -- Ralph A. McClure, a tax consultant, told reporters after leaving the hearing room that he had testified on an $18,000 tax reduction Chotiner had obtained for a client. McClure said Chotiner had effected the cut after the case had been officially closed by the Internal Revenue Bureau through negotiation with the Bureau's Southern California division. "It was the most mystifying experience of my 28 years in the tax consultant field," McClure said.

Frank Rivera, Ventura county rancher for whom the cut was obtained, said he testified that Chotiner got the reduction by pointing out an error to income tax officials in Washington.

Albert J. Chotiner, Chotiner's brother and law partner, said he believed he was called as a witness because "they think clients paid me money to hold for Murray since his fees were so reasonable."

GOVERNMENT INFORMATION

A Special Subcommittee of the House Government Operations Committee in November, 1955 began an investigation of the information policies of federal departments and agencies. Chairman John E. Moss Jr. (D Calif.) said his Subcommittee "was created because of increasing complaints of the government withholding information. There has been an increasing trend to withhold -- not dramatic news -- but little bits here and there.... Add it all up: the total becomes staggering."

The Subcommittee held intermittent hearings throughout 1956 and released an interim report (H Rept 2947) July 27. The report recommended that Congress establish uniform rules on information practices, require full disclosure of information (with certain exceptions, defined by statute) and subject withholding of information to judicial review.

According to the Subcommittee, one of the greatest accomplishments of its first year of activity was in forcing departments and agencies, notably the Defense Department, to give serious thought to their information policies -- first step toward the elimination of "censorship by whim." The Subcommittee also was instrumental in bringing about remedial action in some 20 areas where specific information abuses had been charged.

Background

Government secrecy long has troubled Members of Congress and since the early days of the Republic they have been trying to check its spread. The question has two facets: withholding of information from the press and public, and withholding of information from Congress itself. Following are brief descriptions of laws and other documents relating to this dual problem:

• 5 USC 22 -- This statute, which has remained unchanged since its enactment in 1789, authorizes department heads to make regulations for their departments covering conduct of employees, rules of business and "the custody, use and preservation of the records, papers and property" of the department. It was originally a housekeeping statute, but the words "custody, use and preservation" have been cited by executive agencies which wished to avoid disclosure of information and limit the availability of records.

• 5 USC 1002 -- This, the public information section of the Administrative Procedure Act of 1946, governs publication of information, rules, opinions, orders and public records in the Federal Register. The statute requires such publication except in cases "requiring secrecy in the public interest" or "relating solely to the internal management of an agency." The statute is vaguely worded and leaves interpretation to official discretion.

• 18 USC 1905 -- This section of the criminal code provides penalties for disclosure of confidential government information "in any manner or to any extent not authorized by law."

• Executive Order 10501 -- This order, issued by President Eisenhower Nov. 5, 1953, provided for "safeguarding official information in the interests of the defense" of the U.S. It established three categories of classification -- top secret, secret and confidential -- to govern dissemination of official information "which requires protection in the interests of national defense." Following are the criteria for each category:

Top secret -- information of "paramount" defense importance which, if released, could result in "exceptionally grave damage to the nation."

Secret -- information which, if released, could result in "serious damage to the nation."

Confidential -- information which, if released, could be "prejudicial to the defense interests of the nation." The order established rules for handling classified information and revising classifications and took away document-classifying authority from 28 agencies. It also provided that the President would designate a member of his staff to consider complaints from non-governmental sources regarding operation of the program.

• President's Letter of May 17, 1954 -- During the height of the Army-McCarthy hearings in 1954, President Eisenhower wrote a letter to Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson in which he forbade testimony concerning certain conversations and communications between employees in the executive branch. The letter was accompanied by a supporting memorandum of precedents from Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. The order was based generally on the premise that "in the public interest," members of the executive branch must feel free to consult and advise candidly without the prospect of public inquiry into such confidential and "candid" give-and-take. The President said he was not restricting testimony concerning direct communication among "principals" in the Army-McCarthy controversy. (1954 Almanac, p. 353)

Brownell's memorandum cited precedents, from Presidents Washington through Truman, to support executive refusal of information to Congress. It also said the courts had "uniformly held that the President and the heads of departments have an uncontrolled discretion to withhold the information and papers in the public interest."

1955 Hearings

COMMITTEE -- House Government Operations, Special Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Nov. 7, 1955 -- Nov. 13, 1956, on suppression of government information.

TESTIMONY -- Nov. 7, 1955 -- Chairman J. Russell Wiggins of the freedom of information committee, American Society of Newspaper Editors, said editors were "disturbed by the withholding of information in many areas of government.... We think it due to the size of government; to the emigration of governmental power from publicly operated legislative and judicial agencies to secretly operated administrative agencies; to the declining faith in the wisdom of the people which is an aspect of this generation's counter-revolution against free institutions; to the requirements of national military security which have increased steadily since World War I."

Secrecy permitted by Executive Order 10501 (Nov. 5, 1953) "has proven to be infectious and contagious," he said, and matters which officials admitted did not fit security classifications "have been withheld."

Richard W. Slocum, American Newspaper Publishers Association president, suggested that Congress write into legislation "an affirmative expression" of the public's right to know what is going on in government. He said publishers were concerned about "the attitude" of the Justice Department in an antitrust action involving advertising practices of ANPA. He said ANPA permitted the FBI to examine its files and agreed to change its advertising practices where necessary. It was understood, he said, that when the government's study was finished, and "before definitive decisions" were made, ANPA would be consulted. "Instead of that promise being kept...," Slocum said, ANPA was advised it would be sued or else could negotiate a consent decree.

James S. Pope, executive editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, said "no matter how lousy the press is, there is never any justification for closing (its) sources of information," added that individuals still had the basic right to information. As the size of the government had increased, he continued, the attitude that "news belongs to the people in government rather than the people" had become "the most frightening factor of all." He called this "arrogance and...contempt for the public."

James Reston, chief of the New York Times Washington bureau, said news suppression was not the only problem, but "a growing tendency" by government officials to "manage" news might do more harm. A "considerable effort," he said, was made by U.S. officials at the August, 1955 Geneva conference to give "an optimistic flavor" to conference developments. Later, when it was believed this was "having a bad effect," the government changed its tack, he said.

Nov. 8 -- Chairman Philip Young of the Civil Service Commission said the Commission's policy was to give its employees freedom "to discuss public information.... They are encouraged and expected to do so." He said the Commission sought to "foster a broader news interest in our activities and objectives" but its information program was "not a propaganda campaign." He said information was not withheld "simply because it may not be favorable to the Commission."

"INHERENT POWER" TO WITHHOLD NEWS

Young and CSC Counsel Lawrence V. Meloy said the Commission would answer any "reasonable" request for information but reserved the right to determine what was "reasonable." They said CSC had "inherent power" under the Constitution to withhold information from Congress, the press, and the public. "The inherent power of the executive branch of the government to carry out administrative functions" and power Congress granted CSC to make regulations "necessary and proper in the administration of those laws within its jurisdiction" were cited as additional backing for their stand.

Nov. 9 -- Assistant Postmaster General Eugene J. Lyons said the long established practice of publishing names of eligible applicants for Post Office Department jobs was reversed in 1954 to save ineligible candidates from "embarrassment."

Abe McGregor Goff, Post Office solicitor, said the Department regarded existing law as a mandate to make all information available to the public. He said there were specific exceptions on confidential matters not in the public interest to reveal. He said the Department's policy was "inherent in the very nature of our government" because it was "established on the principle of the freest possible exchange of information."

Under Secretary of Treasury H. Chapman Rose said the Treasury had "no reservations about the public's right to know, with a minimum of restriction, what its government is doing and why." He said the Treasury would ask Congress for authority to publicize applications by foundations for tax-exempt status. He said Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey "believed that inasmuch as the basic reason for exempting these organizations from tax is that they serve a public...purpose, it is... proper that their applications for tax-exempt status be available for public inspection."

ADVISORY COMMITTEE SECRECY

Nov. 10 -- Under Secretary of Agriculture True D. Morse said "we have been studying" the "problem" of releasing news about advisory committees "and plan to develop a more suitable arrangement for serving the press...."

Harry E. Resseguie of Fairchild Publications, Inc. said the Agriculture Department "has been notoriously dilatory in making available...information about the meetings of these (advisory) committees." He said that in 1955 Secretary Ezra Taft Benson upheld refusals to release committee recommendations. The Labor Department did not make available "any information at all" on industry advisory conferences, he said. Advisory committee attitudes had illustrated "both...arrogance...and... secrecy," he said.

Morse said opening of all advisory committee meetings to newsmen "ought to be examined very thoroughly in the interest of good government." He said closed sessions were advisable because recommendations made might influence sensitive commodity markets, and frank discussion would be hampered if reporters were present.

Rod Kreger, information chief of the Civil Aeronautics Board, said the CAB preferred to keep board decisions secret and had "sent memos around" to staff members warning against information leaks.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Nov. 18 -- Chairman Moss said his Subcommittee thought laws should be enacted to unfreeze the flow of information from agencies. He said the hearings uncovered "a dangerous and surprising concept -- an assertion by government departments that they intend to protect the public by not letting the people know what is going on."

Nov. 19 -- Chairman Pat Munroe of the committee of newsmen accredited to Congressional press galleries submitted a statement saying, "If Congress corrects its own failings in this field of news then it will be in a position to criticize the bureaucrats who may want to cover up." He said secrecy surrounded Congressional junkets and payrolls.

William K. Hutchinson, chief of the International News Service Washington bureau, recommended creation of an impartial council to set restrictions on government news.

1956 Hearings

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 13, 1956 -- R. Karl Honaman, former Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Public Affairs, said he fully agreed with a March, 1955 Defense Department directive regarding withholding of information which did not "constitute a constructive contribution to the primary mission of the Department of Defense." Honaman said the directive was intended mainly to suppress interservice rivalry.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Jan. 20 -- The Civil Service Commission directed its employees "to assist in the task of keeping the public informed." The new directive replaced one which advised CSC employees information about agency affairs was "the property of the government" and could not be disclosed without authorization.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 26 -- Chairman Anthony F. Arpaia of the Interstate Commerce Commission said making railroad accident reports confidential would lead to better reporting from the railroads. Arpaia said railroads had complained they were subjected to harassment by lawyers, and some had acknowledged they have hedged on accident reports.

Edward Burns, assistant to the director of the Bureau of Transportation in the ICC, said the railroads said they could make more candid and detailed reports of accidents "if the facts they put down were not spread all over the country." Burns said there had been widespread misuse of the information.

The ICC and CSC admitted they erred in citing as grounds for withholding information a 1789 law which authorized heads of executive departments to prescribe regulations for "preservation of the records" of their departments. (The Subcommittee contended earlier the law did not apply to either ICC or CSC, but only to executive departments such as State, Justice or Agriculture.)

Jan. 27 -- Chairman Jerome K. Kuykendall of the Federal Power Commission said a Congressman with access to his agency's inner workings could make $1 million profit in two years on the stock market.

Chairman Boyd Leedom of the National Labor Relations Board said his agency gave the press and public "full information" on all its activities. Subcommittee members praised Leedom for his "fish-bowl philosophy."

Jan. 31 -- Chairman J. Sinclair Armstrong of the Securities and Exchange Commission said the SEC, though an independent agency, was bound by President Eisenhower's 1954 letter stating the executive department may withhold certain confidential matters from disclosure. "The principles of law in the May 17 letter were deemed applicable to SEC," Armstrong said.

Byron D. Woodside, director of the SEC's Corporation Finance Division, said "it would be impossible to have any frank and forthright discussion of a business problem ...if everything that was said...became a matter of public scrutiny."

Moss said "we have hopes the emphasis will change to where you would have to justify withholding."

SCIENTIFIC SECRECY DEPLORED

March 7 -- Lloyd V. Berkner, president of Associated Universities Inc., a nonprofit organization of nine northeastern universities which have pooled research facilities, said that government secrecy delayed U.S. northern air defenses "by at least one, and more probably two years." He said the lack of antisubmarine radar, night fighters and means of extensive sea search at the start of World War II were "directly attributable to the technological ignorance and delays resulting from secrecy."

Elmer Hutchisson of the Case Institute of Technology said an elite corps of scientists should be created to decide what scientific information should be kept secret. He said government security practices are so distasteful to scientists that it is "common practice" for them to turn down military research grants to take jobs on "free" research, "even at less pay."

March 8 -- Harold C. Urey of the University of Chicago, one of the scientists who helped develop the atomic bomb, said that "a complete exchange of information" between the United States and Russia "would result in very little valuable information being acquired by either."

March 9 -- Prof. Malcolm C. Henderson of Catholic University said testimony made it "quite clear the government is impeding the flow of information by scientists." Gerard Piel, publisher of Scientific American, said Congress should enact legislation or establish national policy to "limit secrecy to an absolute minimum."

Moss said his Subcommittee would make an "intensive study" of government practices in handling scientific information, especially those of the Departments of Commerce and Defense.

FPC EASES RULES

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- April 26 -- Moss said the FPC had advised him the agency was broadening its public information regulations as follows: all FPC opinions and orders to be released to press and public promptly; eight specific types of records which formerly could be withheld would be public by mandate; elimination of a catch-all regulation making any other FPC documents confidential.

TESTIMONY -- April 27 -- Dr. Donald J. Hughes, chairman of the Federation of American Scientists, said the Russians probably made public 80 percent of their work on the hydrogen bomb at Harwell, England, April 25. "The obvious thing is that the Russians have done just what we have recommended that the United States should do. They stole the show," Hughes said.

Dr. Walter J. Murphy, editorial director of the Applied Journals of the American Chemical Society: "There seems to be a childlike belief" that the U.S. has "all, or practically all, of the scientific and technical brainpower of the world.... We have no monopoly nor anything like it." He said technical editors met in 1955 with representatives of the Office of Strategic Information, and were asked to cooperate in dissemination of information. "When we reach this stage there is always the implication that involuntary cooperation is just around the corner if the wishes of those who talk about voluntary cooperation are not complied with," Murphy said.

Harold C. McClellan, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for International Affairs: "Certain risks, either calculated or otherwise, must continually be taken in the interest of providing all possible technical assistance to our allies and to the free world generally, as well as of affording the greatest permissible freedom in the international commercial operations of U.S. business." McClellan said the argument for free flowing scientific information was "compromised now, as never before in history, by certain of the malign aspects of the most advanced technological developments."

April 30 -- Dr. Allen V. Astin, director of the National Bureau of Standards, said secrecy on technical data usually was useful "only for limited time periods." He said efforts were underway to improve the present declassification process, but he did not specify what methods might be adopted. Astin said the Bureau did not establish the classification of its defense projects. "We act in strict accordance with the policies and practices of the requesting agencies," he said.

REPORT ISSUED

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- The Government Operations Committee May 2 released a staff report presenting a legal analysis of the right of Congress to obtain information from the executive branch. The 26-page brief concluded:

"Refusals by the President and heads of departments to furnish information to the Congress are not constitutional law. They represent a mere naked claim of privilege. The judiciary has never specifically ruled on the direct problem involved in a refusal by federal agencies to furnish information to Congress.

"Judicial precedent shows that even the President has been held to be subject to the power of subpena of the courts. While this is so, it may be that the only resource against the President himself is impeachment if he fails to comply with a subpena of either the courts or the Congress.

"There is no inherent right on the part of heads of departments or other federal agencies to withhold information from the Congress.... Judicial precedent shows that Congress may use the power of contempt directly against federal officials.... If Congress exercises its power of contempt directly against a federal official he may be imprisoned until he complies with the request from Congress but his imprisonment may not extend beyond the session of the Congress in which the contempt was committed. In event of the exercise of the legislative power of contempt the only recourse to the judiciary is in cases clearly outside the authority of Congress. Similarly there would be no power in the President to pardon....

"Judicial precedent recognizes the power of Congress to grant control over official government information to the heads of federal agencies.... If Congress can grant control over public records and documents by statute it follows that it can also regulate the release of such information and, in fact, require (it)...."

RIGHT TO NEWS ACCESS

TESTIMONY -- May 8 -- Harold L. Cross, freedom of information counsel for the American Society of Newspaper Editors: "There is no such thing as the right to say or print information without the right to get access to it." Cross added that "this is not primarily a newspaper problem -- it should never be so considered. Newspapers do not have, they do not ask and they neither need or deserve special rights and privileges." He said Congress should pass legislation defining public records and declaring the people's right to inspect them except in specific instances provided by law. "In the absence of specific and comprehensive legislation by the Congress and of judicial authority on the rights of the public and press," Cross said, "there is some (lower court) authority for suppression of information. Suppression is in fact practiced."

Bernard Schwartz, New York University Law School professor: "A legislative body is hardly worthy of the title...if it merely grinds out legislation as a sausage maker grinds out sausages.... There is no statute or judicial decision which justifies the extreme pretensions of privilege constantly maintained by executive officials." Schwartz said the "overriding peril of the present century" was a "super state with its omnipotent administration.... A government whose misdeeds are known cannot become despotic."

Hans A. Klagsbrunn, Washington (D.C.) attorney and former Reconstruction Finance Corp. counsel, said an office of information policy in the President's office should be set up.

May 9 -- Hugh Fulton, New York attorney and former chief counsel for World War II Senate investigating committee headed by then-Sen. Harry S. Truman: "...It is difficult for any Congressional committee to operate at this time because of the ever increasing insistence of the executive agencies upon their alleged rights to refuse to disclose information or their alleged direction to refuse as a result of the various statutes and executive orders which they cite."

June 8 -- Philip A. Ray, general counsel of the Commerce Department, said if all the Business Advisory Council (BAC) meetings were opened, "we're going to dry up the information the government receives." He said closed meetings led to more "candid" expressions from BAC members. Subcommittee member Dante B. Fascell (D Fla.) said the BAC should open up its hearings on a trial basis for a year.

June 11 -- Erwin Seago, director of the Office of Strategic Information, said the OSI only advised what information should be released: "We're just not engaged in censorship and never have been," Seago said. Seago said the OSI was revising its policy in "an effort to increase the flow of information" and attain "better uniformity in classification and declassification" of government secrets.

Chairman Moss said, "I detect an improvement in attitude, but I still find myself considerably puzzled by the function of the OSI -- the need or justification for its existence." (OSI is attached to the Office of the Secretary of Commerce, advises executive agencies on the publication of non-classified information that "might be prejudicial to the defense interests" of the U.S. and on the exchange of non-classified information with other countries, and acts as a clearinghouse providing "voluntary" guidance to businessmen on the publication or international exchange of non-classified information.)

PRESIDENT'S AUTHORITY STRESSED

June 20 -- In a 102-page brief presented to the Subcommittee, the Justice Department said "Congress cannot, under the Constitution, compel heads of departments to make public what the President desires to keep secret in the public interest." The brief -- an answer to the May 2 staff report (above) -- said "the President alone is the judge of that interest, and is accountable only to his country in his political character, and to his conscience."

June 22 -- Moss said that if the Justice Department was right in contending that the President was the "sole judge" of what information Congress should be given, "Congress might as well fold up its tent and go home." Moss said the argument was tantamount to a demand that Congress "rely upon spoon-fed information from the President." He said the Subcommittee and its staff agreed that the "conclusions have no validity whatsoever."

Willard W. Gatchell, general counsel of the Federal Power Commission, said new FPC rules, adopted after Subcommittee hearings, "brought to light some obscurities and inconsistencies" that were remedied to give the public greater access to FPC files and information.

Counsel for the Interstate Commerce Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission, Civil Aeronautics Board and Federal Trade Commission said they would give Congressional committees information they would withhold from the general public.

DEFENSE DEPARTMENT VIEWS

July 9 -- Assistant Secretary of Defense Robert T. Ross said there was "no precise formula" for releasing information and that the exercise of an individual official's judgment was "all important." He said the March 29, 1955 directive by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson requiring that information released by the Department make a "constructive contribution" to the defense effort did not apply to answers to press inquiries. "In their zeal to promote the interests of their respective services, members oftentimes prepare for release material containing statements which, although not intended to do so, reflect discredit upon a sister service," he said. The order was not meant to "cover up any wrong-doing," he added.

Rep. Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) said agency officials should have a chance to confront accusers whom newspapers sometimes identified only as "high sources." Moss said unless he was overruled, "I will never call newspaper reporters before us and demand that they identify the sources of their reports." He said the Subcommittee regarded newspaper accounts or complaints "principally as advisory," and not as "100 percent accurate or well founded."

July 10 -- C.H. Schooley, Defense Department public relations director, said the Navy in 1955 barred publication of an article by Navy Capt. G.W. Campbell on the World War II sinking of a cruiser on grounds the story would dampen the desire of young men to enlist. The story later was cleared by the Defense Department but its author received a letter of censure, Schooley said. Ross said despite a March, 1955, memorandum from Wilson seeking a one-third to one-half cutback in public information personnel by Army, Navy and Air Force, only the Army made a reduction.

July 11 -- Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas, in a June 30 letter to Moss released July 11, said an unauthorized secrecy label, "private-official," had been used on some documents, but that he was ordering the label changed to "for official use only." He said "private-official" had been "used to a limited extent" on personnel matters, and that whether such material would be made public depended on the facts in each case.

July 12 -- Trevor Gardner, ex-Assistant Secretary of the Air Force, said "at least half" of current classified papers need not be secret. "We are deluding ourselves if we think we are keeping very much secret" from the potential enemy, he said. Gardner said the government's security system sometimes did not "meet the practicalities of the situation." He said a scientist of "international repute" was refused security clearance by one service, but "unfortunately, the man keeps coming up with secret and top-secret ideas." The Air Force gave him a non-secret contract, Gardner said, and then put a secrecy stamp on his work.

Subcommittee Reports Filed

The Government Operations Committee July 27 filed the Subcommittee's report on "Availability of Information from Federal Departments and Agencies" (H Rept 2947).

The report said it "is incumbent upon Congress to bring order out of chaos. Congress should establish uniform rules on information practices. These rules should require full disclosure of information except for specific exceptions defined by statute. The withholding (of information) should be subject to judicial review and the burden of proof should be on the official who withholds the information."

The report said that secrecy within the government has developed to the point where many officials "have a growing tendency to forget that in a democracy it is up to the people to make final decisions.... This psychosis persists to the point where some government officials decide what is good for the public to know." Behind this "paper curtain" is "an attitude which says that we, the officials, not you, the people, will determine how much you are to be told about your own government." The report said the Subcommittee had uncovered evidences of "retaliation, intimidation and reprisal upon reporters" who had written news stories displeasing the officials concerned. The Defense Department information practices were termed "the most restrictive, and at the same time the most confused, of any major branch of the federal government.... Military men are, by nature,... secretive.... Public information officers...have no authority to free information that others, far removed from the press and from the public's desire for information, deem it necessary to withhold. At the top of this pyramid of sand is the office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for legislative and public affairs (Robert T. Ross).... Actually, his office has little more than the authority to rubber stamp information the various services have decided to release.... The Defense Department and its component branches are classifying documents at such a rate that the Pentagon may some day become no more than a huge storage bin protected by triple combination safes and a few security guards.... Millions of documents each year are being added to the Defense Department's classified (secret) files, and only a small fraction are being declassified annually."

EISENHOWER ORDER "MISUSED"

The report said "misuse" of President Eisenhower's 1954 letter to Secretary of Defense Wilson resulted in "the most flagrant abuse of so-called legal authority" to withhold information. The letter was a "specific instruction to the Secretary of Defense for a specific purpose and to a specific committee of the Senate.... It seems inconceivable that 19 government departments and agencies could cite this letter as a shadowy cloak of authority to restrict or withhold information from the Congress and the public."

The report said Wilson's 1955 order for "constructive" information had "failed" to quiet inter-service rivalries. "At the same time this order has been used to deny the press and the public various kinds of information that have nothing to do with national military security."

The Subcommittee said the Commerce Department's Office of Strategic Information had assumed a "highly unrealistic attitude of cloak-and-dagger self importance" and should be abolished. OSI witnesses, the report continued, could not justify restricting circulation of non-secret information within the government or controlling information from outside the government. The OSI put a secrecy label on its own progress reports, probably

"because they contained critical remarks about the American Society of Newspaper Editors and the press in general," said the Subcommittee.

INVITATION TO SCANDAL

The report said secrecy surrounding the Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council and special advisory committees in the Agriculture Department gave the advisers "a temporary opportunity to take advantage of inside information. Without full publicity, the activities and recommendations of advisory committees constitute a standing invitation to misuse or possible scandal."

The report said the "inherent" power claimed by the Civil Service Commission to withhold information from the public "simply does not exist." It said "the Budget Bureau has no authority to veto information or comments on legislation transmitted from the independent agencies to Congress, nor does the Bureau have any final control, under the Federal Reports Act, over statistical information the independent agencies might request from private organizations and individuals."

Besides recommending abolishment of OSI, the report said: The status of the Business Advisory Council should be clarified by the Justice Department; names of advisory committee members should be made public and their proceedings should be public except when national security was involved; correspondence between U.S. and foreign scientists should not be stamped when the subjects discussed were not classified; President Eisenhower and other high officials should make every effort to speed up the flow of information.

The report was unanimous but additional views were filed by Rep. Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.), ranking Republican on both the Subcommittee and parent Committee. He said he knew of no case where the courts had compelled a President to make information public. "The only remedy would be through publicity at the polls." He said the press was "inconsistent" by pressing for information and yet sometimes refusing to tell a Congressional committee the facts behind a story.

LEGAL REMEDIES PROPOSED

The Subcommittee Oct. 27 issued staff proposals to clarify laws regulating government information practices. The changes would create a "public right" to information that would be subject to judicial review, the report said.

The staff report proposed two legal provisions: (1) That nothing in the agencies' rule-making authority "authorizes a regulation for the withholding of information or limiting the availability of records to the public;" (2) That all public records be made available to the public unless specific authority is granted by Congress to withhold them. The report said different interpretations by government departments and the courts of a statute "to prevent the disclosure of information and to limit the availability of records" prompted the recommendations.

The staff report was submitted for comment to about 100 newsmen, lawyers and scientists who testified before the Subcommittee.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Nov. 1 -- The Atomic Energy Commission said it planned to make available for public inspection records dealing with: applications, correspondence regarding proceedings, correspondence relating to interpretations, letters of opinion, filings in court proceedings to which the AEC is a party, correspondence with the courts, and similar records and papers not directed specifically to be withheld.

Records to be withheld included: those relating to personal information including medical records; documents prepared for use within the AEC or executive branch; correspondence between the AEC and foreign governments; records and reports of investigations; documents containing restricted data or defense information; correspondence received in confidence relating to possible violations of laws or regulations; and correspondence with a Member of Congress or Congressional committees that had not reen released by the Member or Committee.

HEARINGS RESUMED

TESTIMONY -- Nov. 13 -- Rear Adm. Rawson Bennett, Chief of the Office of Naval Research, rejected a proposal by Chairman Moss for a government-wide security clearance procedure. He said there would be danger of "no security whatsoever" because "judgments" of various security officers differed too much. He said security was an individual responsibility of Defense Department commanders.

Told by Moss that scientists complained their progress was "stifled" by restrictions on exchange of information, Bennett said the scientists could swap ideas if they would "fit themselves into the procedure." He said his office followed the security procedure on scientific research only when it applied to military problems.

Maj. Gen. J.S. Mills, Air Force deputy chief of staff for development, said he saw no reason why representatives of the various armed services should have to get together and compare notes. He said the Air Force had been "very, very liberal" in interpreting scientists' "need to know" secret information.

S.E. Clements, planning director for Defense Department research and development, said he knew of no case where research and development had suffered because of red tape. "In my opinion it is not a serious matter," he said.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Nov. 14 -- The Subcommittee reviewed a Defense Department special study of news policies, prepared by an advisory committee headed by ex-Assistant Secretary of Defense Charles A. Coolidge. Moss said the Department showed "regrettable" lack of cooperation in not providing advance copies of the report for the Subcommittee.

The advisory committee report said: Reporters should be called before grand juries for questioning about news "leaks" which "obviously gravely damage the security of the nation;" in cases where a Defense Department member was identified as the source of a leak, "stern disciplinary action should be taken...with the utmost promptness;" steps should be taken to overcome "overclassification;" the Department's classification system was "sound in concept," with "no conscious attempt...to withhold information which...the public should have."

Secretary Wilson said Nov. 13, in a letter to the Subcommittee, that he would have "serious reservations" about grand jury action against reporters.

The Subcommittee Nov. 15 announced postponement of further hearings until 1957. Moss cited lack of cooperation by the Defense Department as one reason for the postponement.

CORRUPT PRACTICES PROBE

A Special Senate Committee was established early in 1956 to conduct a wide-ranging investigation of corrupt practices involving campaign contributions, lobbying or other activities calculated to influence Senators, Senate candidates and officials of the executive branch. The Committee was given $350,000 to spend and told to report its recommendations to the Senate by Jan. 31, 1957.

The Committee made a slow and acrimonious start in late February. Disputes over the chairmanship and rules of procedure marked the opening weeks of its activities. A brief investigation into a newspaper's charges that Sen. Milton R. Young (R N.D.) "sold out" in voting for the vetoed natural gas bill followed in May. Finally in June the Committee began extended hearings on its first major subject for investigation: activities of persons and organizations in connection with the vetoed bill (HR 6665) to exempt independent producers of natural gas from federal utility rate control. Later hearings covered election spending by campaign committees.

BACKGROUND -- The tide of opinion that led to creation of the Special Committee had its origins in the revelation by Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) Feb. 3 that he had rejected a $2,500 campaign contribution from a lawyer-lobbyist interested in passage of the natural gas bill. A Senate Select Committee investigated the incident and exonerated Case of any wrongdoing. (See story, p. 469)

Probe Resolution

The Senate Feb. 22 adopted, by a 79-1 roll-call vote, a resolution (S Res 219) establishing a Special Committee to investigate corrupt practices. Sen. Willam Langer (R N.D.) cast the lone dissenting vote.

The resolution, sponsored by Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) and Minority Leader William F. Knowland (R Calif.), was introducedFeb. 21. The Privileges and Elections Subcommittee of the Senate Rules Committee had voted Feb. 16 to investigate corrupt practices, but Knowland Feb. 18 said he thought a special group, divided equally between the parties, would be more suitable to conduct the inquiry than the Democratic-dominated (2-1) Subcommittee. The Democratic and GOP Policy Committees endorsed Knowland's proposal Feb. 20 and 21.

PROVISIONS -- As adopted, with minor amendments, S Res 219:

Established an eight-member special committee to investigate "attempts to influence improperly or illegally" the Senate, individual Members, candidates for the Senate, or members of the executive branch of the government, "through campaign contributions, political activities, lobbying" or other activities.

Directed the Committee to report, by Jan. 31, 1957, "specific recommendations" for improving federal election laws, the Corrupt Practices and Lobbying Acts plus related laws, and for ensuring administrative action against any persons or groups believed guilty of illegal actions.

Authorized $350,000 for expenses of the Committee, gave it subpena powers and directed that at least two Members, one from each party, be present when testimony was given.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- Add members of the executive branch to the list of those subject to attempted improper influence, Feb. 22. Voice vote.

DEBATE -- Feb. 21 -- Johnson -- Lobbying law was under the jurisdiction of the Government Operations Committee, election laws under the Judiciary Committee, campaign matters under the Rules Committee. "Rather than have four or five committees going off in all directions, seeking perhaps the sensational instead of substantial," it would be wiser to set up a special committee dedicated "to uncovering any wrongdoing of any kind (and) accomplishing something constructive."

Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) -- The Special Committee could not send legislation to the Senate floor; it would have to go to a regular committee. The Senate should take up S 636, a bill to reform election procedures that was reported from committee in 1955, amend it to cover cases of improper campaign contributions, and "settle this whole business" before the 1956 elections.

Feb. 22 -- Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- Displacing the Elections Subcommittee with "a hand-selected committee" would be unwise.

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- Creation of the Committee "may prove to be a hand-made vehicle for possible misuse by those who would seek to besmirch a Senator" running for re-election.

Milton R. Young (R N.D.) -- The Committee should make its first business an investigation of a "vicious charge" made against him by a Bismarck, N.D., paper.

William Langer (R N.D.) -- Opposed the resolution, wanted action on S 636. "I want action now, before the next national election...is bought and paid for."

MEMBERS NAMED

Vice President Richard M. Nixon Feb. 23 named eight members to the Committee, four Democrats and four Republicans: Democratic Sens. Albert Gore (Tenn.), chairman of the Privileges and Elections Subcommittee, John L. McClellan (Ark.), Clinton P. Anderson (N.M.) and John F. Kennedy (Mass.); Republican Sens. Styles Bridges (N.H.), Edward J. Thye (Minn.), Barry Goldwater (Ariz.) and William A. Purtell (Conn.).

For the next two weeks, the Committee tried to agree on a chairman and rules of procedure to govern the group's activities. On March 10 Sen. Gore bowed out as prospective chairman, Sen. McClellan was chosen unanimously to head the Committee with Bridges as vice chairman, and rules were agreed on.

The rules, McClellan said, gave him as chairman the right to issue subpenas after consultation with Bridges.

Any disagreement over subpenas would be reported to the full Committee and decided by majority vote. Gore said in a March 8 Senate speech Bridges wanted the right to co-sign subpenas.

McClellan said he would have the power to order executive hearings, but public hearings could be held only by majority Committee vote. Gore said Bridges would not concede Gore the right to initiate preliminary or permanent inquiries without a majority vote of the Committee.

The rules gave McClellan the right to call Committee meetings. Gore said Bridges proposed the chairman and vice chairman call the meetings jointly.

McClellan said Committee employees would be named by majority vote of the Committee, without regard to political affiliation. Gore said Bridges wanted the right to name an associate counsel, equal to the general counsel, for the Republicans.

March 14 -- McClellan, in a Senate speech, said the Committee was "not a partisan group. It is a bipartisan group. As chairman, it is my view that responsibility for the success of its labors rests equally upon each political party and upon each individual member of the Committee, irrespective of party."

March 15 -- George Meany, AFL-CIO president, said labor "heartily supports" the special Senate investigation of lobbies. Meany said "labor welcomes such an investigation" into union campaign spending, as the union files with Congress "a complete record of all funds it receives...and all expenditures from those funds."

March 29 -- George Morris Fay, former U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia, was named Committee counsel.

FIRST HEARING SET

April 17 -- The Committee ordered its staff to begin an investigation of lobbying on the vetoed natural gas bill.

HEARING -- May 1 -- Maston Nixon of Corpus Christi, Texas, General Gas Committee chairman, testified: "The sole purpose of the GGC was to secure the enactment of legislation which would amend the Natural Gas Act to remove federal control over production and gathering of natural gas. We proposed to accomplish that purpose by developing the facts and carrying these facts to the people and to their Representatives and Senators in Congress. We made no campaign contributions."

Nixon presented an itemized account of the $119,-988.22 the GGC had spent since it was formed in 1954. (Nison also testified Oct. 8. See below)

May 11 -- After an executive session McClellan said the Committee:

Would hold executive hearings on a request by Sen. Milton R. Young (R N.D.) to look into Bismarck (N.D.) Leader charges about Young's activities regarding the natural gas bill (HR 6665).

Investigate four lobbies "to get a start": two that favored HR 6665 and two that opposed it. He declined to identify the lobby groups.

"Had taken action" to follow up the inquiry by the Select Committee headed by Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga.) into the $2,500 campaign gift offered Sen. Case.

Young 'Sellout' Probe

HEARING -- May 24 -- On charges against Sen. Milton R. Young (R N.D.) printed in the Bismarck (N.D.) Leader, a weekly newspaper.

TESTIMONY -- May 24 -- K.W. Simons of Bismarck, editor of The Leader, publication of the state's Nonpartisan League, said he had no evidence and had never charged Young received any money for voting for the natural gas bill. Simons said the newspaper's February heading, "Young Sells Out Again," meant "he sold out the public interest.... The expression is standard vernacular." He said the investigation, requested by Young, was "ridiculous."

ACTION -- May 24 -- The Committee announced, after an executive session, it had dropped its investigation of charges against Young. "The statements made against Sen. Young were completely unsupported by any evidence whatsoever...", the Committee said. Young said he was "very pleased by the thorough and searching questions" asked at the session.

Natural Gas Probe

HEARINGS -- In June, September and October on the activities of persons and organizations in connection with the vetoed natural gas bill (HR 6665).

TESTIMONY -- June 14 -- Leonard F. McCollum of Houston, Texas, chairman of the Natural Gas and Oil Resources Committee, said the expenditures of the Committee "beginning in 1954 and continuing through 1955 and 1956 to date have totaled about $1,750,000." A total of 1,259 individual and corporate contributors had voluntarily supplied the money, he said. He submitted a list of their names and the amounts of their contributions over the last three months. "Not one cent of our funds has been spent for campaign contributions or legislative contact work," McCollum said. The Committee's "single assignment (was) conducting a long-range information and education program." McCollum said his "understanding from the outset was that any contacts with Congress on proposed legislation would be carried on by others."

He said the Committee's expenditures were "relatively low for a continuing long-range program of education or information which is aimed at a nationwide audience and which employs newspapers and magazine advertising and printed material in a quantity sufficient to reach that mass audience." Of total expenditures of $1,753,513.70 up to March 31, $798,304.59 was listed for advertising, $87,032.89 for national publicity and $499,-181.77 for "Field program, booklets and printed materials." Listed for operating expenses was $94,800.59, and for administrative expenses, $234,732.62. McCollum submitted the text of the legal opinion given the Committee by a New York law firm to the effect that they were not required to register under the lobby act as another group in the industry would handle lobbying. Chairman John L. McClellan (D Ark.) asked if "educational programs" designed to build public sentiment in favor of legislation couldn't properly be regarded as "one form of lobbying, in the broadest sense." McCullom said he was no expert on the subject but he declined to agree with McClellan that the NGOR Committee's activities might be described as an attempt to influence legislation by "indirect lobbying." Testimony brought out that 26 companies had contributed more than 80 percent of $1,972,545 raised by the NGOR Committee. The largest single contribution listed was $175,000 from the Humble Oil and Refining Co. The second largest was $153,000 from the Texas Co.

(For other contributors to NGORC, see testimony of Sept. 11, below.)

McClellan said after the hearing that he felt there was a question whether the contributions "would be a legal business expense."

June 15 -- McClellan said the type of "educational" campaign waged by the NGORC "might well be calculated to wield more influence on Congress than direct lobbying."

PUBLIC RELATIONS CAMPAIGN

Bert C. Goss, president of Hill and Knowlton, Inc., public relations counsel for the NGOR Committee, said he believed that public relations could be effective in influencing legislation by giving the people the "facts" on which to base judgments.

Paul Kayser, president of the El Paso Natural Gas Co. and former vice chairman of the NGOR Committee, said the Committee was formed to continue a campaign begun in 1952 to inform the public about the problems of the industry. He said if one of its "incidental effects" was the passage of the natural gas bill that was "fine," but that "we could accomplish all of our objectives" without any action by the Congress. He said his company had charged to operating expense its $14,050 contribution to the NGOR Committee.

June 21 -- John E. Heyke, president of the Brooklyn Union Gas Company and chairman of the Council of Local Gas Companies, said the latter group spent $27,699 in an effort to defeat the Harris-Fulbright natural gas bill. The Council, registered under the Regulation of Lobbying Act, sought "to place our side of the controversy before as many people as we could." Activities included direct talks with Senators and distribution of "informational material, though I shy away from the word because we don't look on ourselves as educators in any sense." The Council was financed by contributions from local gas distributing companies, but Heyke said his own firm did not plan to deduct its contribution "as a business expense for tax purposes." The salary of a Brooklyn Union Gas official, who was assigned to the Council's Washington office as a "volunteer," would be deducted by Brooklyn Union Gas "since his regular duties with the company continued."

Heyke said he had seen Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams to "get a clarification" of the Administration's attitude toward the natural gas bill, but "I wouldn't say there were any results" from the conference. Heyke was not registered as a lobbyist himself and Sen. John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) said the Committee "should decide if such a conference should be brought under the lobbying act." Heyke said he knew of no improper lobbying from any group in connection with the natural gas bill.

James H. Lee, former assistant corporation counsel of Detroit and an officer of the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers, said, "Never...have I seen so much pressure brought to bear upon city attorneys in connection with national legislation as was brought by the natural gas industry" before the NIMLO convention voted an anti-natural gas bill resolution. Under questioning, Lee said he saw nothing "illegal or improper" about such pressure. NIMLO is not registered under the lobby law and Lee said it "in no way directly contacted any Congressmen...to attempt to persuade them to vote one way or the other.... (It) received no contributions nor solicited any...to aid in either the passage or defeat of the Harris-Fulbright Bill." NIMLO members who did contact their Senators on the measure, as Lee did himself, were "city officials acting in their official capacities. The job of NIMLO as an organization was to give anyone who desired it the benefit of our technical knowledge from the consumer viewpoint." Lee, too, said he knew of no improper lobbying on the bill.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- June 22 -- Sen. Kennedy said he favored broadening the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act to make it apply to contacts with executive department officials as well as Congress. He cited as an example Heyke's appointment with Sherman Adams.

UAW LOBBYING DESCRIBED

TESTIMONY -- June 28 -- Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers (AFL-CIO), said his union engaged in "lobbying" against the gas bill "and our only regret is we didn't get more votes." Reuther said the UAW fought the battle of the consumer, but "we had only a pea shooter, while the oil and gas industry had 16-inch guns." He said his group spent $38,762 to defeat the bill.

Reuther said he was certain that an investigation would show "a very direct relationship between the voting habits of Congress and campaign contributions received from such organizations as the gas lobby." He said the Corrupt Practices Act should be amended to impose a $5 ceiling on campaign contributions instead of the present $5,000.

The UAW president compared his union spending for lobbying against the gas bill with the $1,753,513 reported to the Committee by the Natural Gas and Oil Resources Committee. Although officials of that committee said they did not engage in lobbying, Reuther said if their work was not lobbying, "I don't know what lobbying is."

Chairman John L. McClellan (D Ark.) said he was inclined to agree with Reuther.

When asked if he believed the gas industry groups broke any laws, Reuther said he did "not think they did anything illegal."

Alex M. Clark, former mayor of Indianapolis and chairman of the Joint Committee of Consumers and Small Producers of Natural Gas, said he saw "12 or 13 Senators" and "some administrative assistants" to urge support of the gas bill.

Clark acknowledged he was lobbying and said that he had registered under the Regulation of Lobbying Act. He said he received $5,500 in salary and about $2,000 in expenses for his services.

Guy Nunn, UAW radio director and broadcaster, said he had no facts on which to base a statement in a broadcast that "it has been known for months that the gas and oil interests have been buying Senators by the bushel." He said the remarks were written in haste.

UNAUTHORIZED TELEGRAMS SENT

Sept. 10 -- Robert Blackburn, a Committee investigator, said Keith Thompson, an agent of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, had paid for telegrams bearing phony signatures urging Sen. Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) to vote for the natural gas bill. Blackburn said 15 of the 32 persons he interviewed whose names appeared on telegrams to Thye had not authorized the messages.

Thompson said he had sent about 30 telegrams and had relied on local agents' word as to whether "two-thirds" of the purported senders knew the messages were being sent.

Another company agent, Vernon E. Lee, said he had been instructed by a superior to line up people favoring passage of the bill and get them to send telegrams to Thye. Lee said he "started out with good intentions but ran into the time element" and sent 12 to 15 telegrams using names of people he had not contacted.

William C. Kniefel, northwest regional manager for Standard of Indiana, said the company spent $1,500 on about 835 telegrams sent to Thye from Minnesota in January, 1956. He said, "We made some 'eager-beaver' mistakes in our plans," one of which was "the initial over-enthusiastic one of authorizing the use of company funds for the telegrams." Kniefel said the plan did not have the approval of the company's top officials. He said expenses of the telegram campaign were charged on the company's books as "marketing expenses."

A.K. Reed, Duluth division manager, said he had passed on instructions to 13 subordinate salesmen to try to round up 300 telegrams to send to Thye. Asked whether he felt that he had "engaged in lobbying," Reed replied: "I don't know anything about lobbying. I looked on it as a sales program."

OIL PRESIDENTS TESTIFY

Sept. 11 -- Frank O. Prior, president of Standard of Indiana, said a "vigorous campaign" for the natural gas bill was necessary to offset a "distorted" picture presented by the bill's opponents. Prior said neither he nor any associates in the company to his knowledge contributed to any Senatorial candidate's campaign fund either directly or indirectly to influence his vote "during the pendency" of the gas bill or otherwise. He said his company's subsidiary, Stanolin Oil and Gas Co., had contributed $100,000 to the Natural Gas and Oil Resources Committee and $3,800 to expenses of the General Gas Committee. Stanolin carried the contribution as a tax-deductible business expense "as far as I know," he said.

T.S. Peterson, president of the Standard Oil Co. of California, said his company had contributed $119,000 to the NGORC and called it a "perfectly legitimate business expense." He said it would be claimed as a tax deduction.

H.S.M. Burns, president of Shell Oil Co., said his company "as such" engaged in no lobbying. He said Shell had contributed $138,000 to the NGORC and $150,000-$250,000 to the American Petroleum Institute.

A.L. Nickerson, president of Socony-Mobil Oil Corp., said his company had contributed $114,000 to the NGORC and deducted it as a business expense. He said the organization was set up "to develop a program of education," and that the committee was "very much in the public interest."

Sept. 12 -- Sidney A. Swensrud and Archie D. Gray of the Gulf Oil Co. said the company had contributed $3,800 to the General Gas Committee, but "out of an abundance of caution" had not claimed it as a tax deduction. The company did deduct as a business expense $111,000 given to the NGORC, they said.

Harold S. Skinner of the Continental Oil Co. described meetings in Birmingham, Ala., at which he and other oil company executives sought to overcome the opposition of some Alabama mayors to the natural gas bill.

Hines H. Baker, president of the Humble Oil and Refining Co., said he thought the General Gas Committee was created "to bring about enactment of legislation." But he added: "I don't think GGC was organized primarily as a lobby committee."

(For description of organizations active in efforts to pass or defeat the natural gas bill, see p. 476.)

LOBBY QUESTIONNAIRE

In September the Committee sent to 40 expert witnesses questionnaires designed to "secure as complete a coverage of contemporary thinking" on the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act as possible. Of the 40 questionnaires, the Committee Sept. 27 reported that about 20 had been returned.

In a letter accompanying the questionnaire, Chairman McClellan said he was requesting help "in considering specific recommendations for strengthening the federal lobbying legislation." As a guide the questionnaire listed questions around which the Committee requested that answers be shaped.

The questionnaire included eight major subject headings, with one or two questions asked under each. Examples of questions asked:

- Do you think persons engaged in "indirect" lobbying, "i.e., persons whose activities do not involve direct contact with Congress," should report under the lobby law? If so, what recommendations would you make for effectively and constitutionally including such persons in the law?
- Do you think the lobby law should be amended to require reports from persons engaged in lobbying before the executive branch and independent agencies? If so, what statutory recommendations do you suggest?
- Would you recommend any change in the system of administering the lobby law? If so, what sort of system of administration do you suggest?
- Would you favor amending the lobby law to require all literature, printed matter and letters circulated to influence legislation be so identified?

The questionnaire also requests any additional suggestions or comments on administrative improvements on the subject of lobbying.

The Committee Sept. 27 also reported it had received 109 returns from 125 questionnaires previously sent to corporations in connection with its investigation into activities on the natural gas bill.

OCTOBER HEARINGS

TESTIMONY -- Oct. 8 -- Albert H. Stoddard, sales manager for the Jack C. O'Conner Insurance Agency of Boston, said he assumed "full responsibility" for sending telegrams -- some unauthorized -- to Massachusetts Senators John F. Kennedy (D) and Leverett Saltonstall (R) urging defeat of legislation to broaden social security benefits. (See story on the social security bill (HR 7225 -- PL 880), p. 392.)

Stoddard said he sent 160 telegrams, using names of different individuals. He acted "on his own" after he determined that the bill would be financially detrimental to his agency and did not confer with O'Conner on his decision to send the telegrams, he said.

Francis Burke, a part-time agent for the O'Conner firm, said he did not authorize the signing of his name to the wire. He said "the wire in no way reflected my attitude toward the legislation. I had hoped it would become law."

Mrs. Grace M. Dahl of Alston, Mass., said she did not authorize the use of her name. She said she favored the legislation. Donald Brown, an O'Conner agent, said his name was used without his permission, but that he agreed with the sentiments of the telegram.

NON-LOBBYING EFFORTS DESCRIBED

Oct 9 -- Paxton Howard, a Shell Oil Co. attorney, said he got a $5,000 bonus for his efforts in behalf of the natural gas bill but did not register as a lobbyist. He said William Kenney, vice president of Shell, sent him to Alabama to counter an "opposition" group. Howard said he later came to Washington to be "available to talk to anybody who would listen," but he did not consider this lobbying activity. He said his "listeners" included three Senators.

Maston Nixon, chairman of the General Gas Committee, said his Committee did not lobby during consideration of the natural gas bill. Chairman McClellan recalled Nixon, who had been the leadoff witness May 1, because of what he termed "serious conflict" in Nixon's testimony.

Nixon said his Committee distributed information urging passage of the bill but that persons representing the Committee did not "buttonhole Senators." He said "the point of difference" over whether the GGC engaged in lobbying was in the conception of what lobbying is.

OTHER GROUPS QUESTIONED

Oct. 10 -- Gregory Prince and Patrick H. Matthews of the Assn. of American Railroads said AAR spent $900 in tickets to a Democratic fund-raising dinner and $500 for a similar Republican dinner during the 84th Congress. Matthews said he was not "pressured" into buying the tickets but was "solicited." He said the tickets were not bought "to influence legislation."

Representatives of the National Milk Producers Federation and the American Trucking Assns. said their organizations made no direct campaign contributions.

Clyde T. Ellis, executive director of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Assn., said private power companies should be required to charge the cost of "propaganda" campaigns against profits. Ellis said "we believe it is basically and fundamentally wrong for giant monopolies to be able to saddle millions of dollars annually in cost-plus advertising propaganda and direct and indirect lobbying costs onto helpless rate payers."

Ellis said his organization had made no contributions to the funds of any political party nor had it made any funds available to help any particular candidate.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Oct. 10 -- McClellan said the Committee had almost completed its investigation of lobbying. He said there had been a dearth of information from the Eisenhower Administration, the public, the press and from fellow Senators. Although some limited future hearings were in prospect, he said, what was left in the $350,000 inquiry fund would be used mainly to "find out the weaknesses and try to develop a better law" on lobbying.

POLITICAL COMMITTEES' SPENDING

TESTIMONY -- Nov. 26 -- Democratic National Chairman Paul M. Butler said the existing $3 million limit on political committee spending was "unrealistic," and that between an $8 to $12 million limit should be set. "There is no use sitting here and trying to make it appear that any major committee is complying with the spirit of the law," Butler said. He said his party came out of the election with a deficit of $815,000.

Butler said volunteer groups merely were a means of getting around the current limitation, and that the spending limit should embrace all such groups.

Butler also said he favored: an amendment to require reporting on campaign funds raised by state organizations if any part of the money was used in behalf of candidates for federal office; complete reports to Congress naming ticket buyers for political fund-raising dinners, and the amounts paid; a provision requiring large contributors to report to Congress how much they contributed for any Presidential, Senatorial or House campaign, with separate limits on amounts that could be donated to any of these funds; and a ban on campaign contributions in the names of children not of voting age. He also favored a proposal by Dr. Frank Stanton, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, to make the Federal Communications Commission's equal time rule applicable only to parties that received a certain percentage of the vote in the last Presidential election.

Two Minnesotans, Commissioner of Agriculture Byron G. Allen and John C. Obert, a newspaperman, said they had conducted a highly successful door-to-door, nonpartisan canvass in their state in May. The money was divided proportionately according to party votes in the previous election, they said, and proved that individuals were willing to contribute in that manner and that sufficient funds could be collected to finance national campaigns.

Arnold Petersen, national secretary of the American Socialist Labor party, said his party collected $83,423 for 1956 campaign purposes.

Two officials of the Machinists Non-Partisan Political League, Carl Huhndorff and John T. O'Brien, said no complaints of pressure ever had been called to the League's attention. Huhndorff said the Corrupt Practices Act "is unenforceable."

Executive Vice President Russell E. Singer of the American Automobile Assn. said the AAA spent $39,398 in 1955 on legislative activities. (It was active in supporting federal highway legislation both in 1955 and 1956)

HALL DIFFERS WITH BUTLER

Nov. 27 -- Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall said the present $3 million ceiling for National Committee spending was "completely ridiculous," and that a limit "somewhere between $10 and $12 million" would be more feasible. He proposed allowing "splinter campaign organizations," such as the Citizens for Eisenhower Committee, to continue raising additional funds without any fund limitation. Hall said an overall spending limit would be unworkable because, toward the end of a campaign, a committee would not know where it stood with respect to the legal limit. He estimated that the GOP spent $8.2 million on national contests in 1956, had a post-election surplus of approximately $184,000.

Hall said Congress should not try to impose contribution regulations on state and local committees. "I don't think it's the affair of the federal government what is spent on every little local election," he said. He opposed registration by all political contributors, said "I don't think you would learn anything from these figures if you got them."

Hall also opposed any attempt by Congress to put an over-all limit of $5,000 on the amount an individual could contribute in one year to both national and state political committees. "I think we would be going far afield if we said to a man with an interest in 12 states that he cannot contribute to good government in those states," he said. Hall said the Minnesota door-to-door canvass system on a national scale would weaken the two-party system.

James L. McDevitt, co-director of the AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education (COPE), said his group collected $1.2 million during the campaign, of which $521,000 was in voluntary individual contributions. Of the total, $290,000 was contributed by trade unions into the "educational account" and $434,000 was put in by the general AFL-CIO fund, McDevitt said. He said COPE contributed $15,000 to groups backing Adlai E. Stevenson; contributed amounts varying from $3,000 to $10,000 to various Democratic Senatorial candidates; and "endorsed" 20 Republican candidates for the House. He said in a "couple" of instances COPE returned dollar contributions to union members who wrote protesting the amount was given against their will.

LABOR VOTING CHART CRITICIZED

Sen. Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.) said COPE had presented "biased, slanted opinion" in publishing voting record guides rating Members of Congress as right or wrong on various issues. "I don't think this is an attempt to educate. I think it is an attempt to influence voting," Goldwater said.

William Barton, general counsel of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., and Milton Smith, associate general counsel, said the Lobbying Act needed "substantial revision if it is to be a useful, workable statute to supplement other laws specifically directed toward corrupt practices." They said citizens expressing to Congress their views on pending bills were subject "to constant uncertainty and hazard of criminal prosecution." They said although the Chamber of Commerce believed it was exempt from terms of the Lobbying Act, the law was so ambiguous the organization registered some of its officials to be on the safe side.

CAMPAIGN SPENDING CHANGES

TESTIMONY -- Dec. 11 -- Thomas N. Schroth, executive editor of Congressional Quarterly News Features, recommended that the 1952 Federal Corrupt Practices Act be amended to require the reporting of campaign spending during primaries. Schroth said full disclosure of the amounts spent during political campaigns would eliminate the necessity of placing limitations on the amounts that could be spent. "Full reporting (of campaign expenditures) is necessary and full reporting would become its own limitation on excessive spending," Schroth said. "I think as it is now, the limitations are ridiculous and no one pays attention to them and they find all sorts of ways to get around them."

Schroth endorsed the idea of having the General Accounting Office process lobby and political spending reports instead of the current practice of having them filed with the Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate.

Schroth said requiring individual campaign contributors to report their contributions "would be a good way to cross-check" the amounts political committees said they received. In answer to a suggestion from Sen. Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.) that the cross-checking idea be broadened to require newspapers to report how much they received for political advertisements, Schroth said, "A red flag goes up about whether or not newspapers and radio stations should report such information. I am afraid that maybe that would be violating some of their rights." Goldwater, disagreeing, said, "This is the business end we are asking for...not an editorial or news end."

Robert W. Kaufman, a writer for Congressional Quarterly, recommended that lobby registration and spending reports be simplified. He said it would simplify matters to require a lobby to register on one form and report expenditures on another. Currently, a lobby must fill out the registration information every time it files a spending report. Kaufman said lobbies should list their agents and how much they spent instead of just the overall total expenditure.

Philip L. Graham, publisher of the Washington Post and Times Herald, said existing limits on campaign spending were unrealistic. If any limit were set, he said he would recommend an "enormously high" one of about $30 million for each national political committee. Graham said he intended to renew in 1960 his proposal for relying on the mass of voters for campaign contributions. He said authorizing a $100 tax deduction for campaign contributions would encourage wider giving.

Graham recommended revision of the Federal Communications Act to enable radio and TV stations to give free time to major political candidates without having to give equal time to minor ones.

$50,000 TO COOPER CAMPAIGN

Dec. 12 -- Archibald S. Alexander, director of the National Volunteers for Stevenson-Kefauver, said the group raised $576,806 in campaign funds. John Reed Kilpatrick, chairman of the National Citizens Committee for Eisenhower and Nixon, said his group raised $1,659,233 in campaign funds up to Dec. 7. Both Alexander and Kilpatrick said their committees were independent of their parties' national committees.

The National Committee for an Effective Congress said it contributed $50,000 to the campaign of a Senatorial candidate, later identified as John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.). Sidney H. Scheuer, NCEC chairman, said the Committee "raised and distributed" $157,989 for 15 Senate and House candidates. He said the distributions ranged from $500 to $50,000 in Senate races and from $300 to $500 in House races.

Dec. 13 -- George Agree, NCEC executive secretary, said the $50,000 Senatorial contribution was raised by the Citizens Fund for Cooper, headed by Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati. Maurice Rosenblatt, chairman of the NCEC advisory board, said the $50,000 was included in his organization's financial report because Agree also was financial chairman of the Citizens Fund for Cooper.

(Other candidates the NCEC supported were: Reps. William H. Ayres (R Ohio), James G. Fulton (R Pa.), John W. Heselton (R Mass.), Eugene McCarthy (D Minn.), Gracie Pfost (D Idaho), and Hugh Scott (R Pa.); Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.) and Alexander Wiley (R Wis.); Sen.-elect Frank Church (D Idaho); and defeated Senate candidates R.M. Evans (D Iowa), Richard Stengel (D Ill.) and Claude Wickard (D Ind.).

SUGAR GROUPS TESTIFY

George Ball, a lawyer representing the Cuban Sugar Growers National Cuban Sugar Mills Owners Associations, said the groups were billed for $271,327 in expenses in connection with sugar legislation in 1955-56. (See p. 493) Of the total, Ball estimated $87,000 would be reported as lobbying expense, the remainder for extensive statistical information on U.S.-Cuban trade and miscellaneous expenses.

Frank A. Kemp of the Greater Western Sugar Co. said that only a small part of the U.S. Beet Sugar Association's yearly budget of $120,000 went for lobbying expenses. He said Cuban interests "inundated the U.S. with letters in support of sales of Cuban sugar."

EISENHOWER-NIXON RE-ELECTED, DEMOCRATS KEEP CONGRESS

President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon Nov. 6 were re-elected to second terms by a vote of landslide proportions, but for the second time in American history the voters elected a Congress controlled by the opposition party. Democratic Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates Adlai E. Stevenson and Estes Kefauver were defeated as the voters turned out in record numbers to give the President their vote of confidence for four more years of "peace, progress and prosperity."

Early predictions of a close race disappeared as revolts in Eastern Europe and Middle East warfare strengthened the Republicans' cry of "We need Ike." Only in the Congressional races did the electorate show dissatisfaction with the Republican program, and President Eisenhower became the only President besides Zachary Taylor to win with an opposing Congress.

The unofficial popular count, omitting Rhode Island's absentee votes, gave President Eisenhower 35,575,420 votes; Stevenson 26,033,066; others, 417,090. The nearly complete total of 62,025,576 votes topped the previous record 61,551,919 set in the 1952 Presidential election. Only Franklin D. Roosevelt's sweep in 1936 was greater than the 1956 Eisenhower victory.

Mr. Eisenhower captured 41 states with 457 electoral votes; Stevenson won seven states with 74 electoral votes. This marked a GOP increase from the 1952 election, when Eisenhower won 55.1 percent of the popular vote and 39 states with 442 electoral votes, compared to Stevenson's nine states with 89 electoral votes.

The seven states Stevenson carried in the 1956 election were Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina and South Carolina. He picked up Missouri, which he lost in 1952, but lost three states which he carried in 1952: Kentucky, Louisiana and West Virginia.

Debate over whether President Eisenhower would or would not run for a second term ended Feb. 29 when the President announced at a news conference his intention to seek re-election. The announcement came five months and five days after the Sept. 24, 1955 heart attack he suffered in Denver, Colo. He said he could not give a clear-cut "yes" or "no" to the question of his candidacy but would give the American people and the Republican party "the full facts" of his decision and let them decide whether or not to renominate him. President Eisenhower Aug. 22 was renominated unanimously on the first ballot at the Republican National Convention.

Stevenson became the first declared candidate of his party Nov. 15, 1955, when he announced he would "do all I can" to become the first defeated Democrat to be renominated since William Jennings Bryan in 1908. He received the nomination Aug. 16 on the first ballot at the Democratic National Convention, amassing 905½ votes to the 210 of his nearest rival - N.Y. Gov. Averell Harriman.

Congressional Elections

The new Senate in the 85th Congress will have 49 Democrats and 47 Republicans, the House 233 Democrats and 201 Republicans. One House vacancy was caused the day after the election by the death of Rep. Antonio M. Fernandez (D N.M.). It will be filled in a special election April 9, 1957.

In the Senate, the Democrats picked up four seats, the Republicans four, to leave no change over the party makeup of the 84th Congress. However, Senate organization was left uncertain because of doubts as to when three Members would take their seats -- Sens.-elect Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio) and Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.), and a successor to Sen. Price Daniel (D Texas), who would become Texas' governor Jan. 15, 1957.

In the House, the Democrats held 230 seats before the election, the Republicans, 201, with four vacancies, two in each party. Republicans picked up nine seats, Democrats 11.

In the 1952 Presidential election year, Republicans won control of both chambers. The GOP won 23 Senate seats and had 25 held over, giving it 48 seats. Democrats won 12 seats, with 35 held over, for a total of 47. Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.) at that time termed himself an Independent and voted with the GOP to organize the Senate. In the House, Republicans in 1952 won 221 seats, Democrats 213, with one Independent.

There were 30 governors' races in 1956, including Maine's, decided in a Sept. 10 election. Republicans won in 15 states, and so did the Democrats. Fourteen Democratic governors were up for election, 16 Republicans. Democrats picked up five governorships; Republicans four. Democrats made a net gain of one.

In the 35 Senate races, 18 Democrats were elected (31 held over), and 17 Republicans were elected (30 held over). Democrats picked up four seats from Republicans in Colorado, Idaho, Ohio and Pennsylvania; Republicans picked up four seats in Kentucky (2), New York and West Virginia.

Election Firsts

President Eisenhower's landslide victory set records, kept others intact and brought many firsts throughout the country. Among them:

The eight "weathervane counties," that have been right in every Presidential election since 1896, did it again. The never-fail oracles: Coos and Stratford Counties, N.H.; Palo Alto and Jasper Counties, Iowa; Albany and Laramie Counties, Wyo.; Vanderburg County, Ind.; and Crook County, Ore.

Arizona and New Mexico kept intact their records of always voting for the winning Presidential candidate.

Louisiana broke an 80-year tradition against voting for a Republican President. The last time the state went Republican was in 1876 -- for Rutherford B. Hayes.

Maine gave President Eisenhower the biggest vote any political candidate ever has received in the state, as well as the largest majority and highest percentage of any Presidential nominee.

The President was the first Republican Presidential candidate to carry Chicago since Herbert Hoover's 1928 victory.

Adlai E. Stevenson failed, as he did in 1952, to carry either his home state of Illinois or Lake County in which he lives.

Sen. Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) went down to defeat not only in his state and county, but also in the precinct where he voted.

Judge Dalip Singh Saund (D) became the first native of India elected to Congress (Calif. 29th District).

2nd Time in History . . .

PRESIDENT ELECTED WITH OPPOSING CONGRESS

For the second time in American history the voters have bestowed the Presidency on one party and control of both chambers of Congress on another.

In 1848, Zachary Taylor, a Whig, was elected President, but the Democrats won a 10-vote lead in the Senate and a three-vote lead in the House. Such a split was not repeated until 1956, when the electorate teamed President Eisenhower with a Democratic Congress.

Since the Civil War, 11 Presidents, including Mr. Eisenhower, have bucked Congressional opposition in one or both chambers. In every case but two, this resulted from mid-term elections. The two exceptions: Democrat Grover Cleveland, who faced a seven-vote Republican majority in the Senate at the beginning of his first term in 1885, and Republican Rutherford B. Hayes, who faced a 19-vote Democratic majority in the House in 1877.

Only two Republican Presidents since the Civil War have faced opposition of both Senate and House. The first was Hayes in the 46th Congress (1879-81). The second was President Eisenhower in the 84th (1955-57).

Four Democratic Presidents since the Civil War have suffered opposition control of both chambers of Congress. Most recent was Harry S. Truman, who in 1947-49 had a GOP-controlled Senate and House. Truman won re-election and a Congressional majority in 1948 with a vigorous campaign studded with blasts at the "worst" 80th Congress. Other Presidents saddled with opposition Congresses were Woodrow Wilson, Cleveland in his second term and Andrew Johnson. Johnson, a War Democrat, was Abraham Lincoln's Vice President. Following Lincoln's assassination, Johnson struggled through his term with both the 39th and 40th Congresses controlled by Republicans.

Cleveland was the only post-Civil War President to face a Senate controlled by the opposition party while the House remained in friendly hands. But it happened to him twice, during the 49th and 50th Congresses. Both times Democrats retained sizeable majorities in the House, but Republicans organized the Senate.

House Opposition

Six times during Republican Presidencies Democrats controlled the House while the GOP organized the Senate. Most recent case occurred during the Administration of Herbert Hoover in 1931-33. Democrats organized the House because of deaths between the election and the convening of the 72nd Congress, but Republicans retained their grip on the Senate.

Other Presidents since Civil War days who faced friendly Senates and opposition-dominated Houses: Hayes, William Howard Taft, Benjamin Harrison, Chester A. Arthur and Ulysses S. Grant. All were Republicans.

All told, Presidents have had to cope with opposition control of one or both chambers of Congress 15 times since the Civil War. Party splits between the administration and Congress occurred 10 times between 1861 and 1900.

Since the turn of the century, five administrations have bucked opposition control of one or both chambers. In three of these cases the opposition party went on to win the Presidency in the next election.

Democrats who controlled the House in 1911-13, during the Taft Administration, pushed through many so-called "pop gun" measures. Taft's vetoes of these bills was one cause of his defeat in 1912.

Woodrow Wilson faced the problem in 1919-21, when Republicans controlled both chambers of the 66th Congress. Democrats organized the House during the last two years of the Hoover Administration, and, according to the ex-President, used "sabotage and obstructionist tactics." Both Hoover and Wilson met defeat at the polls at the next general election.

Republicans controlled both chambers in 1947-49 and battled President Truman over tax cuts and a new labor law. Truman went on to win re-election and a Congress of his own political complexion. The fifth case was that of President Eisenhower and the 84th Congress. Mr. Eisenhower was re-elected, but he failed to get the GOP Congress he asked for.

Minority Parties

Twice since the Civil War independents or members of minority parties have helped the party of the White House influence the organization of one chamber of Congress. The most recent case was in 1917, when the Democrats organized the House even though the Republicans outnumbered them 216-210. Nine Representatives from other parties teamed up with the Democrats to elect a Democratic Speaker, Champ Clark.

Other-party members also helped break the only Republican-Democratic deadlock in history at the start of a Senate session. The Senate party lineup in 1881, at the start of the 47th Congress, was 37 Republicans, 37 Democrats and two Senators of other parties. A Republican, Chester A. Arthur, was in the White House. Senate Republicans, joined by one "Readjustor," finally elected David Davis as Senate President Pro Tem. Davis, a former Republican who had been elected to the Senate as a Democrat, said he considered his selection as President Pro Tem recognition of his "independent position" in politics. He frequently supported the GOP cause and was criticized by Democrats for his lack of party regularity.

Presidential Weapon -- The Veto

The Presidential veto has been a potent and often used weapon in the "cold war" between a President and an opposition Congress. But if Congress and the President run true to form, President Eisenhower will use it sparingly in the 85th Congress. During the Democratic 84th, Mr. Eisenhower vetoed 34 measures, less than the 52 he vetoed during the Republican 83rd.

Five of his predecessors found the veto power useful in dealing with an opposition Congress. Truman vetoed 250 measures during the nearly eight years he was President, almost one-third of them during the Republican 80th Congress. Cleveland used the veto power 584 times during his two terms as President. Only Franklin D. Roosevelt used it more. Wilson used 28 of his 44 vetoes when the Republicans ran Congress. Hayes vetoed only 13 measures and Johnson 28. Fifteen of Johnson's vetoes were overriden, an all-time record which suggests that a determined Congress always can have the last word.

20 HOUSE SEATS CHANGE PARTIES IN 1956 ELECTION

Twenty seats in the House of Representatives changed hands in the Congressional elections of Nov. 6 (and Sept. 10 in Maine). Democrats picked up 11 seats. In turn, Republican candidates captured nine seats from Democrats. Names of the winners and losers appear in the adjoining column.

Seven of the GOP gains were recorded in the East -- two seats in New Jersey, two in West Virginia and one each in Connecticut, Delaware and Pennsylvania. Democrats picked up only one seat in the East, in Maine. In the Midwest, Republicans recaptured seats in Illinois and Michigan, while Democrats scored gains of one seat each in Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and South Dakota. Biggest Democratic gains occurred in the West with six new seats: two each in California and Oregon, one each in Montana and Nevada. Although Republicans retained their numerical advantage in the three regions outside the South (where no seats changed hands), Democrats approached equality in the West.

	Dem	GOP	Dem	GOP
East	58	71	52	77
South	110	10	110	10
Midwest	44	85	46	83
West	20	37	26	31
TOTALS	232	203	234	201

Analysis of the switched districts in terms of census data compiled by Congressional Quarterly as well as previous election returns shows that:

- Of the 11 districts picked up by Democrats, all but the California 11th are rural or small-town in their make-up. By contrast, all but one of the nine GOP pickups -- the West Virginia Fourth -- came in mid-urban or metropolitan districts.

- Farm workers number less than 10 percent of all employed persons in all of the GOP pickup districts with the exception of the West Virginia Fourth. Conversely, farm workers number more than 10 percent in all of the Democratic pickup districts with the exception of the Maine Second. In eight of the 11 districts, farm workers run over 20 percent, and in four, over 30 percent.

- Blue-collar workers average 48.9 percent of all employed persons in the nation. They exceed this percentage in all nine GOP pickup districts, but in only three of the 11 Democratic pickups -- Maine Second, Nevada At Large and Oregon Fourth.

- President Eisenhower carried all of the 11 Democratic pickup districts in 1952, 10 by more than 60 percent of the vote. Republican Congressional candidates likewise carried all of these districts in 1952, in nine by more than 60 percent of the vote. In 1954, GOP candidates won by more than 60 percent in three of these districts (Iowa Sixth, Kansas Fifth and Nebraska Third) and by less than 55 percent in six (California 11th, Maine Second, Missouri Seventh, Montana Second, Nevada At Large, and Oregon Second). Five of the nine GOP pickups were lost to Democrats in 1954 (Delaware At Large, Illinois Third, Michigan Sixth, Pennsylvania 19th and West Virginia Fourth).

Breakdown of Party Switches

Republicans picked up nine Democratic-held seats in the House, Democrats picked up 11 GOP-held seats as a result of the 1956 elections. Each party picked up four Senate seats. The Democrats won five GOP governorships, the GOP won four Democratic governorships.

The following breakdown of switches for the House, Senate and governorships gives the name of the winning and losing candidate. Under the name of the losing candidate is the name of the person who held the seat prior to the election, if he was not running for re-election.

THREE SENATE CANDIDATES WIN ELECTIONS FOR SHORT TERMS

Of the 35 Senators elected Nov. 6, three won short terms: W. Chapman Revercomb (R W.Va.), a two-year term; Strom Thurmond (D S.C.) and John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.), four-year terms. The three were ex-Senators.

Seven were newcomers to the Senate: John A. Carroll (D Colo.), an ex-Rep. (1947-51); Frank Church (D Idaho); Joseph S. Clark Jr. (D Pa.); Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.), an ex-Rep. (1947-55); ex-Gov. Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio); Thruston B. Morton (R Ky.), an ex-Rep. (1947-53); and ex-Gov. Herman Talmadge (D Ga.).

The 25 re-elected incumbents were:

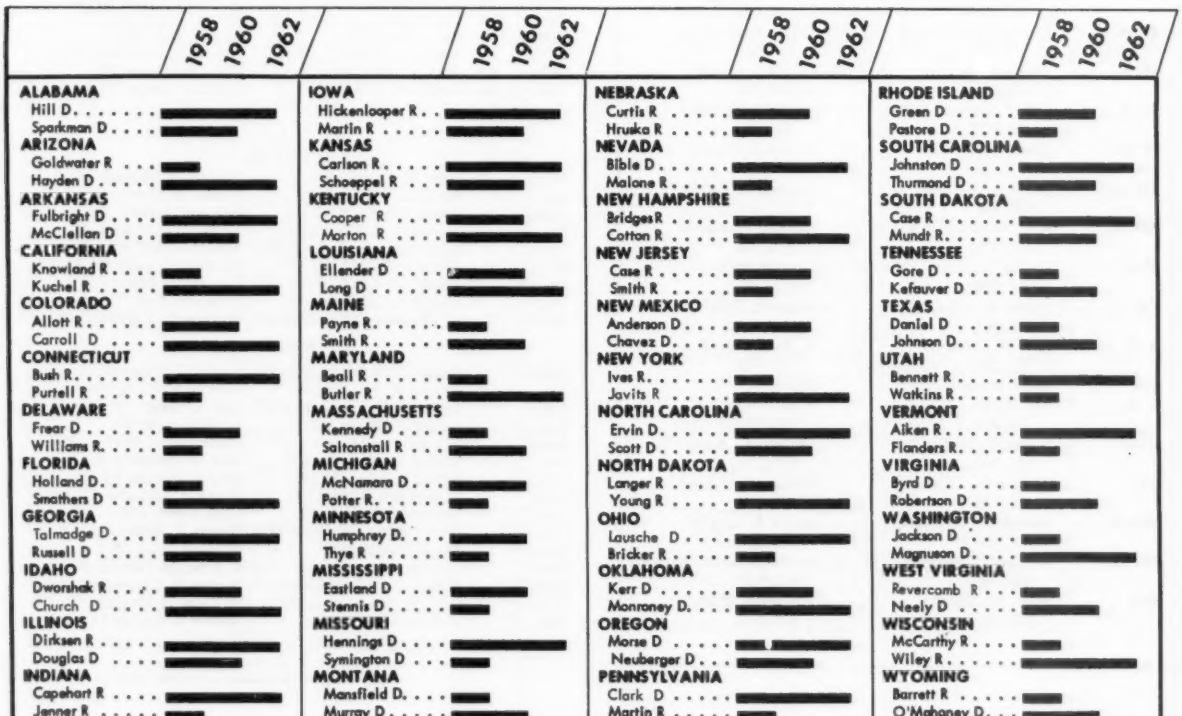
Upsets, Close Races

The Senatorial elections were marked by upsets in Idaho, Colorado and Kentucky; close races in Nevada, Pennsylvania and South Dakota; and losses by several of the President's strongest supporters.



These candidates suffered upsets: Sens. Herman Welker (R Idaho), Earle C. Clements (D Ky.) and ex-Gov. Dan Thornton (R Colo.). Welker was beaten by 32-year-old Church by almost 8,000 votes. Clements, Democratic Whip in the 84th Congress, lost by less than 5,000 votes to Morton, who resigned as Assistant Secretary of State to run for office. Thornton, close friend of Mr. Eisenhower, was defeated by Carroll, 319,872 to 317,102.

In Pennsylvania and South Dakota the vote was so close opposing candidates seesawed between victory and defeat to the bitter end. Sen. James H. Duff (R Pa.), staunch Eisenhower supporter, lost to ex-Philadelphia Mayor Clark by about 17,000 out of 4.5 million votes. Sen. Case (R S.D.) came from behind to beat Kenneth Holum by an unofficial 7,000 votes. In Nevada, Sen. Bible (D) defeated Rep. Clifton Young with an unofficial margin of under 5,000 votes.

One of the most bitter campaigns of the election -- in Oregon -- ended in victory for Wayne Morse, Republican-turned-Democrat, who defeated President Eisenhower's ex-Secretary of Interior, Douglas McKay, 396,849 to 335,405. Another strong Eisenhower supporter who lost was Gov. Arthur B. Langlie (R Wash.), keynoter at the GOP National Convention, whom Sen. Magnuson defeated by an unofficial 608,854 to 382,864 votes.

The Wisconsin race ended in victory for Sen. Wiley. His closest struggle was in the primary, where he was opposed by Rep. Glenn R. Davis, who was endorsed by the state GOP organization. President Eisenhower refused to take a stand on either candidate, said he should not interfere. Wiley Sept. 11 defeated Davis by an unofficial vote of 217,402 to 207,693 and went on to win easily Nov. 6 over Henry W. Maier (D).

The chart below shows the years in which Senators of the 85th Congress will face re-election:

DEMOCRATS ADD TO THEIR GOVERNORSHIPS

The Democrats and Republicans each won 15 gubernatorial races in 1956. Rhode Island's race was not decided until Dec. 17, when absentee ballots gave the victory to Christopher Del Sesto (R) over Gov. Dennis J. Roberts (D). Roberts held a 204 vote lead before the absentee count.

Election results gave the Democrats 28 governors for 1957 to 20 for the GOP. Maine's election was won by incumbent Gov. Edmund S. Muskie (D) Sept. 10. In the Nov. 6 balloting Democrats took five capitols from the Republicans, lost four to the GOP.

Democrats ousted Republicans in Massachusetts, Iowa, Kansas, Oregon and Washington. In Kansas, Iowa and Oregon they defeated Republican incumbents. In Massachusetts, Republican Gov. Christian A. Herter was not a candidate for re-election. In Washington, Republican Gov. Arthur B. Langlie was the unsuccessful GOP candidate for the Senate.

Republicans ousted Democrats in West Virginia, Ohio, Rhode Island and New Mexico. In New Mexico the Democratic incumbent was defeated. In West Virginia Gov. William C. Marland was an unsuccessful Senate candidate. Ohio Gov. Frank J. Lausche ran for the Senate and won.

Senate Balance

Twenty-three governors might have an opportunity to shift the Senate balance in the 85th Congress if at least one of their state's Senators died or resigned.

In 1957, 20 Republican Senators will represent 13 states where a Democrat sits in the governor's chair:

State	Senator	Age
Arizona	Barry Goldwater	47
Colorado	Gordon Allott	49
Connecticut	Prescott Bush	61

85th CONGRESS POTPOURRI

The makeup of the 85th Congress will be much the same as that of the 84th -- lawyers again predominate; 16 women again represent the "fair sex;" the oldest member again will be Sen. Theodore Francis Green (D R.I.)

In age, however, the average lawmaker will be over one year older than the average Member of the 84th Congress. The average: 53.8 years. The Democrats claim the oldest and youngest Members in the Senate and House.

Congress	Senate	House	Both Chambers
85th	57.9	52.9	53.8
84th	57.2	51.4	52.2
83rd	56.6	52	53
82nd	56.6	52	53

Sen. Green, at 89, is the oldest person ever to serve in Congress. (See p. 16) The youngest Senator will be Frank Church (D Idaho), who is 32. Oldest and youngest Senate Republicans will be Edward Martin (Pa.), 77, and Charles E. Potter (Mich.), 38.

In the House, the youngest member will be John Dingell (D Mich.), who is 30; the oldest member, Brent Spence (D Ky.), 82. Close behind Spence as elder statesmen are three Republicans, all 81 -- Clare E. Hoffman (Mich.), newly-elected Will Neal (W.Va.), and Daniel A. Reed (N.Y.). Youngest Republican will be Edwin H. May Jr. (Conn.), 32. Also 32 are Reps. Merwin Coad (D Iowa), Kenneth Gray (D Ill.) and Joe Holt (R Calif.).

Lawyers account for more than half the membership of the 85th Congress, and nearly one-third of the Members have business or banking backgrounds. Almost 98 percent of the Senators and 93.5 percent of the Representatives have had prior experience in politics or civic service. Fifty-nine percent of the House and 68 percent of the Senate are veterans of the armed forces. Two Representatives are ministers: Adam C. Powell Jr. (D N.Y.) and Merwin Coad (D Iowa). Coad also is Iowa's first Democrat in the House since 1940.

Some Congressmen have engaged in more than one profession, which explains why the percentages in the following breakdown total more than 100. A few, such as housewives, fit into no professional category. The Senate tabulation is based on 95 of 96 members; the House, on 434 of 435 members.

	84th Congress		85th Congress
	Senate	House	Senate	House
Agriculture	22%	11%	21%	11%
Business or Banking	29	29	29	30
Journalism	10	9	9	7
Law	63	56	65	56
Medicine, Dentistry, Engineer	4	3	4	2
Teaching	18	10	18	11

Women legislators held their own in the election, adding two new faces and losing two incumbents. Fifteen women won House seats, while the term of the lone woman Senator, Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith (R Maine), extends until 1961. The Democratic women bested their Republican sisters, taking nine seats to the GOP's six. All but one winner in each party were incumbents.

The two new women Members of Congress are Mrs. Florence P. Dwyer (R N.J.) and Mrs. Kathryn E. Granahan (D Pa.). Mrs. Dwyer, the first Republican woman ever nominated in her state, won over the Democratic incumbent, Harrison A. Williams Jr. Mrs. Granahan, the widow of Rep. William T. Granahan, who died in May, 1956, won over Republican candidate Robert F. Frankenfield.

The two women incumbents who were defeated -- both Republicans -- were Rep. Ruth Thompson of Michigan, who lost in a primary, and Mrs. Elizabeth P. Farrington, the Delegate from Hawaii.

EX-CONGRESSMEN RETURN

The 85th Congress will welcome back a number of former Congressmen. Two ex-Senators and three ex-Representatives won Senate seats. Five ex-Representatives and one ex-Senator won House seats. Returning to the Senate are: ex-Rep. John A. Carroll (D Colo., 1947-51); ex-Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R Ky., 1946-49, 1952-55); ex-Rep. Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y., 1947-55); ex-Rep. Thruston B. Morton (R Ky., 1947-53); and ex-Sen. Chapman Revercomb (R W.Va., 1943-49).

Returning to the House are: ex-Rep. Walter S. Baring (D Nev., 1949-53); ex-Rep. Lindley Beckworth (D Texas, 1939-53); ex-Sen. Alton Lennon (D N.C., 1953-55); ex-Rep. Toby Morris (D Okla., 1947-53); ex-Rep. S. Walter Stauffer (R Pa., 1953-55); and ex-Rep. Will E. Neal (R W.Va., 1953-55).

Lane Re-elected After Prison Term

Rep. Thomas J. Lane (D Mass.), re-elected Nov. 6 to his ninth term, became the second known person elected to Congress after serving a prison term. He defeated Robert T. Breed (R) by an unofficial 87,332 to 48,154 count.

Lane was sentenced April 30 in U.S. District Court in Boston to four months imprisonment and fined $10,000 after he pleaded guilty to willful evasion of $38,542 in federal income taxes for 1949-50-51. The court denied his request to plead nolo contendere ("not contested") The tax returns involved were filed jointly by Lane and his wife, but Mrs. Lane was not indicted.

Nomination papers for Lane were filed July 20, and he was released from prison Sept. 4. In the Sept. 18 Massachusetts primary, Lane easily won renomination in the heavily Democratic Seventh District. Unofficial voting totals gave him 24,320 votes, with his nearest opponent, State Sen. Andrew P. Quigley, receiving 11,644.

1799 PRECEDENT

The only other known Congressman to serve after imprisonment was Matthew Lyon, a Vermont anti-Federalist. Lyon was re-elected by an overwhelming majority to the Sixth Congress in 1799 after serving a four-month prison term and paying a $1,000 fine on charges of violating the Sedition Act. It was alleged that there was "doubtful legality" and possible jury-packing in the conviction of Lyon, who was strongly opposed to the Sedition Act. Lyon, who also had served in the Fifth Congress (1797-98), later became a member of the House from Kentucky (1803-11). In 1840 Congress passed a bill refunding to Lyon's heirs his $1,000 fine -- an indication that the charges of "doubtful legality" might have been true.

Not so fortunate in his career following legal proceedings against him was Rep. John J. Bell (D Texas), who was indicted in 1955 on a charge of conspiracy to commit theft in a land transaction. (1955 Almanac, p. 393) Bell, whose indictment was dismissed late in 1955 on a technicality, sought renomination in 1956 from the 14th District in the July 28 Texas primary, but was defeated by a newcomer, John Young (D).

Rep. Green Indicted

Rep. William J. Green Jr. (D Pa.), elected Nov. 6 to his sixth term from Philadelphia's 5th District, was indicted Dec. 14 by a federal grand jury in Scranton, Pa. Green, ex-Rep. Herbert J. McGlinchey (D Pa., 1945-47) and five contractors were charged with conspiracy and accused of fraud in the construction of a $33 million Army Signal Corps depot at Tobyhanna, Pa.

The indictment said Green received "money and other things of value" from the contractors with the "intent to influence his action" on matters pending before the House Armed Services Committee, of which he was a member. Green was charged with receiving $10,000 from one of the indicted contractors and $20,000 in premiums on performance bonds from five of the contractors. He runs an insurance business in Philadelphia, where he is also Democratic Committee chairman.

Past cases of alleged Congressional corruption over the years include:

- Rep. B. Frank Whelchel (D Ga., 1935-44) in 1940 was indicted on charges he conspired to sell and barter appointive offices. Then serving his third term in Congress, he was acquitted May 6, 1940.
- Rep. James M. Curley (D Mass., 1943-46), former mayor of Boston and governor of Massachusetts, was convicted Jan. 18, 1946, of using the mails to defraud. He served five months of a six-to 18-month sentence. The sentence was commuted Nov. 26, 1947, and he was granted a full pardon by President Truman April 12, 1950.
- Rep. Andrew J. May (D Ky., 1931-46), a former Chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, was convicted July 3, 1947, of taking money for influencing the War Department and other agencies to give contracts to a munitions firm. He was paroled Sept. 18, 1950, after serving nine months of an eight-to 24-month sentence, was granted a full pardon by President Truman Dec. 24, 1950.
- Rep. John M. Coffee (D Wash., 1937-47) in 1941 was charged with having accepted a $2,500 check for services rendered in connection with a War Department contract. A Senate committee held hearings in July, 1946, but never submitted a report or made any recommendation to the Senate. Coffee contended the check was a campaign contribution and had been used to reimburse himself for expenses of his 1938 campaign. He was defeated for reelection in November, 1946.
- Rep. J. Parnell Thomas (R N.J., 1937-49), former Chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, Nov. 30, 1949, pleaded nolo contendere (no contest) to indictments charging him with payroll-padding and accepting salary kickbacks from employees. He was sentenced to serve from six to 18 months on Dec. 9, 1949, was paroled Sept. 10, 1950. He was granted a full pardon by Truman Dec. 24, 1950.
- Rep. Walter E. Brehm (R Ohio, 1943-52) was convicted April 30, 1951, on five counts of accepting campaign contributions from his Congressional office clerks. He was sentenced June 11, 1951, to five to 15 months in prison (which was suspended) and a $5,000 fine. His district was revamped and he did not run in 1952.
- Rep. Leonard Irving (D Mo., 1949-52), president of a labor union local, was indicted June 8, 1951, on charges of misusing union funds for his 1948 election campaign. He was acquitted Dec. 28, 1951.
- Rep. John L. McMillan (D S.C.), accused of violating the law barring Members of Congress from contracting with the government, was acquitted May 16, 1953. He had leased oil and gas lands in Utah from the Department of Interior. Acquittal was based on a finding that there was "no actual showing of criminal intent."
- Rep. Ernest K. Bramblett (R Calif., 1947-54) was indicted in 1953 by a federal grand jury on 18 counts of making false statements in connection with alleged payroll kickbacks from Congressional employees. He was convicted on seven counts on Feb. 9, 1954, but appealed his case to the Supreme Court, which upheld the conviction. On June 15, 1955, Bramblett was fined $5,000 by the District Court and given a four to 12-month suspended sentence. The U.S. Court of Appeals Jan. 19, 1956, upheld Bramblett's conviction.

SENATE

- Sen. James F. Simmons (Whig R.I., 1841-47, 1857-62) resigned his seat in 1862 after being accused of using his office for private monetary gain. A resolution to unseat him was introduced in the Senate, but no action was taken on it before his resignation.
- Sen. Alexander Caldwell (R Kan., 1871-73) resigned from the Senate after a committee investigating bribery and corruption in his election campaign recommended he be unseated.
- Sen. William A. Clark (D Mont., 1899-1900, 1901-07) resigned his seat in 1899 after an investigating committee charged his election had been procured by bribery and recommended his expulsion. He was re-elected to the Senate in 1901.
- Sen. Joseph R. Burton (R Kan., 1901-06) was convicted in 1906 of receiving pay for services rendered before a federal department. The Senate approved an investigation, Burton tendered his resignation and the case was dropped.
- Sen. William Lorimer (R Ill., 1909-12) was excluded from the Senate July 13, 1912, when the Senate adopted a resolution declaring "that corrupt methods and practices were employed in his election."
- Sen. Arthur R. Gould (R Maine, 1926-31) was accused of bribery in a 1912 court case, but a Senate committee exonerated him in 1927.
- Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo (D Miss., 1935-47) was charged in 1946 with having received checks totalling $33,750 for services to two war contractors in 1942, with having had other contractors build an elaborate mansion for him in 1941 and with erecting a parsonage on his property which was never turned over to the church to which it was supposed to belong. A subcommittee of the Senate National Defense Program Committee did not recommend any action, but concluded Bilbo had "improperly used his high office...for his personal gain." The Senate failed to seat him at the beginning of the 80th Congress.

1956 DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

The Aug. 13-17 Democratic National Convention nominated Adlai E. Stevenson and Sen. Estes Kefauver (Tenn.) to be the party's 1956 Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates respectively.

Stevenson was nominated Aug. 16 on the first ballot, after he had amassed 905½ votes to 210 for his major rival, New York Gov. Averell Harriman. (For voting by states, see p. 766) After the roll call a motion to make the nomination unanimous was presented by Oklahoma Gov. Raymond Gary, who had nominated Harriman, and adopted by a chorus of yeas.

At the end of the balloting, with 686½ votes needed to win, the totals were:

Adlai E. Stevenson (Ill.)	905½
Averell Harriman (N.Y.)	210
Lyndon B. Johnson (Texas)	80
Stuart Symington (Mo.)	45½
A.B. (Happy) Chandler (Ky.)	36½
James C. Davis (Ga.)	33
John S. Battle (Va.)	32½
George Bell Timmerman Jr. (S.C.)	23½
Frank J. Lausche (Ohio)	5½
TOTAL	1,372

Following his nomination in Chicago, Stevenson made a brief appearance before the convention. He told the delegates he had decided "to depart from the precedents of the past" and that "the selection of the Vice Presidential nominee should be made through the free processes of this convention."

Kefauver Aug. 17 won an "open" and hard-fought contest for the Vice Presidential nomination on the second ballot with 750 votes. Sen. John F. Kennedy (Mass.), his major rival, had a total of 593. (For voting by states, see p. 767) Following the roll call, the nomination was made unanimous.

Voting for principal contenders for the nomination:

	First Ballot	Second Ballot	After Switches
Sen. Estes Kefauver (Tenn.)	483½	551½	750
Sen. John F. Kennedy (Mass.)	304	618	593
Sen. Albert Gore (Tenn.)	178	110½	11½
Robert F. Wagner (N.Y.)	162½	9½	6
Sen. Hubert Humphrey (Minn.)	134½	74	5

Other highlights of the five-day convention:

KEYNOTE ADDRESS

Tennessee's Gov. Frank G. Clement keynoted the convention with attacks on President Eisenhower, Vice President Richard M. Nixon and the Republican party. Clement said the President was responsible for actions of the GOP and could not be aloof from them. He called Nixon the "vice hatchetman" of the GOP, said the Republicans had given the country an "...Administration with a sordid record of broken promises and unredeemed pledges." He said the GOP was a party that "degenerated while out of power to the extent that it was not qualified to govern upon its return...."

"...we are not just against the Republican party," Clement said, "...we are just for the American people."

Tagging the Republicans a "party of privilege and pillage," Clement said the GOP should be "indicted" for having acted:

"...to forget the farmer, while catering to the corporate interests; to liquidate the gains of labor; to sacrifice the small businessman while subsidizing his corporate competitor; to delegate the duties of the Presidency; to lighten the tax load on the few, while the living costs of the many continue to mount; to prevent power from being the property of the people; to follow a fantastic, frantic and fatal foreign policy; to callously, circuitously... counteract and nullify acts and intent of Congress...."

Platform

The convention Aug. 16 adopted the 1956 party platform as drafted by the Platforms and Resolutions Committee. An attempt to substitute a "stronger" civil rights plank was defeated by voice vote after an orderly but emotional 30-minute debate. The full platform was approved by voice vote at 1:24 a.m. (Platform text begins on p. 768)

The civil rights plank adopted by the convention recognized as law Supreme Court decisions outlawing segregation but rejected "all proposals for the use of force" in carrying them out. It also pledged to "continue efforts" to eliminate illegal discrimination in voting, employment and education and to provide full legal security for individuals.

The minority report, backed by 14 northern and western committee members, would have inserted a pledge to "carry out" the Court's decisions. It also called for federal legislation to secure and protect equal rights. (For full text of minority report, see box, next page.)

HIGHLIGHTS OF PLATFORM

The preamble of the 15,000-word platform charged that the Republican party had been "made captive to big businessmen of small mind," and pledged the Democrats to "return our national government to its rightful owners, the people of the United States." Highlights of the platform:

- FOREIGN POLICY -- President Eisenhower's "handling of the day by day problems of international affairs had unnecessarily and dangerously subjected the American people to the risk of atomic world war." GOP Administration charged with weakening international alliances by inept maneuvering. Pledged defensive arms for Israel, resistance to admission of Communist China to the United Nations, reappraisal of foreign aid, support of free access to the Suez Canal under "suitable" international auspices, liberalization of U.S. immigration policies.
- DOMESTIC POLICY -- Republican prosperity has been an "illusion." Democrats would strive to attain by 1960 a $500 billion national economy, a 20 percent increase in the average standard of living.

Civil Rights Minority Report

The text of the rejected minority report on the civil rights plank, as read to the convention by Minnesota Delegate Robert E. Short (for text of platform, p. 768):

"Amend paragraph 4 to read: Recent decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States relating to segregation in publicly supported schools and elsewhere have brought consequences of vast importance to our nation as a whole and especially to communities directly affected. We pledge to carry out these decisions but we reject all proposals for the use of force to interfere with the orderly determination of these matters by the courts." (Note: Words underlined were not in the majority plank; the rest of this section was identical with the majority plank.)

"Substitute the following paragraph from the 1952 platform for the second sentence in paragraph 3 beginning 'Democratic party pledges....'

"At the same time, we favor federal legislation effectively to secure these rights to everyone: (1) The right to equal opportunity for employment; (2) The right to security of persons; (3) The right to full and equal participation in this nation's political life, free from arbitrary restraints. We also favor legislation to perfect existing federal civil rights statutes and to strengthen the administrative machinery for the protection of civil rights."

• NATIONAL DEFENSE -- Under GOP, political considerations of budget balancing and tax reduction come before national security considerations; Republicans have "slashed" U.S. armed strength, "stifled" the Air Force. A strong defense force was pledged that would be so "clearly superior" to the enemy's that attack upon the free world would be "unthinkable."

• TAXES -- A "realistic tax adjustment" with first consideration to small independent business and small individual taxpayers. An increase in existing personal tax exemption of $600 to minimum of $800 was pledged.

• AGRICULTURE -- The Administration's "extravagant expenditure of money intended for agricultural benefit without direction or results" was a "national calamity." Pledged repeal of flexible price supports, achievement of "full 100 percent of (farm) parity" by restoring rigid 90 percent farm price supports, making direct payments to producers and other means.

• LABOR -- "Unequivocably" advocated repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, pledged raise in minimum wage from $1 an hour to $1.25 an hour.

• TRADE -- Pledged to continue to support "vigorously" the "Hull reciprocal trade program." Pledged to "correct" economic injury to agriculture, industry and labor resulting from Republican administration of the reciprocal trade law.

• WELFARE -- Pledged to expand and improve social welfare programs inaugurated under Democratic administrations, including an increase in social security benefits, programs of federal financial aid for medical education without federal controls, federal aid to states for school construction.

• NATURAL RESOURCES -- Condemned Eisenhower Administration for "pillaging" natural resources through "political manipulation and administrative subversion." Pledged support to "full and integrated program of development, protection, management and conservation" of all natural resources for "all our people." Pledged to preserve and strengthen the public power competitive yardstick in power developments, including atomic power plants.

• ATOMIC ENERGY -- Charged that U.S. was "lagging instead of leading" in world race for nuclear power, that Republican Administration had paid "steady service to selfish interests" in field of atomic energy. Pledged to expand and accelerate nuclear development and the domestic civilian atomic power program and to conduct a "comprehensive survey of radiation hazards from bomb tests and reactor operations."

• CONFLICT OF INTEREST -- Charged "scandalous abuses" by workers without compensation under the Republican Administration. Pledged to prevent "any conflict of interests."

• CLEAN ELECTIONS -- Pledged to provide "effective regulation and full disclosure" of campaign expenditures and contributions in federal elections.

• FEDERAL-STATE POWERS -- Recognized the existence of "honest differences of opinion as to the true location of the constitutional line of demarcation between the federal government and the states," and "expressly recognizes the vital importance of the states in the federal union."

• FREEDOM OF INFORMATION -- Condemned Eisenhower Administration for "excessive" secrecy in government, pledged to reverse tendency of federal agencies to delay and withhold information.

Acceptance Speeches

In his Aug. 17 acceptance speech, Stevenson said the Republican party "smothered us in smiles and complacency while our social and economic advancement has ground to a halt and while our leadership and security in the world have been imperiled. In spite of these unparalleled opportunities to lead at home and abroad, they have...been wasting our opportunities and losing our world. ...What this country needs is not propaganda and a personality cult...(but)...leadership and truth.

"The truth is that President Eisenhower, cynically coveted as a candidate but ignored as a leader, is largely indebted to Democrats in Congress for what accomplishments he can claim."

Kefauver, in accepting the Vice Presidential nomination, acclaimed the convention for no "smoke-filled room decisions." He said it was the "first time in contemporary American history in which a great political party chose its Vice Presidential candidate in a free and open convention."

TRUMAN SPEECH

Former President Harry S. Truman Aug. 17 pledged "full support to Adlai Stevenson and Estes Kefauver. ...Any man who can take this convention the way he (Stevenson) did should be able to take the Republicans and Eisenhower this fall." Truman said the country "needs a Democratic victory as badly as it ever did in its history."

Truman had announced his support of the candidacy of Averell Harriman Aug. 11 and made one of the Harriman seconding speeches Aug. 16. He had opposed Stevenson "because he lacks the kind of fighting spirit we need."

DEMOCRATS ADOPT PLATFORM BY VOICE VOTE

Following is the text of the Democratic platform adopted Aug. 16 in Chicago by the convention delegates:

Preamble

In the brief space of three and one-half years the people of the United States have come to realize with tragic consequences that administration of their national Government cannot be entrusted to the hands of political amateurs dominated by representatives of special privilege.

Four years ago relying on pledges and promises which beguiled them into electing a recent convert to Republicanism as President our people have now learned that the party of Lincoln has been made captive to big business men of small mind. They have found that they are now ruled by a Government which they did not elect and to which they have not given their consent.

Their awareness of these facts was demonstrated in 1954 when they returned control of the legislative machinery of the Federal Government to the Eighty-fourth Congress.

From the records of American world leadership under Republican Administration this Democratic Congress has salvaged a portion of the world prestige it enjoyed under the brilliant Administrations of Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman.

Our Eighty-fourth Congress made one of the greatest records in the history of our country. It enacted a program of progressive humane legislation which has defied the efforts of reactionary Republicanism to stall America's progress.

Upon return to the halls of Congress next January and with a Democratic President in the White House it will be the plan and purpose of our party to complete restoration, rehabilitation of American leadership in world affairs and return our national Government to its rightful owners, the people of the United States.

On the threshold of an atomic age in the mid-twentieth century our beloved nation needs the vision, vigor and vitality which can be infused into it only by government under the Democratic party.

We approach the forthcoming election with a firm purpose of effecting such infusion. With the aid and assistance of Divine Providence we shall accomplish it with the aim that the people whom it has served so well may know our program for the return of America to the highway of progress, the Democratic party herewith submits its platform for 1956.

Foreign Policy and National Defense

The Democratic party affirms that world peace is a primary objective of human society. It is more than a suspension of shooting while frenzied and fearful nations stockpile armaments of annihilation.

Achievement of world peace requires political statesmanship and economic wisdom, international understanding and dynamic leadership. True peace is the tranquility of ordered justice on a global scale. It may be destroyed without a shot being fired. It can be fostered and preserved only by the solid unity and common brotherhood of the peoples of the world in the cause of freedom.

The hopes and aspirations of the peoples of all nations for justice and peace depend largely upon the courageous and enlightened administration of the foreign and defense policies of the United States. We deplore the fact that the administration of both policies since 1953 has confused timidity with courage and blindness with enlightenment.

The world's hopes for lasting peace depend upon the conduct of our foreign policy, a function which the Constitution vests in the President of the United States and one which has not been effectively exercised by President Eisenhower. Since 1953, responsibility for foreign affairs has been President Eisenhower's, his alone, and his in full. In the past three years, his conduct of our policies has moved us into realms where we risk grave danger. He has failed to seek peace with determination, for his disarmament policy has failed to strike hard at the institution of war. His handling of the day by day problems of international affairs has unnecessarily and dangerously subjected the American people to the risk of atomic world war.

We need bold leadership, yet in the three years since Stalin's death, in the full year since President Eisenhower's meeting at the "Summit," the Republican Administration has not offered a single concrete new idea to meet the new-style political and economic offensive of the Soviets, which represents, potentially, an even graver challenge than Stalin's use of force. President Eisenhower and his Secretary of State talk at cross-purposes praising neutrality one day, condemning it the next. The Republicans seem unable to make up their minds or give us leadership, while the unity of the free world rapidly disintegrates.

We need to make our peaceful purpose clear beyond dispute in every corner of the world -- yet Dulles brags of "brinks of war." We need a foreign policy which rises above jockeying for partisan position or advantage -- yet, not in memory has there been so little bipartisanship in the administration of our policies, so little candor in their presentation to our people, so much pretending that things are better than they are.

Four years ago, the Republican party boasted of a foreign policy which was to free the Communist satellites, unleash Chiang Kai-shek, repudiate the wartime agreements and reverse the policy of containing Communist expansion. Since 1953 they have done just the opposite, chaining Chiang, standing silent when the peoples rise in East Germany and Poland, fraternizing with the Communists, and weakening the positive Democratic policy of halting Communist expansion.

Our friends abroad now doubt our sincerity. They have seen the solid assurance of collective security under a Democratic administration give place to the uncertainties of personal diplomacy. They have seen the ties of our international alliances and friendship weakened by inept Republican maneuvering.

They have seen traditional action and boldness in foreign affairs evaporate into Republican complacency, retrenchment and empty posturing.

Blustering without dynamic action will not alter the fact that the unity and strength of the free world have been drastically impaired. Witness the decline of NATO, the bitter tragedy of Cyprus, the withdrawal of French forces to North Africa, the uncertainty and dangers in the Middle East, the strength of Germany still uncertain and insecure and resentment rising against United States leadership everywhere.

In Asia, anti-Americanism grows apace; in Burma, Ceylon, Indonesia, India -- aggravated by the clumsy actions of our Government, fanned by the inept statements of our "statesmen."

In the Middle East, the Eisenhower Administration has dawdled and drifted. The results have been disastrous and still worse threatens. Only the good offices of the United Nations in maintaining peace between Israel and her neighbors conceals the diplomatic incapacities of the Republican Administration. The current crisis over Suez is a consequence of inept and vacillating Republican policy. Our Government's mistakes have placed us in a position in the Middle East which threatens the free world with a loss of power and prestige, potentially more dangerous than any we have suffered in the past decade.

Political considerations of budget balancing and tax reduction now come before the wants of our national security and the needs of our allies. The Republicans have slashed our own armed strength and have weakened our capacity to deal with military threats of any sort, stifled our Air Force, starved our Army and weakened our capacity to deal with military threats of any sort save by retreat or by the alternative, "massive retaliation" and global atomic war. Yet, while our troubles mount, they tell us our prestige was never higher, they tell us we were never more secure.

The Democratic party believes that waging peace is a monumental task to be performed honestly, forthrightly, with dedication and consistent effort. We are convinced that the Republican Administration has proved conclusively its lack of these essential qualities.

The way to lasting peace is to forego bluster and bluff, to regain steadiness of purpose, to join again in faithful concert with the community of free nations; to look realistically at the challenging circumstances which confront us, to face them candidly and imaginatively, and return to the Democratic policy of peace through strength.

This is a task for Democrats. This facing of new problems, rising to new challenges, has been our party's mission and its glory for three generations past. President Truman met and mastered Stalin's challenge a decade ago with boldness, courage and imagination, and so will we turn to the challenge before us now, pressing the search for real and lasting peace. To this we pledge:

The United Nations is indispensable for the maintenance of world peace and for the settlement of controversies between nations small and large. We pledge our every effort to strengthen its usefulness and expand its role as guide and guardian of international security and peace. We deplore the Republican tendency to use the United Nations only when it suits them, ignoring or bypassing it whenever they please.

We pledge determined opposition to the admission of the Communist Chinese into the United Nations. They have proven their complete hostility to the purposes of this organization. We pledge continued support to Nationalist China.

We urge a continuing effort to effect the release of all Americans detained by Communist China.

In this atomic age, war threatens the very survival of civilization. To eliminate the danger of atomic war, a universal, effective and enforced disarmament system must be the goal of responsible men and women everywhere. So long as we lack enforceable international control of weapons, we must maintain armed strength to deter war. But technological advances in the field of nuclear weapons make disarmament an urgent problem. Time and distance can never again protect any nation of the world. The Eisenhower Administration, despite its highly publicized proposals for aerial inspection, has made no progress toward this great objective. We pledge the Democratic party to pursue vigorously this great goal of enforced disarmament in full awareness that irreparable injury, even total destruction, now threatens the human race.

We reject the false Republican notion that this country can afford only a second-best defense. We stand for strong defense forces so clearly superior in modern weapons to those of any possible enemy that our armed strength will make an attack upon the free world unthinkable and thus be a major force for world peace. The Republican administration of our armed forces stands indicted for failing to recognize the necessity of proper living standards for the men and women of our armed forces and their families.

We pledge ourselves to the betterment of the living conditions of the members of our armed services and a needed increase in the so-called "fringe benefits."

The Democratic party pledges itself to a bold and imaginative program devised to fully utilize the brain power of America's youth as a guarantee of unquestioned supremacy in the scientific and technical fields.

Scholarships and loan assistance and such other steps as determined desirable must be employed to secure these objectives. This is in the interest of necessary and adequate national defense.

We believe that a strong, effective Civil Defense is a necessary part of national defense. Advances in nuclear weapons have made existing civil defense legislation obsolete.

We pledge ourselves to establish a real program for protecting the civilian population and industry of our nation in place of the present weak and ineffective program. We believe that this is essentially a Federal responsibility.

We inaugurated and we strongly favor collective defense arrangements such as NATO and the organization of American states within the framework of the United Nations. We realize, as the Republicans have not, that mutually recognized common interests can be flexibly adapted to the varied needs and aspirations of all countries concerned.

The Republican party has not grasped one of the dominant facts of mid-century -- that the growth of productive power of the Communist states presents a challenge which cannot be evaded. The Democratic party is confident that, through the freedom we enjoy, a vast increase in productive power of our nation and our allies will be achieved and by their combined capacity they will surmount any challenge.

We believe that in the cause of peace, America must support the efforts of underdeveloped countries on a cooperative basis to organize their own resources and to increase their own economic productivity so they may enjoy the higher living standards which science and modern industry make possible. We will give renewed strength to programs of economic and technical assistance. We support a multilateral approach to these programs, wherever possible, so that burdens are shared and resources pooled among all the economically developed countries with the capital and skills to help in this great task.

Further, while recognizing the relation of our national security to the role of the United States in international affairs, the Democratic party believes the time has come for a realistic reappraisal of the American foreign aid program, particularly as to the extent and conditions to which it should be continued. This reappraisal should determine the standards by which further aid shall be granted, keeping in mind America's objectives in securing world peace.

The tools of truth and candor are even more important than economic tools. The Democratic party believes that once the Administration is purged of the confusion and complacency fostered by the Republicans a new image of America will emerge in the world; the image of a confident America dedicated to her traditional principles, eager to work with other people, honest in its pronouncements and consistent in its policies.

We condemn the Republican Administration for its heartless record of broken promises to the unfortunate victims of Communism. Candidate Eisenhower's 1952 pledges to "liberate" the captive peoples have been disavowed and dishonored.

We declare our deepest concern for the plight of the freedom-loving peoples of Central and Eastern Europe and of Asia, now under the yoke of Soviet dictatorship. The United States, under Democratic leaders, has never recognized the forcible annexation of Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia, or condoned the extension of the Kremlin's tyranny over Poland, Bulgaria, Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Albania and other countries.

We look forward to the day when the liberties of all captive nations will be restored to them and they can again take their rightful place in the community of free nations.

We shall press before the United Nations the principle that Soviet Russia withdraw its troops from the captive countries, so as to permit free, fair and unfettered elections in the subjugated areas, in compliance with the Atlantic Charter and other binding commitments.

We rededicate ourselves to the high principle of national self-determination, as enunciated by Woodrow Wilson, whose leadership brought freedom and independence to uncounted millions.

It is the policy of the Democratic party, therefore, to encourage and assist small nations and all peoples behind the Iron Curtain and outside, in the peaceful and orderly achievement of their legitimate aspirations toward political, geographical, and ethnic integrity, so that they may dwell in the family of sovereign nations with freedom and dignity. We are opposed to colonialism and Communist imperialism.

We apply this principle to the desires of all peoples for self-determination.

The Democratic party has always worked for expanding trade among free nations. Expanding world trade is necessary, not only for our friends but for ourselves; it is the way to meet America's growing need for industrial raw materials. We shall continue to support vigorously the Hull reciprocal trade program.

Under Democratic Administrations, the operation of this act was conducted in a manner that recognized equities for agriculture, industry and labor. Under the present Republican Administration there has been a very flagrant disregard of these important segments of our economy resulting in serious economic injury to hundreds of thousands of Americans engaged in these pursuits. We pledge correction of these conditions.

Through the Marshall Plan, the European economic organization and NATO, the Democratic party encouraged and supported efforts to achieve greater economic and political unity among the free nations of Europe and to increase solidarity of the nations of the North Atlantic community. We will continue those efforts, taking into account the viewpoints and aspirations of different sectors of the European community, particularly in regard to practical proposals for the unification of Germany.

The Democratic party stands for the maintenance of peace in the Middle East which is essential for the well-being and progress of all its peoples.

We will urge Israel and the Arab states to settle their differences by peaceful means, and to maintain the sanctity of the holy places and permit free access to them.

We will assist Israel to build a sound and viable economy for her people, so that she may fulfill her humanitarian mission of providing shelter and sanctuary for her homeless Jewish refugees while strengthening her national development.

We will assist the Arab states to develop their economic resources and raise the living standard of their people. The plight of the Arab refugees commands our continuing sympathy and concern. We will assist in carrying out large-scale projects for their resettlement in countries where there is room and opportunity for them.

We support the principle of free access to the Suez Canal under suitable international auspices. The present policies of the Eisenhower Administration in the Middle East are unnecessarily increasing the risk that war will break out in this area. To prevent war, to assure peace we will faithfully carry out our country's pledge under the tripartite declaration of 1950 to oppose the use of threat of force and to take such action as may be necessary, in the interest of peace, both within and outside the United Nations to prevent any violation of the frontiers of armistice lines.

The Democratic party will act to redress the dangerous imbalance of arms in the area created by the shipment of Communist arms to Egypt, by selling or supplying defensive weapons to Israel, and will take such steps, including security guarantees, as may be required to deter aggression and war in the area.

We oppose, as contrary to American principles, the practice of any Government which discriminates against American citizens on grounds of race or religion. We will not countenance any arrangement or treaty with any Government which by its terms or in its practical application would sanction such practices.

The people of Asia seek a new and freer life and they are in a commendable hurry to get it. They struggle against poverty, ill health and illiteracy. In the aftermath of war, China became a victim of Communist tyranny. But many new free nations have arisen in South and Southeast Asia. South Korea remains free and the new Japan has abandoned her former imperial and aggressive ways. America's task and interest in Asia is to help the free governments demonstrate that their people can have improved living standards, without yielding to Communist tyranny or domination by anyone. That task will be carried out under Democratic leadership.

In the Western Hemisphere the Democratic party will restore the policy of the "good neighbor" which has been alternately neglected and abused by the Republican Administration. We pledge ourselves to fortify the defenses of the Americas. In this respect, we will intensify our cooperation with our neighboring republics to help them strengthen their economies, improve educational opportunities, and combat disease. We will strive to make the Western Hemisphere an inspiring example of what free peoples working together can accomplish.

America's long tradition of hospitality and asylum for those seeking freedom and opportunity and escape from oppression has been besmirched by the delays, failures and broken promises of the Republican Administration. The Democratic party favors prompt revision of the immigration and nationality laws to eliminate unfair provisions under which admissions to this country depend upon quotas based upon the accident of national origin. Proper safeguards against subversive elements should be provided. Our procedures must reflect the principles of our Bill of Rights.

We favor eliminating the provisions of law which charge displaced persons admitted to our shores against quotas for future years. Through such "mortgages" of quotas, thousands of qualified persons are being forced to wait long years before they can hope for admission. We also favor more liberal admission of relatives to eliminate the unnecessary tragedies of broken families. We favor elimination of unnecessary distinctions between native-born and naturalized citizens. There should be no "second-class" citizenship in the United States.

The administration of the Refugee Relief Act of 1953 has been a disgrace to our country. Rescue has been denied to innocent, defenseless and suffering people, the victims of war and the aftermath of wars. The purpose of the act has been defeated by Republican mismanagement.

We will continue to support programs providing succor for escapees from behind the iron curtain, and bringing help to the victims of war and Communist oppression.

Today new challenges call for new ideas and new methods.

In the coming years, our great necessity will be to pull together as a people, with true non-partisanship in foreign affairs under leaders informed, courageous and responsible.

We shall need to work closely with each other as Americans. If we here indict the Republican record, we acknowledge gratefully the efforts of individual Republicans to achieve true bipartisanship. In this spirit an affirmative, cooperative policy can be developed. We shall need to work closely, also, with others all around the world. For there is much to do -- to create once more the will and the power to transform the principles of the United Nations into a living reality; to awaken ourselves and others to the effort and sacrifice which alone can win justice and peace.

Domestic Policy

Twenty years of vivid Democratic accomplishments revived and reinforced our economic system, and wrote humanity upon the statute books. All this, the current Republican Administration inherited.

Substituting deceptive slogans and dismal deeds for the Democratic program, the Republicans have been telling the American people that "we are now more prosperous than ever before in peace-time." For the American farmer, the small businessman and the low-income worker, the old people living on a pittance, the young people seeking an American standard of education, and the minority groups seeking full employment opportunity at adequate wages, this Republican prosperity product has been an illusion.

The evil is slowly but surely infiltrating the entire economic system. Its fever signs are evidenced by soaring monopoly profits, while wages lag, farm income collapses, and small business failures multiply at an alarming rate.

The first time-bomb of the Republican crusade against full prosperity for all was the hard money policy. This has increased the debt burden on depressed farms, saddled heavier costs on small business, foisted higher interest charges on millions of home-owners including veterans, pushed up unnecessarily the cost of consumer credit, and swelled the inordinate profits of a few lenders of money.

It has wrought havoc with the bond market, with resulting financial loss to the ordinary owners of Government bonds.

The Republican tax policy has joined hands in an unholy alliance with the hard money policy. Fantastic misrepresentation of the Government's budgetary position has been used to deny tax relief to low and middle-income families, while tax concessions and handouts have been generously sprinkled among potential campaign contributors to Republican coffers. The disastrously reactionary farm program, the hard-hearted resistance to adequate expansion of Social Security and other programs for human well-being, and favoritism in the award of Government contracts, all have watered the economic tree at the top and neglected its roots.

The Republicans say that employment and production are "higher" than ever before. The fact is that our over-all rate of growth has been crippled and stunted in contrast to its faster increase during the Democratic years 1947-53 after World War II.

With production lagging behind full capacity, unemployment has grown.

The Republican claim that this stunted prosperity is the price of peace is a distortion. National security outlays have averaged a higher part of our total production during these Republican years than during 1947-53, and yet the annual growth in total production during these Republican years has been only about 60 per cent as fast as during the Democratic years. The progress of low-income families toward an American standard of living, rapid during the Democratic years, has been stopped by the Republicans. Federal budgetary outlays for education and health, old age assistance and child care, slum clearance and resources development, and all the other great needs of our people have been mercilessly slashed from an annual rate of more than $57 per capita under the Democrats to $33 per capita under the Republicans, a cut of 42 per cent.

During the Republican fiscal years 1954-57 as a whole the deficits have averaged larger and the surpluses smaller than during the Democratic fiscal years 1947-53.

(1) We repudiate the Republican stunting of our economic growth, and we reassert the principles of the Full Employment Act;

(2) We pledge ourselves to achieve a truly balanced Federal budget in a just and fully prosperous American economy;

(3) We pledge ourselves to equitable tax revisions and money policies designed to combine economic progress with economic justice. We condemn the Republican use of our revenue and money systems to benefit the few at the expense of the people;

(4) We pledge ourselves to work towards the reduction and elimination of poverty in America;

(5) We pledge ourselves to full parity of income and living standards for agriculture; to strike off the shackles which the Taft-Hartley Law has unjustly imposed on labor; and to foster the more rapid growth of legitimate business enterprise by founding this growth upon the expanding consuming power of the people; and

(6) We pledge ourselves to expand world trade and to enlarge international economic cooperation, all toward the end of a more prosperous and more peaceful world.

By adhering to these principles, we shall strive to attain by 1960 the following full prosperity objectives for all American families:

(1) A $500,000,000,000 national economy in real terms;

(2) An increase of 20 per cent or better in the average standard of living;

(3) An increase of annual income for American families with special emphasis on those with incomes below $2,000;

(4) A determined drive toward parity of incomes and living standards for agriculture;

(5) The addition of all necessary classrooms for our primary and secondary schools; the construction of needed new homes, with a proper proportion devoted to the rehousing of low-and middle-income families in urban and rural areas; the increase of benefits under the Old Age Assistance and Old Age Survivors Insurance programs; a substantial expansion in hospital facilities and medical research; and a doubling of our programs for resource development and conservation; and

(6) National defense outlays based upon our national needs, not permitting false economy to jeopardize our very survival.

This country of ours, in the factory and on the farm, is blessed with ever-increasing productive power. The Republicans have not permitted this potential abundance to be released for the mutual benefit of all. We reject this stunted Republican concept of America. We pledge ourselves to release the springs of abundance, to bring this abundance to all, and thus to fulfill the full promise of America.

These are our Democratic goals for the next four years. We set them forth in vivid contrast to Republican lip-service protestations that they too, are for these goals. Their little deeds belie their large and hollow slogans. Our performance in the past gives validity to our goals for the future.

Our victory in 1956 will make way for the commencement of these four years of progress.

Financial Policy

A fully expanding economy can yield enough tax revenue to meet the inescapable obligations of government, balance the Federal budget and lighten the tax burden. The immediate need is to correct the inequities in the tax structure which reflect the Republican determination to favor the few at the expense of the many. We favor realistic tax adjustments, giving first consideration to small independent business and the small individual taxpayer. Lower income families need tax relief; only a Democratic victory will assure this. We favor an increase in the present personal tax exemption of $600 to a minimum of at least $800.

The Republican debt management policy of higher interest rate serves only to benefit a few to the detriment of the general taxpayer, the small borrower, and the small and middle class investor in Government bonds. We pledge ourselves to a vigilant review of our debt management policy in order to reduce interest rates in the service of our common welfare.

Effective administration of the Federal securities laws has been undermined by Republican appointees with conflicting interests. Millions of investors who have bought securities with their savings are today without adequate protection. We favor vigorous administration and revision of the laws to provide investor safeguards for securities extensively traded in the Over-the-Counter Market, for foreign securities distributed in the United States and against proxy contest abuses.

Agriculture

Sustained national prosperity is dependent upon a vigorous agricultural economy. We condemn the defeatist attitude of the Eisenhower Administration in refusing to accept responsibility for the well-being of farm families. We condemn its fear of abundance, its lack of initiative in developing domestic markets, and its dismal failure to obtain for the American farmer his traditional and deserved share of the world market. Its extravagant expenditure of money intended for agricultural benefits, without either direction or results, is a national calamity.

The Eisenhower Administration has failed utterly to develop any programs to meet the desperate needs of farmers in the face of fantastic promises to do so, and it has sabotaged the progressive programs inherited from prior Democratic Administrations by failing to administer them properly in the interest either of farmers or of the nation as a whole.

Specifically, we denounce President Eisenhower's veto of the constructive legislation proposed and passed by the Democratic Eighty-fourth Congress to reverse the alarming fall of farm prices and restore farmers to a position of first-class economic citizenship in the sharing of benefits from American productive ability.

We also condemn the Republican Administration for its abandonment of the true principles of soil conservation and for its destruction of the Soil Conservation Service. We pledge to support continued improvements in the soil bank program passed by the Democratic Eighty-fourth Congress and originally opposed by President Eisenhower and Secretary Ezra Taft Benson. We deplore the diversion of this conservation program into a direct vote-buying scheme.

Farmers have had to struggle for three and one-half years while their net farm income has fallen more than $1,000,000,000 a year. Their parity ratio which under Democratic Administrations had been 100 per cent or more during the eleven years prior to 1953, dropped to as low as 80 per cent during the Eisenhower Administration and the farmers' share of the consumers' food dollar shrank from 47 cents in 1952 to as low as only 38 cents. One stark fact stands clearly for all to see -- disastrously low farm prices and record high consumer prices vie with each other for the attention of responsible Government. In reducing this incongruous spread lies the answer to some of the most vexing problems of agriculture economics.

In their courageous fight to save their homes and land, American farmers have gone deeper and deeper into debt. Last year farmers' mortgage indebtedness increased more than in any year in history with the exception of the year 1923.

The Democratic party met similar situations forthrightly in the past with concrete, remedial action. It has legitimate pride in its consistent record of initiating and developing every constructive program designed to protect and conserve the human and natural resources so vital to our rural economy. These programs enabled consumers to obtain more abundant supplies of high quality food and fiber at reasonable prices while maintaining adequate income for farmers and improving the level of family living in rural areas.

In order to regain the ground lost during the Eisenhower Administration, and in order better to serve both consumers and producers, the Democratic party pledges continuous and vigorous support to the following policies:

Sponsor a positive and comprehensive program to conserve our soil, water and forest resources for future generations;

Promote programs which will protect and preserve the family type farm as a bulwark of American life and encourage farm-home ownership, including additional assistance to family farmers and young farmers in the form of specially designed credit and price support programs, technical aid and enlarged soil conservation allowances;

Maintain adequate reserves of agricultural commodities strategically located, for national security purposes. Such stockpiles should be handled as necessary strategic reserves, so that farmers will not be penalized by depressed prices for their efficiency and diligence in producing abundance;

Promote international exchange of commodities by creating an international food reserve fostering commodity agreements, and vigorously administering the Int'l Trade and Development Act.

Undertake immediately by appropriate action to endeavor to regain full 100% of parity the farmers received under the Democratic administrations. We will achieve this by means of supports on basic commodities at 90% of parity and by means of commodity loans, direct purchases, direct payments to producers, marketing agreements and orders, production adjustments or a combination of these, including legislation, to bring order and stability into the relationship between the producer, processor and the consumer;

Develop practical measures for extending price supports to feed grains and other non-basic storables and to producers of perishable commodities such as meat, poultry, dairy products and the like.

Inaugurate a food stamp or other supplemental food program administered by appropriate state or local agencies to insure that no needy family shall be denied an adequate and wholesome diet because of low income;

A continuing expanded school lunch and special milk program to meet dietary needs of all school children;

Increase the distribution of food to public institutions and organizations and qualified private charitable agencies, and increase the distribution of food and fibre to needy people in other nations through recognized charitable and religious channels;

Devise and employ effective means to reduce the spread between producers' prices and consumers' costs, and improved market facilities and marketing practices;

Expand the program of agricultural research for better distribution; preservation and marketing of farm products to serve both producers and consumers, and promote increased industrial use of farm surpluses;

Provide for an increased reservoir of farm credit at lower rates, designed particularly to accommodate small family-type farmers, and extend crop insurance to maximum coverage and protection;

Return the administration of farm programs to farmer-elected committeemen, eliminate the deplorable political abuses in Federal employment in many agricultural counties as practiced by the Eisenhower Administration, and restore leadership to the administration of soil conservation districts.

Insure reliable and low-cost rural electric and telephone service;

Exercise authority in existing law relating to imports of price-supported agricultural commodities in raw, manufactured or processed form as part of our national policy to minimize damage to our domestic economy;

Encourage bona fide farm cooperatives which help farmers reduce the cost-price squeeze, and protect such cooperatives against punitive taxation;

Expand farm forestry marketing research and price reporting on timber products, and provide adequate credit designed to meet the needs of timber farmers; and

Enact a comprehensive farm program which, under intelligent and sympathetic Democratic administration, will make the rural homes of America better and healthier places in which to live.

Labor

Harmonious labor - management relations are productive of good incomes for wage earners and conducive to rising output from our factories. We believe that, to the widest possible extent consistent with the public interest, management and labor should determine wage rates and conditions of employment through free collective bargaining.

The Taft-Hartley Act passed by the Republican-dominated Eightieth Congress seriously impaired this relationship as established in the Wagner National Labor Relations Act, enacted under the Roosevelt Administration. The act protected, encouraged and guaranteed the rights of workers to organize and join unions of their own choice, and to bargain collectively through these unions without coercion.

The vicious anti-union character of Taft-Hartley was expressly recognized by Candidate Eisenhower during the 1952 election campaign.

At that time, he made solemn promise to eliminate its unjust provisions and re-enact a fair law. President Eisenhower and his Administration have failed utterly, however, to display any Executive initiative or forcefulness to keep this pledge to American workers. He was further responsible for administratively amending Taft-Hartley into a more intensely anti-labor weapon by stacking the National Labor Relations Board with biased pro-management personnel who transformed the act into a management weapon by administrative decision. Among such decisions was the removal of millions of workers from the jurisdiction of the N.L.R.B. which, in many cases, left them without either state or Federal protective legislation.

We unequivocably advocate repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act. The act must be repealed because state "right-to-work" laws have their genesis in its discriminatory anti-labor provisions.

It must be repealed because its restrictive provisions deny the principle that national legislation based on the commerce clause of the Constitution normally override conflicting state laws.

The Taft-Hartley Act has been proven to be inadequate, unworkable and unfair. It interferes in an arbitrary manner with collective bargaining, causing imbalance in the relationship between management and labor.

Upon return of our national Government to the Democratic party, a new legislative approach toward the entire labor-management problem will be adopted, based on past experience and the principles of the Wagner National Labor Relations Act and the Norris-LaGuardia Anti-Injuncton law.

We commend the action of the Democratic Eighty-fourth Congress which raised the minimum wage from 75 cents to $1.00 an hour despite the strenuous objection of President Eisenhower and the Republicans in Congress. However the inadequacies of the minimum wage become apparent as the cost of living increases, and we feel it imperative to raise the minimum wage to at least $1.25 an hour, more closely to approximate present day needs.

We further pledge as a matter of priority to extend full protection of the Fair Labor Standards Act to all workers in industry engaged in, or affecting interstate commerce.

We pledge revision and honest administration of the Walsh-Healy Act to restore its effectiveness and usefulness as an instrument for maintaining fair standards of wages and hours for American workers.

We advocate legislation to provide equal pay for equal work, regardless of sex.

The Democratic party has always supported legislation to benefit the disabled worker. The physically handicapped have proved their value to Government and industry. We pledge our continued support of legislation to improve employment opportunities of physically handicapped persons.

We shall support legislation providing for the protection and improvement of the general welfare of migratory workers.

We pledge our party to support legislation providing for an effective program to promote industry and create jobs in depressed industrial and rural areas so that such areas might be restored to economic stability.

Free Enterprise

"Equal rights for all and special privileges for none," the tested Jeffersonian principle, remains today the only philosophy by which human rights can be preserved by government. It has been a sad fact in the history of the Republican party that under its control our Government has always become an instrument of special privilege; not a Government of the people, by the people, and for the people. We have had, instead, under Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, and now under Eisenhower, Government of the many, by the few, and for the few.

We recognize monopolies and monopolistic practices as the real barriers between the people and their economic and political freedom. Monopolies act to stifle equality of opportunity and prevent the infusion of fresh blood into the life-stream of our economy. The Republican Administration has allowed giant corporate entities to dominate our economy. For example, 40,000 automobile dealers now know they were incapable of coping with these giants. They were, as the Democratic Eighty-fourth Congress found, the subject of abuse and threatened with extinction which resulted in passage of the O'Mahoney-Celler bill giving the automobile dealers of America economic freedom. We enacted this law, and we pledge that it shall be retained upon the statute books as a monument to the Democratic party's concern for small business.

We pledge ourselves to the restoration of truly competitive conditions in American industry. Affirmative action within the framework of American reference will be taken to curb corporate mergers contributing to growth of economic concentration.

In contrast to the maladministration by the Republican party of the Federal program to assist small and independent business, we pledge ourselves--

(1) To the strict and impartial enforcement of the laws originally fostered and strengthened by the Democratic party and designed to prevent monopolies and other concentrations of economic and financial powers; and to enact legislation to close loopholes in the laws prohibiting price discrimination;

(2) To tax relief for all small and independent businesses by fair and equitable adjustments in Federal taxation which will encourage business expansion, and to apply the principle of graduated taxation realistically to such corporate income. There should be an option to spread Federal estate taxes over a period of years when an estate consists principally of the equity capital of a closely held small business;

(3) To adoption of all practical means to make long and short term credit available to small and independent business men at reasonable rates;

(4) To award of a substantially higher proportion of Government contracts to independent small businesses and to the award of a far larger percentage of military procurement, by value, after competitive bids rather than by negotiation behind closed doors. We severely condemn Republican discrimination against small and independent business.

(5) To replacement of the weak and ineffective Republican conduct of the small business administration, and its reconstitution as a vigorous, independent agency which will advocate the cause of small and independent business men, and render genuine assistance in fulfilling their needs and solving their problems. We condemn the Republican Administration for its failure to serve this important segment of our economy.

We pledge ourselves to the fair and impartial administration of justice. The Republican Administration has degraded the great powers of law enforcement. It has not used them in the service of equal justice under the law, but for concealment, coercion, political advantage and special interests.

In the interest of our national security, and of the maintenance of American standards of wages and living and in order that our waterborne overseas commerce shall not be unfairly discriminated against by low-cost foreign competition, we pledge our continued encouragement and support of a strong and adequate American merchant marine.

The public and national defense interests require the development and maintenance, under the competitive free enterprise system, of a strong, efficient and financially sound system of common carrier transportation by water, highway, rail, and air, with each mode through sound and intelligent exercise of regulatory powers, enabled to realize its inherent economic advantages and to reflect its full competitive capabilities. Public interest also requires, under reasonable standards, the admission of new licensees, where public convenience may be served, into the transport fields. We deplore the lack of enforcement of safety regulations for protection of life and property under the present Republican Administration, and pledge strict enforcement of such regulations.

We commend the foresight of the Democratic Eighty-fourth Congress for its enactment of the greatest program for expansion of our highway network in history, and we congratulate it upon its rejection of the unsound, unworkable, inadequate and unfair roads bill proposed by the present Republican Administration. In cooperation with state and local governments, we will continue the programs developed and fostered under prior Democratic Administrations for planning, coordinating, financing and encouraging the expansion of our national road and highway network vital to defense and transportation in the motor age. We support expansion of farm to market roads.

We pledge continued development of harbors and waterways as a vital segment of our transportation system. We denounce as capricious and arbitrary the Eisenhower pocket veto of the 1956 Rivers and Harbors bill, which heartlessly deprived the people of many sections of our nation of vitally needed public works projects.

General Welfare

The Democratic party believes that America can and must adopt measures to assure every citizen an opportunity for a full, healthy and happy life. To this end, we pledge ourselves to the expansion and improvement of the great social welfare programs inaugurated under Democratic administration.

By lowering the retirement age for women and for disabled persons, the Democratic Eighty-fourth Congress pioneered two great advances in Social Security, over the bitter opposition of the Eisenhower Administration. We shall continue our efforts to broaden and strengthen this program by increasing benefits to keep pace with improving standards of living; by raising the wage base upon which benefits depend; and by increasing benefits for each year of covered employment.

We shall continue to work for a stronger unemployment insurance system, with broader coverage and increased benefits consistent with rising earnings. We shall also work for the establishment of a floor to assure minimum level and duration of benefits and fair eligibility rules.

In 1946, a Democratic Congress enacted an insurance program to protect railroad workers against temporary wage losses due to short-term illnesses. Because this program has worked so effectively, we favor extending similar protection to other workers.

We pledge improvements in the public assistance program even beyond those enacted by the Democratic Eighty-fourth

Congress, through greater assistance for the aged, the blind, dependent children, the disabled and other needy persons who are not adequately protected by our contributory insurance programs.

To meet the needs of the 14,000,000 Americans aged 65 or over, we pledge ourselves to seek means of assuring these citizens greater income through expanded opportunities for employment, vocational retraining and adult education; better housing and health services for the aged; rehabilitation of the physically and mentally disabled to restore them to independent, productive lives; and intensified medical and other research aimed both at lengthening life and rendering the longer life more truly livable.

The strength of our nation depends on the health of our people. The shortage of trained medical and health personnel and facilities has impaired American health standards and has increased the cost of hospital care beyond the financial capacities of most American families.

We pledge ourselves to initiate programs of Federal financial aid, without Federal controls, for medical education. We pledge continuing and increased support for hospital construction programs, as well as increased Federal aid to public health services, particularly in rural areas.

Mindful of the dramatic progress made by medical research in recent years, we shall continue to support vigorously all efforts, both public and private, to wage relentless war on diseases which afflict the bodies and minds of men. We commend the Democratic party for its leadership in obtaining greater Congressional authorizations in this field.

We pledge our party to immediate revival of the basic housing program enacted by the Democratic Congress in 1949, to expansion of this program as our population and resources grow, and to additional legislation to provide housing for middle-income families and aged persons. Aware of the financial burdens which press upon most American communities and prevent them from taking full advantage of Federal urban redevelopment and renewal programs, we favor increasing and Federal share of the cost of these programs.

We reaffirm the goal expressed by a Democratic Congress in 1949 that every American family is entitled to a "decent home and a suitable living environment." The Republican Administration has sabotaged that goal by reducing the public housing program to a fraction of the nation's need.

We pledge that the housing-insurance and mortgage-guarantee programs will be redirected in the interest of the home owner, and that the availability of low-interest housing credit will be kept consistent with the expanding housing needs of the nation.

We favor providing aid to urban and suburban communities in better planning their future development and redevelopment.

Every American child, irrespective of race or national origin, economic status or place of residence, has full right under the law and the Constitution, without discrimination, to every educational opportunity to develop his potentialities.

We are now faced with shortages of educational facilities that threaten national security, economic prosperity and human well-being. The resources of our states and localities are already strained to the limit. Federal aid and action should be provided within the traditional framework of state and local control.

We pledge the Democratic party to the following:

(1) Legislation providing Federal financing to assist states and local communities to build schools; and to provide essential health and safety services for all school children;

(2) Better educational, health and welfare opportunities for children of migratory workers;

(3) Assistance to programs for training teachers of exceptional children;

(4) Programs providing for the training of teachers to meet the critical shortage in technical and scientific fields.

(5) Expansion of the program of student, teacher and cultural exchange with other nations.

We commend the Eighty-fourth Congress for voting the maximum authorized funds for vocational education under the Smith-Hughes Act for the first time in the history of the act. We pledge continuing and increased support of vocational training for youth and adults, including aid to the states and localities for area technical-vocational schools.

To keep pace with the growing need for child care and welfare we pledge an expanded program of grants to the states. We pledge continued support of adequate day care centers to care for the children of the millions of American mothers who work to help support their families.

There are today several million physically handicapped citizens, many of whom could become self-supporting if given the opportunity and training for rehabilitation. We pledge support to a vastly expanded rehabilitation program for these physically handicapped, including increased aid to the states, in contrast to the grossly inadequate action of the Republican Administration.

Natural Resources

Our national economic strength and welfare depend primarily upon our land, water, mineral and energy resources, with which this nation has been abundantly blessed.

We pledge unstinting support to a full and integrated program of development, protection, management and conservation of all of our natural resources for all of the people.

The framework of time-tested conservation policy is fixed in laws under which America has developed its natural resources for the general welfare.

The Democratic Eighty-fourth Congress has remained steadfast to this traditional policy. It has built upon the tremendous conservation achievements of the Roosevelt and Truman Administrations by undertaking the greatest program of natural resources development ever assumed by any Congress in our nation's history.

This constructive Democratic record, embracing all resources of land, water, energy and minerals, is in sharp contrast to the faithless performance of the Eisenhower Administration which has despoiled future generations of their heritage by utter failure to safeguard natural resources. Our people will long remember this betrayal of their heritage as symbolized by the infamous Dixon-Yates contract; the Al Sarena timber "mining" scheme; and the low-level Hells Canyon dam. And for its unreasonable resistance to authorizing the Niagara project which would benefit so many millions in the State of New York and adjacent areas.

We condemn, and will continue to decry, this pillaging of our dwindling natural resource wealth through political manipulation and administrative subversion by the Eisenhower Administration. We pledge ourselves to halt this betrayal of the people's trust. We shall devise for the American people a dynamic, far-reaching and progressive conservation program.

The Democratic party proposes, and will strive to secure, this comprehensive resources program for America's future:

Our land will be preserved and improved for the present and future needs of our people, and not wastefully exploited to benefit special interest groups.

In contrast to the wasteful neglect of the present Administration, soil conservation practices will be stimulated and intensified to reduce land deterioration under the vital Soil Conservation Service assistance program conceived and fostered by the Democratic party.

We pledge adoption of an immediate and broad policy to mobilize the efforts of private and public agencies for protection and improvement of inadequate facilities in existing recreational areas and to provide new ones. Slum conditions fostered by Republican neglect are intolerable to the tens of millions of Americans using our national parks and forests. Restoring Democratic administration will end these shocking examples of maladministration.

Fish and game habitats will be guarded against encroachment for commercial purposes. All river basin development plans will take into full consideration their effect upon fish wildlife, national park and wilderness areas. The fish and wildlife service must and will be returned to the career status from which it was removed by the political patronage policy of the present Administration.

Recreational facilities for the millions of field and stream sportsmen of America will be conserved and expanded.

Timber on Federal commercial forest lands will be harvested and managed on a sustained yield basis.

We propose to increase forest access roads in order to improve cutting practices on both public and private lands.

Private owners of farm, forest and range lands need and must have financial and technical assistance so that all lands will be utilized to contribute more fully to the national welfare by production of food and fiber and protection of our watersheds. Any effort to transform grazing permits from a revocable license to a vested right will be rejected.

We will vigorously advocate Federally financed forestation, upstream erosion control and flood control programs on our public range, timber lands and small drainage basins to protect our watersheds and double the rate of forage and commercial timber growth. We will promote cooperative programs with Government assistance to reduce timber losses from fire, insects and disease.

Prospecting and mining on undedicated Federal lands will be encouraged, but surface areas not needed in mining will be safeguarded by appropriate legislation.

We pledge the resumption of rapid and orderly multiple-purpose river basin development throughout the nation. This program will bring into reality the full potential benefits of flood control, irrigation and our domestic and municipal water supply from surface and underground waters. It will also materially aid low-cost power, navigation, recreation, fish and wildlife propagation and mineral development. Enhanced regional economies will strengthen that of the nation as a whole.

We will take appropriate and vigorous steps to prevent comprehensive drainage basin development plans from being fragmented by single-purpose projects. The conservation of water is essential to the life of the nation. The Democratic party pledges itself to conservation of water in the public interest.

The Democratic Eighty-fourth Congress has taken a long step toward reducing the pollution of our rivers and streams. We pledge continuation and expansion of this program, vital to every citizen.

The program of obtaining a large new source of fresh-water supply from salt water was begun by the Democratic party, but has been allowed to lapse by the Eisenhower Republican Administration. It will be resumed and accelerated.

We pledge ourselves to carry forward under national policy aggressive programs to provide abundant supplies of low-cost energy, including continued research for the development of synthetic liquid fuel from coal, shale and agricultural products. These we must have to feed our insatiable industrial economy.to enable our workers to develop their skills and increase their productivity, to provide more jobs at higher wages, to meet the ever-mounting demands for domestic and farm uses including the production of lower cost farm fertilizers and lower cost power to consumers.

We will carry forward increased and full production of hydroelectric power on our rivers and of steam generation for the Tennessee Valley Authority to meet its peacetime and defense requirements. Such self-liquidating projects must go forward in a rapid and orderly manner, with appropriate financing plans. Integrated regional transmission systems will enhance exchange of power and encourage diversified industrial development.

We shall once more rigorously enforce the anti-monopoly and public body preference clauses, including the Holding Company Act, administratively circumvented by the Eisenhower Republican Administration. We shall preserve and strengthen the public power competitive yardstick in power developments under T.V.A., R.E.A., Bureau of Reclamation, Bonneville, Southeast and Southwest Power Administrations and other future projects, including atomic power plants, under a policy of the widest possible use of electric energy at the lowest possible cost.

The nation's minerals and fuels are essential to the safety, security and development of our country. We pledge the adoption of policies which will further encourage the exploration and development of additional reserves of our mineral resources.

We will undertake comprehensive scientific and economic research programs for the conservation and better utilization of fishery products, uses, and new markets. We favor and will encourage reciprocal world trade in fish products.

We pledge ourselves to a public works and water policy providing adequate protection for domestic fishery resources.

We favor treaties with other nations for conservation and better utilization of international fisheries.

To the end that the scenic beauty of our land may be preserved and maintained for this and future generations to enjoy, we pledge accelerated support of educational programs to stimulate individual responsibility and pride in clean, attractive surroundings -- from big cities to rural areas.

Atomic Energy

The atomic era came into being and was developed under Democratic Administrations.

The genius of American scientists, engineers and workmen, supported by the vision and courage of Franklin D. Roosevelt, made possible the splitting of the atom and the development of the first atomic bomb in time to end World War II.

With the ending of the war, the supremacy of America in atomic weapons was maintained under the leadership of President Truman, and the United States pushed ahead vigorously toward utilizing this new form of energy in peaceful pursuits, particularly in the fields of medicine, agriculture and industry. By the end of the Truman Administration, the pre-eminence of the United States in the nuclear field was clearly established, and we were on the threshold of large-scale development of industrial nuclear energy at home and as an instrument of world peace.

The Eisenhower Administration promptly reversed the field and plunged the previously independent and nonpartisan Atomic Energy Commission into partisan politics. For example, President Eisenhower ordered the commission to sign the scandalous Dixon-Yates contract. He was later forced to repudiate the same contract, after the exposure of the illegal activities of one of his own consultants with a secret office in the Bureau of the Budget.

The Republican Administration has followed the same pattern in the field of atomic energy that it has pursued in its treatment of other natural resources -- lofty words, little action, but steady service to selfish interests. While the A.E.C. and the special private interests consult and confer, the United States is lagging instead of leading in the world race for nuclear power, international prestige and world markets.

The Democrats in Congress believed that the national interest thus became imperiled, and they moved to meet the challenge both at home and abroad. They established a non-partisan panel of eminent Americans to study the impact of the peaceful atom.

Following the comprehensive report of this panel, the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy held extensive hearings on bills to accelerate the atomic reactor demonstration program. Though the bills were reported unanimously from committee, the Republican members of Congress, under heavy pressure from the White House, insured the final defeat of this legislation in the Congress.

But the fight to bring nuclear power to the people has only begun. As the United States was first in the development of the atom as a weapon, so the United States must lead in bringing the blessings of the peaceful uses of nuclear energy to mankind.

Hence, the Democratic party pledges itself:

(1) To restore nonpartisan administration of the vital atomic energy program and to expand and accelerate nuclear development by vigorous action.

(2) To accelerate the domestic civilian atomic power program by the construction of a variety of demonstration prototype reactors.

(3) To give reality -- life and meaning -- to the atoms for peace program. We will substitute deeds for words.

(4) To increase the production of fissionable material for use in a stockpile for peacetime commitments at home and abroad, and for an everpresent reserve for weapons to guarantee freedom in the world.

(5) To conduct a comprehensive survey of radiation hazards from bomb tests and reactor operations to determine what additional measures are required to protect existing and future generations from these invisible dangers.

(6) To make the maximum contribution to the defense of our nation and the free world through the development of a balanced and flexible stockpile of nuclear weapons, containing a sufficient number and variety to support our armed services in any contingency.

Government Operations

The Democratic party pledges that it will return the administration of our national Government to a sound, efficient and honest basis.

The Eisenhower Administration has failed either to understand or trust the Federal employee. Its record in personnel management constitutes a grave indictment of policies reflecting prejudices and excessive partisanship to the detriment of employee morale.

Intelligent and sympathetic programs must be immediately undertaken to insure the re-establishment of high morale and efficiency which were characteristic of the Federal worker during twenty years of Democratic adminstration.

To accomplish these objectives, we propose:

(1) Protection and extension of the merit system through the enactment of laws to specify the rights and responsibilities of workers.

(2) A more independent civil service commission in order that it may provide the intelligent leadership essential in perfecting a proper civil service system.

(3) Promotion with the Federal service under law assuring advancement on merit and proven ability.

(46) Salary increases of a nature that will insure a truly competitive scale at all levels of employment.

(5) Recognition by law of the right of employee organizations to represent their members and to participate in the formulation and improvement of personnel policies and practices.

(6) A fair and non-political loyalty program, by law, which will protect the nation against subversion and the employee against unjust and un-American treatment.

The bungling policies of the Republican Administration have crippled and impaired the morale, efficiency and reputation of the United States Postal Service. Mail carriers and clerks and other postal employees are compelled to work under intolerable conditions; communications by mail and service by parcel post have been delayed and retarded with resulting hardships, business losses and inconveniences. Their false concept of economy has impaired seriously the efficiency of the best communication system in the world.

We pledge ourselves to programs which will:

(1) Restore the principle that the Postal Service is a public service to be operated in the interest of improved business economy and better communcation as well as an aid to the dissemination of information and intelligence.

(2) To restore postal employee morale through the strengthening of the merit system -- promotions by law rather than caprice or partisan politics. Payment of realistic salaries -- reflecting the benefits of an expanded economy.

(3) Establish a program of research and development on a scale adequate to insure the most modern and efficient handling of the mails.

(4) Undertake modernization and construction of desperately needed postal facilities designed to insure the finest postal system in the world.

Maladministration and selfish manipulation have characterized Federal administration during the Eisenhower years. Taxpayers, paying billions of dollars each year to their Government, demand and must have the highest standards of honesty, integrity, and efficiency as a minimum requirement of Federal Executive conduct.

We pledge a strong merit system as a substitute for cynical policies of spoils and special favor which are now the rule of the day. We seek the constant improvement of the Federal Government apparatus to accomplish these ends.

Under certain conditions, we recognize the need for the employment of personnel without compensation in the Executive Branch of the Government. But the privileges extended these dollar-a-year men have resulted in grave abuses of power. Some of these representatives of large corporations have assumed a dual loyalty to the Government and to the corporations who pay them. These abuses under the Republican Administration have been scandalous. The Democratic party proposes that any necessary use of non-compensated employees shall be made only after the most careful scrutiny and under the most rigidly prescribed safeguards to prevent any conflict of interests.

During recent years there has developed a practice on the part of Federal agencies to delay and withhold information which is needed by Congress and the general public to make important decisions affecting their lives and destiny. We believe that this trend toward secrecy in Government should be reversed and that the Federal Government should return to its basic tradition of exchanging and promoting the freest flow of information possible in those unclassified areas where secrets involving weapons development and bona fide national security are not involved. We condemn the Eisenhower Administration for the excesses practiced in this vital area, and pledge the Democratic party to reverse this tendency, substituting a rule of law for that of broad claims of executive privilege.

We re-aver our position of 1952 "to press strongly for worldwide freedom in the gathering and dissemination of news." We shall press for free access to information throughout the world for our journalists and scholars.

The shocking disclosures in the last Congress of attempts by selfish interests to improperly influence members of Congress have resulted in a Congressional investigation now under way. The Democratic party pledges itself to provide effective regulation and full disclosure of campaign expenditures and contributions in elections to Federal offices.

We of the Democratic party recommend and indorse for submission to the Congress a constitutional amendment providing equal rights for women.

We are spending approximately 4-3/4 billion dollars per year on veterans' benefits. There are more than 22,000,000 veterans in civil life today and approximately 4,000,000 veterans or dependents of deceased veterans drawing direct cash benefits from the Veterans Administration. It is clear that a matter of such magnitude demands more prominence in the affairs of government. We pledge that we will elevate the Veterans Administration to a place of dignity commensurate with its importance in national affairs.

We charge the present Administration with open hostility toward the veterans' hospital program as disclosed by their efforts to restrict severely that program in the fiscal year 1954. We further charge the Administration with incompetence and gross neglect in the administration of veterans' benefits in the following particulars: (1) The refusal to allow service connection for disabilities incurred in or aggravated by military service and the unwarranted reduction of disability evaluations in cases where service connection has been allowed. (2) The failure to properly protect veterans purchasing homes under the V.A. home loan program both by inadequate supervision of the program and in some instances by active cooperation with unscrupulous builders, lenders and real estate brokers.

In recognition of the valiant efforts of those who served their nation in its gravest hours, we pledge:

1. Continuance of the Veterans Administration as an independent Federal agency handling veterans programs;

2. Continued recognition of war veterans, with adequate compensation for the service-connected disabled and for the survivors of those who have passed away in service or from service-incurred disabilities with pensions for disabled and distressed veterans and for the dependents of those who have passed on, who are in need or unable to provide for themselves,

3. Maintenance of the Veterans Administration hospital system, with no impairment in the high quality of medical and hospital service;

4. Priority of hospitalization for the service-connected disabled, and the privilege of hospital care when beds are available for the non-service-connected illness of veterans who are sick, without funds or unable to procure private hospitalization;

5. Fair administration of veterans preference laws, and employment opportunities for handicapped and disabled veterans;

6. Full hearings for war veterans filing valid applications with the review, corrective and settlement boards of the Federal Government;

To support legislation to obtain an extension of the current law to enable veterans to obtain homes and farms through the continuance of the G.I. loan program.

We condemn the Republican Administration for its utter disregard for the rights to statehood of both Alaska and Hawaii. These territories have contributed greatly to our national economic and cultural life and are vital to our defense. They are part of America and should be recognized as such.

We of the Democratic party therefore pledge immediate statehood for these two territories.

We commend these territories for the action their people have taken in the adoption of Constitutions which will become effective forthwith when they are admitted to the Union.

The Democratic party views with satisfaction the progress and growth achieved by Puerto Rico since its political organization as a Commonwealth under Democratic party leadership.

We pledge once again our continued support to the Commonwealth and its development and growth along lines of increasing responsibility and authority, keeping as functions of the Federal Government only such as are essential to the existence of the compact of association adopted by the Congress of the United States and the people of Puerto Rico.

The progress of Puerto Rico under commonwealth status has been notable proof of the great benefits which flow from self-government and the good-neighbor policy which, under Democratic leadership, this country has always followed.

We favor increased self-government for the Virgin Islands to provide for an elected Governor and a resident Commissioner in the Congress of the United States. We denounce the scandalous administration of the first Eisenhower-appointed Governor of the Virgin Islands.

We favor increased self-government for Guam and other outlying territories and the Trust Territory of the Pacific.

We favor immediate home rule and ultimate national representation for the District of Columbia.

Recognizing that all American Indians are citizens of the United States and of the state, that the Federal Government has a unique legal and moral responsibility for Indians which is imposed by the Constitution and spelled out in treaties, statutes and court decisions, we pledge:

Prompt adoption of a Federal program to assist Indian tribes in the full development of their human and natural resources, to advance the health, education and economic well-being of Indian citizens, all preserving their traditions without impairing their cultural heritage.

No alteration of any treaty or other Federal-Indian contractual relationships without free consent of Indian tribes concerned;

Reversal of the present policies which are tending toward erosion of Indian rights, reduction of their economic base through alienation of their lands, and repudiation of Federal responsibility;

Prompt and expeditious settlement of Indian claims against the United States, with full recognition of the rights of both parties; and Elimination of all impediments to full citizenship for American Indians.

The Democratic party has upheld its belief in the Constitution as a charter of individual rights, an effective instrument for human progress. Democratic Administrations have placed upon the statute books during the last two years a multitude of measures which testify to our belief in the Jeffersonian principle of local control even in general legislation involving nation-wide programs.

Selective service, social security, agricultural adjustment, low-rent housing, hospital, and many other legislative programs have placed major responsibilities in states and local counties and provide fine examples of how benefits can be extended through Federal-state cooperation.

While we recognize the existence of honest differences of opinion as to the true location of the constitutional line of demarcation between the Federal Government and the states, the Democratic party expressly recognizes the vital importance of the respective states in our Federal Union. The party of Jefferson and Jackson pledges itself to continued support of those sound principles of local government which will best serve the welfare of our people and the safety of our democratic rights.

In order that the will of the American people may be expressed upon all legislative proposals, we urge that action be taken at the beginning of the Eighty-fifth Congress to improve Congressional procedures so that majority rule prevails and decisions can be made after reasonable debate without being blocked by a minority in either house.

Civil Rights

The Democratic party is committed to support and advance the individual rights and liberties of all Americans. Our country is founded on the proposition that all men are created equal. This means that all citizens are equal before the law and should enjoy all political rights. They should have equal opportunities for education, for economic advancement, and for decent living conditions.

We will continue our efforts to eradicate discrimination based on race, religion or national origin. We know this task requires action, not just in one section of the nation, but in all sections. It requires the cooperative efforts of individual citizens, and action by state and local governments. It also requires Federal action. The Federal Government must live up to the ideals of the Declaration of Independence and must exercise the powers vested in it by the Constitution.

We are proud of the record of the Democratic party in securing equality of treatment and opportunity in the nation's armed forces, the Civil Service, and in all areas under Federal jurisdiction. The Democratic party pledges itself to continue its efforts to eliminate illegal discriminations of all kinds, in relation to (1) full rights to vote, (2) full rights to engage in gainful occupations, (3) full rights to enjoy security of the person, and(4) full rights to education in all publicly supported institutions.

Recent decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States relating to segregation in publicly supported schools and elsewhere have brought consequences of vast importance to our nation as a whole and especially to communities directly affected. We reject all proposals for the use of force to interfere with the orderly determination of these matters by the courts.

The Democratic party emphatically reaffirms its support of the historic principles that ours is a Government of laws and not of men. It recognizes the Supreme Court of the United States as one of the three constitutional and coordinate branches of the Federal Government, superior to and separate from any political party, the decisions of which are part of the law of the land. We condemn the efforts of the Republican party to make it appear that this tribunal is a part of the Republican party.

We condemn the Republican Administration's violation of the rights of Government employees by a heartless and unjustified confusing of "security" and "loyalty" for the sole purpose of political gain and regardless of consequences to individual victims and to the good name of the United States. We condemn the Republican Administration's misrepresentation of facts and violation of individual rights in a wicked and unprincipled attempt to degrade and destroy the Democratic party, and to make political capital for the Republican party.

Under the guidance, protection and help of Almighty God, it is our prayerful hope we shall be permitted to aid in bringing to the people of this nation a better and more rewarding life and to the peoples of the entire world new hope and permanent honorable peace.

1956 REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

The Republican National Convention, meeting in San Francisco, Aug. 22 renominated President Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon to lead the GOP in 1956. Both candidates were chosen unanimously by the 1,323 delegates on the first ballot.

Harold E. Stassen's campaign to replace Nixon collapsed earlier in the day when Stassen told President Eisenhower he was convinced the majority of delegates wanted Nixon on the ticket. Stassen, who had planned to place in nomination the name of Massachusetts Gov. Christian A. Herter, was granted permission to second the Nixon nomination. An attempt by Nebraska delegate Terry Carpenter to nominate "Joe Smith" for Vice President as a "symbol of an open convention" was gaveled down.

Other highlights of the Aug. 20-23 convention:

KEYNOTE ADDRESS

Washington Gov. Arthur B. Langlie, in his Aug. 20 keynote address, called the Democratic party one of "sectionalism and factionalism" which "periodically gets together just long enough to try to get themselves elected." The Republicans, he said, asked "to be judged for the future by our record in the past three and a half years."

Platform

The convention Aug. 21 adopted without dissent a platform pledging a "continuation of peace, prosperity and progress." (Platform text begins on p. 779)

Threatened opposition to the civil rights plank evaporated after the Resolutions Committee modified an earlier and "stronger" version and proposed a plank acceptable to both northern and southern delegates. The civil rights section, as adopted, said that the GOP "accepts" the Supreme Court decision outlawing racial segregation in public schools. "We concur," the plank said, in the Court's decision that desegregation "should be accomplished with 'all deliberate speed' locally through federal district courts." Progress in carrying out the decision "must be encouraged and the work of the courts supported in every legal manner by all branches of the federal government."

Other major planks of the platform:

• FOREIGN POLICY -- "The advance of Communism has been checked and, at key points, thrown back." Pledged to "vigorously" support the United Nations and the collective security system, to assist underdeveloped areas of the free world, to support a policy of "impartial friendship" for the Arab states and Israel, to support "the independence of Israel against armed aggression," to "seek" reunification of Germany and the "liberation" of the satellite states, to oppose the seating of Communist China in the United Nations. Pledged to "see to it that no treaty or agreement with other countries attempts to deprive" U.S. citizens of constitutional rights.

• DOMESTIC POLICY -- "In four years we have achieved the highest economic level with the most widely shared benefits that the world has ever seen." The GOP has "fostered this prosperity." Pledged "expansion" of prosperity, to fight inflation, further reductions in government spending, continued balancing of the budget, reduction of the national debt.

• NATIONAL DEFENSE -- The U.S. has "the strongest (sea and air) striking force in the world" and "a magnificent supporting land force." Pledged to "maintain and improve the effective strength and state of readiness" of the armed forces and to "strive for the acceptance of realistic proposals for disarmament and the humanitarian control of weapons of mass destruction."

• TAXES -- GOP financial management had made possible "the largest one-year (tax) reduction in history." Pledged to "work toward" the "objectives" of "further reduction in taxes with particular consideration for low and middle income families and...small business," when "consistent with a balanced budget."

• AGRICULTURE -- Objective was "markets which return full parity" to farmers "when they sell their products." Pledged to provide flexible farm price supports "as in the Agricultural Act of 1954," to "develop a more accurate measurement of farm parity," to "work for improved farm prices and income."

• LABOR -- Under the GOP "all workers have gained and unions have grown in strength and responsibility and have increased their membership by two millions." Pledged to "revise and improve" the Taft-Hartley Act along lines recommended by the President. Pledged to "protect by law" assets of employee welfare and benefit plans.

• TRADE -- Barriers to international trade should be "reduced on a gradual, selective, reciprocal basis." Pledged "faithful and expeditious administration of" the protective escape clause and peril point provisions.

• WELFARE -- Pledged to "renew efforts" to enact a school construction program. Urged legislation to prov de federal health reinsurance. Pledged "extension nd perfection" of social security system.

• NATURAL RESOURCES -- Commended President Eisenhower for his "partnership" resource development policies and pledged to press for "cooperative solution" of power and reclamation problems with federal, state and local agencies.

• ATOMIC ENERGY -- Commended "widespread, positive achievements" of President Eisenhower's atoms for peace program. Said government, by "relaxing its monopoly...can stimulate private enterprise to go ahead" in the atomic energy field.

Acceptance Speeches

President Eisenhower Aug. 23 accepted a second-term nomination "humbly but confidently" and pledged his "best efforts to bring victory to our cause." He said: "The Republican party and platform are right... because they are 'most closely in league with the future'." He called the GOP the "party of long-range principle, not short-term expediency" and the "party which concentrates on the facts and issues of today and tomorrow, not the facts and issues of yesterday."

Vice President Nixon, in accepting renomination, lauded President Eisenhower and called for "a victory which will assure what any great President needs and deserves -- a House and Senate with the majority of his own party in control...." Said Nixon: "We point with pride to how much we have done in the past only as an indication of how much more we can do in the future."

The Complete Text . . .

REPUBLICANS ADOPT PLATFORM BY VOICE VOTE

Following is the text of the Republican platform adopted at the party's national convention:

Declaration of Faith

America's trust is in the merciful providence of God, in whose image every man is created...the source of every man's dignity and freedom.

In this trust our Republic was founded. We give devoted homage to the Founding Fathers. They not only proclaimed that the freedom and rights of men came from the Creator and not from the state, but they provided safeguards to those freedoms.

Our Government was created by the people for all the people and it must serve no less a purpose.

The Republican party was formed 100 years ago to preserve the nation's devotion to these ideals.

On its centennial, the Republican party again calls to the minds of all Americans the great truth first spoken by Abraham Lincoln:

"The legitimate object of Government is to do for a community of people whatever they need to have done but cannot do at all, or cannot so well do, for themselves in their separate and individual capacities. But in all that people can individually do as well for themselves, Government ought not to interfere."

Our great President Dwight D. Eisenhower, has counseled us further:

"In all those things which deal with people, be liberal, be human. In all those things which deal with people's money, or their economy, or their form of Government, be conservative."

While jealously guarding the free institutions and preserving the principles upon which our Republic was founded and has flourished, the purpose of the Republican party is to establish and maintain a peaceful world and build at home a dynamic prosperity in which every citizen fairly shares.

We shall ever build anew, that our children and their children, without distinction because of race, creed or color, may know the blessings of our free land.

We believe that basic to governmental integrity are unimpeachable ethical standards and irreproachable personal conduct by all people in Government. We shall continue our insistence on honesty as an indispensable requirement of public service. We shall continue to root out corruption whenever and wherever it appears.

We are proud of and shall continue our far-reaching and sound advances in matters of basic human needs -- expansion of Social Security -- broadened coverage in unemployment insurance -- improved housing -- and better health protection for all our people. We are determined that our Government remain warmly responsive to the urgent social and economic problems of our people.

We hold that the major world issue today is whether government shall be the servant or the master of men.

We hold that the Bill of Rights is the sacred foundation of personal liberty. That men are created equal needs no affirmation, but they must have equality of opportunity and protection of their civil rights under the law.

We hold that the strict division of powers and the primary responsibility of state and local governments must be maintained, and that the centralization of powers in the National Government leads to expansion of the mastery of our lives.

We hold that the protection of the freedom of men requires that budgets be balanced, waste in government eliminated and taxes reduced.

In these and all other areas of proper Government concern, we pledge our best thought and whole energy to a continuation of our prized peace, prosperity and progress.

For our guidance in fulfilling this responsibility, President Eisenhower has given us a statement of principles that is neither partisan nor prejudiced, but warmly American:

The individual is of supreme importance.

The spirit of our people is the strength of our nation.

America does not prosper unless all Americans prosper.

Government must have a heart as well as a head.

Courage in principle, cooperation in practice make freedom positive.

To stay free, we must stay strong.

Under God, we espouse the cause of freedom and justice and peace for all peoples.

To these beliefs we commit ourselves as we present this record and declare our goals for the future.

Nearly four years ago when the people of this nation entrusted their Government to President Eisenhower and the Republican party, we were locked in a costly and stalemated war. Now we have an honorable peace, which has stopped the bitter toll in casualties and resources, ended depressing war-time restraints, curbed the runaway inflation, and unleashed the boundless energy of our people to forge forward on the road to progress.

In four years we have achieved the highest economic level with the most widely shared benefits that the world has ever seen. We of the Republican party have fostered this prosperity and are dedicated to its expansion and to the preservation of the climate in which it has thrived.

We are proud of our part in bringing into a position of unique authority in the world one who symbolizes, as can no other man, the hopes of all peoples for peace, liberty and justice. One leader in the world today towers above all others and inspires the trust, admiration, confidence and goodwill of all the peoples of every nation -- Dwight D. Eisenhower. Under his leadership, the Republican Administration has carried out foreign policies which have enabled our people to enjoy in peace the blessings of liberty. We shall continue to work unceasingly for a just and enduring peace in a world freed of tyranny.

Every honorable means at our command has been exercised to alleviate the grievances and causes of armed conflict among nations. The advance of communism and its enslavement of people has been checked, and, at key points, thrown back. Austria, Iran and Guatemala have been liberated. Forces of freedom are at work in the nations still enslaved by Communist imperialism.

We firmly believe in the right of peoples everywhere to determine their form of government, their leaders, their destiny, in peace. Where needed, in order to promote peace and freedom throughout the world, we shall within the prudent limits of our resources, assist friendly countries in their determined efforts to strengthen their economies.

We hold high hopes for useful service to mankind in the power of the atom. We shall generously assist the International Atomic Energy Agency, now evolving from President Eisenhower's "atoms for peace" proposal, in an effort to find ways to dedicate man's genius not to his death, but to his life.

We maintain that no treaty or international agreement can deprive any of our citizens of Constitutional rights. We shall see to it that no treaty or agreement with other countries attempts to deprive our citizens of the rights guaranteed them by the Federal Constitution.

President Eisenhower has given the world bold proposals for mutual arms reduction and protection against aggression through flying sentinels in an "open sky."

We support this and his further offer of United States participation in an International Fund for Economic Development financed from the savings brought by true disarmament. We approve his determined resistance to disarmament without effective inspection.

We work and pray for the day when the domination of any people from any source will have ended, and when there will be liberation and true freedom for the hundreds of millions of individuals now held in subjugation. We shall continue to dedicate our best efforts to this lofty purpose.

We shall continue vigorously to support the United Nations.

We shall continue to oppose the seating of Communist China in the United Nations.

We shall maintain our powerful military strength as a deterrent to aggression and as a guardian of the peace. We shall maintain it ready, balanced and technologically advanced for these objectives only.

Good times in America have reached a breadth and depth never before known by any nation. Moreover, it is a prosperity of a nation at peace, not at war. We shall continue to encourage the good business and sound employee relationships which have made possible for the first time in our history a productive capacity of more than $400,000,000,000 a year. More than 66,000,000 people have full-time jobs, with real wages and personal income at record highs.

The farmers of America are at last able to look to the future with a confidence based on expanding peacetime markets instead of on politically contrived formulas foredoomed to fail except in war-time economy. The objective is to insure that agriculture shares fairly and fully in our record prosperity without needless Federal meddlings and domination.

Restoration of integrity in Government has been an essential element of the achievement of our unparalleled good times. We will faithfully preserve the sound financial management which already has reduced annual spending $14,000,000,000 below the budgets planned by our Democratic predecessors and made possible in 1954, a $7,400,000,000 tax cut , the largest one-year reduction in history.

We will ever fight the demoralizing influence of inflation as a national way of life. We are proud to have fulfilled our 1952 pledge to halt the skyrocketing cost of living that in the previous 13 years had cut the value of the dollar by half, and robbed millions of the full value of their wages, savings, insurance, pensions and Social Security.

We have balanced the budget. We believe and will continue to prove that thrift, prudence and a sensible respect for living within income applies as surely to the management of our Government's budget as it does to the family budget.

Embracing these guides to positive, constructive action, and in their rich spirit, we ask the support of the American people, and their vote of confidence in the nation's devoted and dedicated leader -- Dwight D. Eisenhower -- and urge that they elect a Republican Congress to work with him.

In the interest of complete public understanding, elaboration of Republican aspirations and achievements is desirable in the areas of broadest public concern.

Taxation, Fiscal Policy

The Republican party takes pride in calling attention to the outstanding fiscal achievements of the Eisenhower Administration, several of which are mentioned in the foreword to these resolutions.

In order to progress further in correcting the unfortunate results of unwise financial management during 20 years of Democrat Administrations, we pledge to pursue the following objectives:

Further reductions in Government spending as recommended in the Hoover Commission Report, without weakening the support of a superior defense program or depreciating the quality of essential service of Government to our people.

Continued balancing of the budget to assure the financial strength of the country which is so vital to the struggle of the free world in its battle against communism; and to maintain the purchasing power of a sound dollar, and the value of savings, pensions and insurance.

Gradual reduction of the national debt.

Then, in so far as consistent with a balanced budget, we pledge to work toward these additional objectives:

Further reductions in taxes with particular consideration for low and middle income families.

Initiation of a sound policy of tax reductions which will encourage small independent businesses to modernize and progress.

Continual study of additional ways to correct inequities in the effect of various taxes.

Consistent with the Republican administration's accomplishment in stemming the inflation -- which under five Democrat administrations had cut the value of the dollar in half, and so had robbed the wage earner and millions of thrifty citizens who had savings, pensions and insurance -- we endorse the present policy of freedom for the federal reserve system to combat inflation and deflation by wise fiscal policy.

The Republican party believes that sound money, which retains its buying power, is an essential foundation for new jobs, a higher standard of living, protection of savings, a secure national defense, and the general economic growth of the country.

The Republican party has a primary concern, the continued advancement of the well-being of the individual. This can be attained only in an economy that, as today, is sound, free and creative, ever building new wealth and new jobs for all the people.

We believe in good business for all business -- small, medium and large. We believe that competition in a free economy opens unrivaled opportunity and brings the greatest good to the greatest number.

The sound economic policies of the Eisenhower Administration have created an atmosphere of confidence in which good business flourishes and can plan for growth to create new job opportunities for our expanding population.

We have eliminated a host of needless controls.

To meet the immense demands of our expanding economy, we have initiated the largest highway, air and maritime programs in history, each soundly financed.

We shall continue to advocate the maintenance and expansion of a strong, efficient, privately owned and operated and soundly financed system of transportation that will serve all of the needs of our nation under Federal regulatory policies that will enable each carrier to realize its inherent economic advantages and its full competitive capabilities.

We recognize the United States' world leadership in aviation, and we shall continue to encourage its technical development and vigorous expansion. Our goal is to support and sponsor air services and to make available to our citizens the safest and most comprehensive air transportation. We favor adequate funds and expeditious action in improving air safety, and highest efficiency in the control of air traffic.

We stand for forward-looking programs, created to replace our warbuilt merchant fleet with the most advanced types in design, with increased speed. Adaptation of new propulsion power units, including nuclear, must be sponsored and achieved.

We should proceed with the prompt construction of the atomic-powered peace ship in order that we may demonstrate to the world, in this as in other fields, the peaceful uses of the atom.

Our steadily rising prosperity is constantly reflecting the confidence of our citizens in the policies of our Republican Administration.

We pledge the continuation and improvement of our drive to aid small business. Every constructive potential avenue of improvement -- both legislative and executive -- has been explored in our search for ways in which to widen opportunities for this important segment of America's economy.

Beginning with our creation of the very successful Small Business Administration, and continuing through the recently completed studies and recommendations of the Cabinet Committee on Small Business, which we strongly endorse, we have focused our attention on positive measures to help small businesses get started and grow.

Small business can look forward to expanded participation in Federal procurement -- valuable financing and technical aids -- a continuously vigorous enforcement of antitrust laws -- important cuts in the burdens of paper work, and certain tax reductions as budgetary requirements permit.

Small business now is receiving approximately one-third dollarwise, of all defense contracts. We recommended a further review of procurement procedures for all defense departments and agencies with a view to facilitating and extending such participation for the further benefit of small business.

We favor loans at reasonable rates of interest to small businesses which have records of permanency but who are in temporary need and which are unable to obtain credit in commercial channels. We recommend an extension at the earliest opportunity of the Small Business Administration, which is now scheduled to expire in mid-1957.

We also propose:

Additional technical research in problems of development and distribution for the benefit of small business;

Legislation to enable closer Federal scrutiny of mergers which have significant or potential monopolistic connotations;

Procedural changes in the antitrust laws to facilitate their enforcement;

Simplification of wage reporting by employers for purposes of Social Security records and income tax withholding;

Continuance of the vigorous S.E.C. policies which are providing maximum protection to the investor and maximum opportunity for the financing of small business without costly red tape.

Labor

Under the Republican Administration, as our country has prospered, so have its people. This is as it should be, for as President Eisenhower said: "Labor is the United States. The men and women, who with their minds, their hearts and hands, create the wealth that is shared in this country -- they are America."

The Eisenhower Administration has brought to our people the highest employment, the highest wages and the highest standard of living ever enjoyed by any nation. Today there are nearly 67,000,000 men and women at work in the United States, 4,000,000 more than in 1952. Wages have increased substantially over the past three and a half years; but, more important, the American wage-earner today can buy more than ever before for himself and his family because his pay check has not been eaten away by rising taxes and soaring prices.

The record of performance of the Republican Administration on behalf of our working men and women goes still further. The Federal minimum wage has been raised for more than 2,000,000 workers. Social Security has been extended to an additional 10,000,000 workers and the benefits raised for 6,500,000. The protection of unemployment insurance has been brought to 4,000,000 additional workers. There have been increased workmen's compensation benefits for longshoremen and harbor workers; increased retirement benefits. In addition, the Eisenhower Administration has enforced more vigorously and effectively than ever before the laws which protect the working standards of our people.

Workers have benefited by the progress which has been made in carrying out the programs and principles set forth in the 1952 Republican platform. All workers have gained and unions have grown in strength and responsibility, and have increased their membership by two millions.

Furthermore, the process of free collective bargaining has been strengthened by the insistence of this Administration that labor and management settle their differences at the bargaining table without the intervention of the Government. This policy has brought to our country an unprecedented period of labor-management peace and understanding.

We effected unhindered collective bargaining which brought an early end to the 1956 steel strike, in contrast to the six months' upheaval, Presidential seizure of the steel industry and ultimate Supreme Court intervention under the last Democrat Administration.

The Eisenhower Administration will continue to fight for dynamic and progressive programs which, among other things, will through assistance to the states, employees and employers:

Continue and further perfect its programs of assistance to the millions of workers with special employment problems, such as older workers, handicapped workers, members of minority groups, and migratory workers;

Strengthen and improve the Federal-state employment service and improve the effectiveness of the unemployment insurance system;

Protect by law, the assets of employee welfare and benefit plans so that workers who are the beneficiaries can be assured of their rightful benefits;

Assure equal pay for equal work regardless of sex;

Clarify and strengthen the eight-hour laws for the benefit of workers who are subject to Federal wage standards on Federal and Federally assisted construction, and maintain and continue the vigorous administration of the Federal prevailing minimum wage law for public supply contracts;

Extend the protection of the Federal minimum wage laws to as many more workers as is possible and practicable;

Continue to fight for the elimination of discrimination in employment because of race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry or sex.

Health, Education, Welfare

Provide assistance to improve the economic conditions of areas faced with persistent and substantial unemployment.

Revise and improve the Taft-Hartley Act so as to protect more effectively the rights of labor unions, management, the individual worker, and the public. The protection of the right of workers to organize into unions and to bargain collectively is the firm and permanent policy of the Eisenhower Administration. In 1954, 1955 and again in 1956, President Eisenhower recommended constructive amendments to this act. A Democrat controlled Congress has blocked these needed changes by parliamentary maneuvers. The Republican party pledges itself to overhaul and improve the Taft-Hartley Act along the lines of these recommendations.

The Republican party believes that the physical, mental and spiritual well-being of the people is as important as their economic health. It will continue to support this conviction with vigorous action.

Republican action created the Department of Health, Education and Welfare as the first new Federal department in forty years, to raise the continuing consideration of these problems for the first time to the highest council of Government, the President's Cabinet.

Through the White House conference on education, our Republican Administration initiated the most comprehensive community-state-Federal attempt ever made to solve the pressing problems of primary and secondary education.

Four thousand representatives of communities, studying their school populations and their physical and financial resources, encouraged our Republican Administration to urge a five-year program of Federal assistance in building schools to relieve a critical classroom shortage.

The Republican party will renew its efforts to enact a program based on sound principles of need and designed to encourage increased state and local efforts to build more classrooms.

Our Administration also proposed for the first time in history, a thorough nation-wide analysis of rapidly growing problems in education beyond the high schools.

The Republican party is determined to press all such actions that will help insure that every child has the educational opportunity to advance to his own greatest capacity.

We have fully resolved to continue our steady gains in man's unending struggle against disease and disability.

We have supported the distribution of free vaccine to protect millions of children against dreaded polio.

Republican leadership has enlarged Federal assistance for construction of hospitals, emphasizing low-cost care of chronic diseases and the special problems of older persons, and increased Federal aid for medical care of the needy.

We have asked the largest increase in research funds ever sought in one year to intensify attacks on cancer, mental illness, heart disease and other dread diseases.

We demand once again, despite the reluctance of the Democrat Eighty-fourth Congress, Federal assistance to help build facilities to train more physicians and scientists.

We have encouraged a notable expansion and improvement of voluntary health insurance, and urge that reinsurance and pooling arrangements be authorized to speed this progress.

We have strengthened the Food and Drug Administration, and we have increased the vocational rehabilitation program to enable a larger number of the disabled to return to satisfying activity.

We have supported measures that have made more housing available than ever before in history, reduced urban slums in local-Federal partnership, stimulated record home ownership, and authorized additional low-rent public housing.

We initiated the first flood insurance program in history under Government sponsorship in cooperation with private enterprise.

We shall continue to seek extension and perfection of a sound Social Security system.

We pledge close cooperation with state, local and private agencies to reduce the ghastly toll of fatalities on the nation's highways.

Agriculture

The men and women operating the farms and ranches of America have confidence in President Eisenhower and the Republican farm program. They have earned the respect and appreciation of our entire nation for their energy, resourcefulness and ability.

Agriculture, our basic industry, must remain free and prosperous. The Republican party will continue to move boldly to help the farmer obtain his full share of the rewards of good business and good government. It is committed to a program for agriculture which creates the widest possible markets and highest attainable income for our farm and ranch families. This program must be versatile and flexible to meet effectively the impact of rapidly changing conditions. It does not envision making farmers dependent upon direct Governmental payments for their incomes. Our objective is markets which return full parity to our farm and ranch people when they sell their products. There is no simple, easy answer to farm problems. Our approach as ever is a many-sided, versatile and positive program to help all farmers and ranchers.

Farm legislation, developed under the Democratic Administration to stimulate production in wartime, carried a built-in mechanism for the accumulation of price-depressing surpluses in peacetime. Under laws sponsored by the Republican Administration, almost $7,000,000 in price-depressing surplus farm products have been moved into use, and the rate of movement is being accelerated.

Agriculture is successfully making the transition from wartime to peacetime markets, with less disruption than at any time after a great war. We are gratified by the improvement this year in farm prices and income as a result of our policies.

Benefits of Social Security have been extended to farm families. Programs of loans and grants for farm families hit by flood and drought have been made operative.

Tax laws were improved to help farmers with respect to livestock, farm equipment, and conservation practices. We initiated action to refund to the farmers $60,000,000 annually in taxes on gasoline used in machinery on the farm.

Our Republican Administration fostered a constructive soil bank program further to reduce surpluses and to permit improvement of our soil, water and timber resources. The Democratic party tactics of obstruction and delay may have prevented our farm families from receiving the full benefits of this program in 1956.

However, by aggressive action, we now have the soil bank in operation, and in three months, half a million farmers have contracted to shift more than 10,000,000 acres from producing more surpluses to soil reserve for the future. For this they already have earned $225,000,000.

This program is a sound aid to removing the burdens of surpluses which Democrat programs placed on farmers. It is now moving into full operation.

Cooperation between the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the state departments of agriculture, and land-grant colleges and universities is at an all-time high. This Republican Administration has increased support for agricultural research and education to the highest level in history. New records of assistance to farm and ranch families in soil and water conservation were attained in every year of this Republican Administration.

Convinced that the Government should ever be the farmer's helper, never his master, the Republican party is pledged:

To establish an effective, new research program, fully and completely implemented to find and vigorously promote new uses for farm crops;

To move our agricultural commodities into use at home and abroad, and to use every appropriate and effective means to improve marketing, so that the farmers can produce and sell their products to increase their income and enjoy an improving level of living;

To encourage the improvement of quality in farm products through agricultural research, education and price support differentials, thus increasing market acceptance both at home and abroad;

To further help and cooperate with the several states as co-equals with the Federal Government to provide needed research, education, service and regulatory programs;

To develop farm programs that are fair to all farmers;

To work toward full freedom instead of toward more regimentation, developing voluntary rather than oppressive farm programs;

To encourage agricultural producers in their efforts to seek solutions to their own production and price problems;

To provide price supports as in the Agricultural Act of 1954 that protect farmers, rather than price their products out of the market;

To continue our commodity loan and marketing agreement programs as effective marketing tools;

To make every effort to develop a more accurate measurement of farm parity;

To safeguard our precious soil and water resources for generations yet unborn;

To encourage voluntary self-supporting Federal crop insurance;

To bring sympathetic and understanding relief promptly to farm and ranch families hard hit with problems of drought, flood or other natural disaster, or economic disaster, and to maintain the integrity of these programs by terminating them when the emergency is over;

To assist the young people of American farms and ranches in their development as future farmers and homemakers;

To continue and expand the Republican-sponsored school milk program, to encourage further use of the school lunch program now benefiting 11,000,000 children, and to foster improved nutritional levels;

To provide constructive assistance by effective purchase and donation to ease temporary market surpluses, especially for the producers of perishable farm products;

To give full support to farmer-owned and farmer-operated cooperatives;

To encourage and assist adequate private and cooperative sources of credit, to provide supplemental credit through the Farmers Home Administration where needed, with an understanding of the human and economic problems of farmers and ranchers;

To expand rural electrification through R.E.A. loans for generation and transmission, and to expand rural communication facilities;

To continue the improvement of rural mail delivery to farm families;

To promote fully the Republican-sponsored rural development program to broaden the operation and increase the income of low-income farm families and help tenant farmers;

To work with farmers, ranchers and others to carry forward the Great Plains program to achieve wise use of lands in the area subject to wind erosion, so that the people of this region can enjoy a higher standard of living; and in summation:

To keep agriculture strong, free, attuned to peace and not war, to stand ready with a reserve capacity at all times as a part of our defense, based on sound agricultural economy.

We are an expanding nation. Our needs for farm products will continue to grow. Farm prices are improving and farm income is climbing.

Our farm and ranch people are confident of the future, despite efforts to frighten them into accepting economic nostrums and political panaceas. Record numbers of farms are owned by those who operate them.

The Republican party is pledged to work for improved farm prices and farm income. We will seek that improvement boldly, in ways that protect the family farm. Our objective is a prosperous, expanding and free agriculture. We are dedicated to creating the opportunity for farmers to earn a high per-family income in a world at peace.

The Republican party is whole-heartedly committed to maintaining a Federal Government that is clean, honorable and increasingly efficient. It proudly affirms that it has achieved this kind of government and dedicated it to the service of all the people.

Our many economic and social advances of the past four years are the result of our faithful adherence to our 1952 pledge

We have left no stone unturned to remove from Government the irresponsible and those whose employment was not clearly consistent with national security.

We believe that working for the Government is not a right but a privilege. Based on that principle we will continue a security program to make certain that all people employed by our Government are of unquestioned loyalty and trustworthiness. The Republican party will, realistically and in conformity with constitutional safeguards for the individual, continue to protect our national security by enforcing our laws fairly, vigorously, and with certainty. We will act through the new division established to this end in the Department of Justice, by close coordination among the intelligence services.

We promise unwavering vigilance against corruption and waste, and shall continue so to manage the public business as to warrant our people's full confidence in the integrity of their government.

We condemn illegal lobbying for any cause and improper use of money in political activities, including the use of funds collected by compulsion for political purposes contrary to the personal desires of the individual.

Government Efficiency

We pledge to continue our far-reaching program for improving the efficiency and the effectiveness of the Federal Government in accordance with the principles set forth in the report of the Hoover Commission.

We are unalterably opposed to unwarranted growth of centralized Federal power. We shall carry forward the worthy effort of the Kestenbaum Commission on Intergovernmental Affairs to clarify Federal relationships and strengthen state and local government.

We shall continue to dispense with Federal activities wrongfully competing with private enterprise, and take other sound measures to reduce the cost of government.

Postal Service

In the last four years, under direction from President Eisenhower to improve the postal service and reduce costs, we have modernized and revitalized the postal establishment from top to bottom, inside and out. We have undertaken and substantially completed the largest reorganization ever to take place in any unit of business or government:

We have provided more than 1,200 badly needed new Post Office buildings, and are adding two more every day. We are using the very latest types of industrial equipment where practicable; and, through a program of research and engineering, we are inventing new mechanical and electronic devices to speed the movement of mail by eliminating tedious old-fashioned methods.

We have improved service across the country in hundreds of ways. We have extended city carrier service to millions of new homes in thousands of urban and suburban communities which have grown and spread under the favorable economic conditions brought about by the Eisenhower Administration.

We have reinspired the morale of our half-million employees through new programs of promotion based on ability, job training and safety, and through our sponsorship of increased pay and fringe benefits.

We have adopted the most modern methods of transportation accounting and cost control, and other operating procedures; through them we have saved many millions of dollars a year for the taxpayers while advancing the delivery of billions of letters by a day or more -- all this while reducing the enormous deficit of the department from its all time high of almost three-quarters of a billion dollars in 1952 to less than half that amount in 1955.

We pledge to continue our efforts, blocked by the Democratic leadership of the Eighty-Fourth Congress, for a financially sound, more nearly self-sustaining postal service -- with the users of the mails paying a greater share of the costs instead of the taxpayers bearing the burden of huge postal deficits.

We pledge to continue and to complete this vitally needed program of modernization of building, equipment, methods and service, so that the American people will receive the kind of mail they deserve -- the speediest and best that American ingenuity, technology and modern business management can provide.

Civil Service

We will vigorously promote, as we have in the past, a non-political career service under the merit system which will attract and retain able servants of the people. Many gains in this field, notably pay increases and a host of new benefits, have been achieved in their behalf in less than four years.

The Republican party will continue to fight for eagerly desired new advances for Government employees, and realistic reappraisement and adjustment of benefits for our retired Civil Service personnel.

We pledge immediate statehood for Alaska, recognizing the fact that adequate provision for defense requirements must be made.

We pledge immediate statehood for Hawaii.

We shall continue to encourage the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico in its political growth and economic development in accordance with the wishes of its people and the fundamental principle of self-determination.

We shall continue to pursue our enlightened policies which are now producing exceptional advances in the long struggle to help the American Indian gain the material and social advantages of his birthright and citizenship while maintaining to the fullest extent the cultural integrity of the various tribal groups.

We commend the present Administration for its progressive programs which have achieved such striking progress in preparing our Indian citizens for participation in normal community life. Health, educational and employment opportunities for Indians have been greatly expanded beyond any previous level, and we favor still further extensions of these programs.

We favor most sympathetic and constructive execution of the Federal trusteeship over Indian affairs, always in full consultation with Indians in the management of their interests and the expansion of their rights of self-government in local and tribal affairs.

We urge the prompt adjudication or settlement of pending Indian claims.

We favor self-government, national suffrage and representation in the Congress of the United States for residents of the District of Columbia.

We recommend to Congress the submission of a constitutional amendment providing equal rights for men and women.

Civil Rights

The Republican party points to an impressive record of accomplishment in the field of civil rights and commits itself anew to advancing the rights of all our people regardless of race, creed, color or national origin.

In the area of exclusive Federal jurisdiction, more progress has been made in this field under the present Republican Administration than in any similar period in the last eighty years.

The many Negroes who have been appointed to high public positions have played a significant part in the progress of this Administration.

Segregation has been ended in the District of Columbia government and in the District public facilities, including public schools, restaurants, theatres and playgrounds. The Eisenhower Administration has eliminated discrimination in all Federal employment.

Great progress has been made in eliminating employment discrimination on the part of those who do business with the Federal Government and secure Federal contracts. This Administration has impartially enforced Federal civil-rights statutes, and we pledge that it will continue to do so. We support the enactment of the civil-rights program already presented by the President to the second session of the Eighty-fourth Congress.

The regulatory agencies under this Administration have moved vigorously to end discrimination in interstate commerce. Segregation in the active armed forces of the United States has been ended. For the first time in our history there is no segregation in veterans' hospitals and among civilians on naval bases. This is an impressive record. We pledge ourselves to continued progress in this field.

The Republican party has unequivocally recognized that the supreme law of the land is embodied in the Constitution, which guarantees to all people the blessing of liberty, due process and equal protection of the laws. It confers upon all native-born and naturalized citizens not only citizenship in the state where the individual resides but citizenship of the United States as well. This is an unqualified right, regardless of race, creed or color.

The Republican party accepts the decision of the U.S. Supreme Court that racial discrimination in publicly supported schools must be progressively eliminated. We concur in the conclusion of the Supreme Court that its decision directing school desegregation should be accomplished with "all deliberate speed" locally through Federal district courts. The implementation order of the Supreme Court recognizes the complex and acutely emotional problems created by its decision in certain sections of our country where racial patterns have been developed in accordance with prior and longstanding decisions of the same tribunal.

We believe that true progress can be attained through intelligent study, understanding, education and goodwill. Use of force or violence by any group or agency will tend only to worsen the many problems inherent in the situation. This progress must be encouraged and the work of the courts supported in every legal manner by all branches of the Federal Government to the end that the Constitutional ideal of equality before the law, regardless of race, creed or color, will be steadily achieved.

Immigration

The Republican Party supports an immigraton policy which is in keeping with the traditions of America in providing a haven for oppressed peoples, and which is based on equality of treatment, freedom from implications of discriminations between racial, nationality and religious groups, and flexible enough to conform to changing needs and conditions.

We believe that such a policy serves our self-interest, reflects our responsibility for world leadership and develops maximum cooperation with other nations in resolving problems in this area.

We support the President's program submitted to the Eighty-fourth Congress to carry out needed modifications in existing law and to take such further steps as may be necessary to carry out our traditional policy.

In that concept, the Republican Administration sponsored the Refugee Relief Act to provide asylum for thousands of refugees, expellees and displaced persons, and undertook in the face of Democrat opposition to correct the inequities in existing law and to bring our immigration policies in line with the dynamic needs of the country and principles of equity and justice.

We believe also that the Congress should consider the extension of the Refugee Relief Act of 1953 in resolving this difficult refugee problem which resulted from world conflict. To all this we give our wholehearted support.

Human Freedom and Peace

Under the leadership of President Eisenhower, the United States has advanced foreign policies which enable our people to enjoy the blessings of liberty and peace.

The changes in the international scene have been so great that it is easy to forget the conditions we inherited in 1953.

Peace, so hardly won in 1945, had again been lost. The Korean war, with its tragic toll of more than an eighth of a million American casualties, seemed destined to go on indefinitely. Its material costs and accompanying inflation were undermining our economy.

Freedom was under assault, and despotism was on the march. Armed conflict continued in the Far East, and tensions mounted elsewhere.

The threat of global war increased daily.

International communism which, in 1945, ruled the 200,000,000 people in the Soviet Union and Baltic States, was conquering so that by 1952, it dominated more than 700,000,000 people in fifteen once-independent nations.

Now, we are at peace.

The Korean war has been ended. The Communist aggressors have been denied their goals.

The threat of global war has receded.

The advance of communism has been checked, and, at key points, thrown back. The once-monolithic structure of international communism, denied the stimulant of successive conquests has shown hesitancy both internally and abroad.

The Korean war was brought to a close when the Communist rulers were made to realize that they could not win.

The United States has made a collective defense treaty with the Republic of Korea which will exclude, for the future, the Communist miscalculation as to announced Ameircan interests and intentions which led to the original aggression.

The United States has made a security treaty with the Republic of China covering Formosa and the Pescadores; and the Congress, by virtually unanimous action, has authorized the President to employ the armed forces of the United States to defend this area. As a result, the Chinese Communists have not attempted to implement their announced intention to take Formosa by force.

In Indochina, the Republics of Vietnam and Cambodia and Laos are now free and independent nations. The Republic of Vietnam, with the United States assistance, has denied the Communists the gains which they expected from the withdrawal of French forces.

The security of Southeast Asia has now been bolstered by the collective defense system of SEATO (Southeast Asia Treaty Organization), and its peoples encouraged by the declarations in the Pacific Charter of the principles of equal rights and self-determination of peoples.

The Middle East has been strengthened by the defensive unity of the four "northern tier" countries -- Turkey, Iraq, Iran and Pakistan -- which hold gateways to the vast oil resources upon which depend the industry and military strength of the free world. This was made possible by the liberation of Iran from the grip of the Communist Tudeh party. Iran has again made its oil reserves available to the world under an equitable settlement negotiated by the United States.

We have maintained, and will maintain friendly relations with all nations in this vital area, seeking to mediate differences among them, and encouraging their legitimate national aspirations.

In Western Europe, the scene has been transformed. The Federal Republic of Germany, which until 1953 was denied sovereignty and the opportunity to join the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, has now had full sovereignty restored by the treaties of 1954, and has become a member of NATO despite the intense opposition of the Soviet Union.

NATO itself has been strengthened by developing reliance upon her new weapons and retaliatory power, thus assisting the NATO countries increasingly to attain both economic welfare and adequate military defense.

On our initiative, the political aspects of NATO are being developed. Instead of being merely a military alliance, NATO will provide a means for coordinating the policies of the member states on vital matters, such as the reunification of Germany, the liberation of the satellites, and general policies in relation to the Soviet Union.

Austria has been liberated. The freedom treaty, blocked since 1947 by the Soviet Union, was signed in 1955. For the first time since the end of World War II, Red Army forces in Europe evacuated occupied lands.

The emotion-charged dispute between Italy and Yugoslavia about Trieste was settled with the active participation of the United States. The city of Trieste was restored to Italian sovereignty, and United States and British forces withdrawn.

The Spanish base negotiations, which had long languished, were successfully concluded, and close working relations in this important respect established between the United States and Spain.

Our Good Neighbor policy continues to prove its wisdom.

The American Republics have the cancer of communism. At the Caracas Conference of March, 1954, they agreed that if international communism gained control of the political institutions of any American republic, this would endanger them all, and would call for collective measures to remove the danger. This new doctrine, first proposed by the United States, extends into modern times the principles of the Monroe Doctrine.

A first fruit of the Caracas Doctrine was the explusion of the Communist regime ruling Guatemala. Today, Guatemala is liberated from Kremlin control. The Organization of American States has grown in vigor. It has acted promptly and effectively to settle hemispheric disputes. In Costa Rica, for the first time in history, international aerial inspection was employed to maintain peace. The Panama Conference was probably the most successful in the long history of the Organization of American States in its promotion of good will, understanding and friendship.

Far-reaching steps have been taken to eliminate the danger of a third world war. President Eisenhower led the way at Geneva. There he impressed the Soviet leaders and the world with the dedication of the United States to peace, but its determination not to purchase peace at the price of freedom.

The summit conference set new forces into motion. The Soviet rulers professed to renounce the use of violence, which Stalin had made basic in the Communist doctrine. Then followed a repudiation of Stalin, the growth of doctrinal disputes within the Communist party, and a discrediting of party authority and its evil power. Forces of liberalism within the Soviet bloc challenged the brutal and atheistic doctrines of Soviet communism. For the first time, we see the positive evidence that forces of freedom and liberation will inevitably prevail if the free nations maintain their strength, unity and resolution.

We rededicate ourselves to the pursuit of a just peace and the defense of human liberty and national independence.

We shall continue vigorously to support the United Nations.

We shall continue our cooperation with our sister states of the Americas for the strengthening of our security, economic and social ties with them.

We shall continue to support the collective security system, begun in 1947 and steadily developed on a bipartisan basis. That system has joined the United States with forty-two other nations in common defense of freedom. It has created a deterrent to war which cannot be nullified by Soviet veto.

Where needed, we shall help friendly countries maintain such local forces and economic strength as provide a first bulwark against Communist aggression or subversion. We shall reinforce that defense by a military capacity which, operating in accordance with the United Nations Charter, could so punish aggression that it ceases to be a profitable pursuit.

We will continue efforts with friends and allies to assist the underdeveloped areas of the free world in their efforts to attain greater freedom, independence and self-determination, and to raise their standards of living.

We recognize the existence of a major threat to international peace in the Near East. We support a policy of impartial friendship for the peoples of the Arab states and Israel to promote a peaceful settlement of the causes of tension in that area, including the human problem of the Palestine-Arab refugees.

Progress toward a just settlement of the tragic conflict between the Jewish state and the Arab nations in Palestine was upset by the Soviet bloc sale of arms to Arab countries. But prospects of peace have now been reinforced by the mission to Palestine of the United Nations Secretary General upon the initiative of the United States.

We regard the preservation of Israel as an important tenet of American foreign policy. We are determined that the integrity of an independent Jewish state shall be maintained. We shall support the independence of Israel against armed aggression. The best hope for peace in the Middle East lies in the United Nations. We pledge our continued efforts to eliminate the obstacles to a lasting peace in this area.

We shall continue to seek the reunification of Germany in freedom, and the liberation of the satellite states -- Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia and other once-free countries now behind the Iron Curtain. The Republican party stands firmly with the peoples of these countries in their just quest for freedom. We are confident that our peaceful policies, resolutely pursued, will finally restore freedom and national independence to oppressed peoples and nations.

We continue to oppose the seating of Communist China in the United Nations, thus upholding international morality. To seat a Communist China which defies, by word and deed, the principles of the United Nations Charter would be to betray the letter, violate the spirit, and subvert the purposes of that Charter. It would betray our friend and ally, the Republic of China. We will continue our determined efforts to free the remaining Americans held prisoner by Communist China.

Recognizing economic health as an indispensable basis of military strength and world peace, we shall strive to foster abroad and to practice at home, policies to encourage productivity and profitable trade.

Barriers which impede international trade and the flow of capital should be reduced on a gradual, selective and reciprocal basis, with full recognition of the necessity to safeguard domestic enterprises, agriculture and labor against unfair import competition. We proudly point out that the Republican party was primarily responsible for initiating the escape clause and peril point provisions of law to make effective the necessary safeguards for American agriculture, labor and business. We pledge faithful and expeditious administration of these provisions.

We are against any trade with the Communist world that would threaten the security of the United States and our allies.

We recognize that no single nation can alone defend the liberty of all nations threatened by Communist aggression or subversion. Mutual security means effective mutual cooperation. Poverty and unrest in less developed countries make them the target for international communism. We must help them achieve the economic growth and stability necessary to attain and preserve their independence.

Technical and economic assistance programs are effective counter-measures to Soviet economic offensives and propaganda. They provide the best way to create the political and social stability essential to lasting peace.

We will strive to bring about conditions that will end the injustices of nations divided against their will, of nations held subject to foreign domination, of peoples deprived of the right of self-government.

We reaffirm the principle of freedom for all peoples, and look forward to the eventual end of colonialism.

We will overlook no opportunity that, with prudence, can be taken to bring about a progressive elimination of the barriers that interfere with the free flow of news, information and ideas, and the exchange of persons between the free peoples and the captive peoples of the world. We favor the continuance and development of "exchange-of-persons" programs between free nations.

We approve appropriate action to oppose the imposition by foreign governments of discrimination against United States citizens, based on their religion or race.

We shall continue the bipartisan development of foreign policies. We hold this necessary if those policies are to have continuity, and be regarded by other free nations as dependable.

The Republican party pledges itself to continue the dynamic, courageous, sound and patriotic policies which have protected and promoted the interests of the United States during the past four years.

In a world fraught with peril, peace can be won and preserved only by vigilance and inspired leadership. In such a world, we believe it is essential that the vast experience of our proven leader, President Dwight D. Eisenhower, continues to guide our country in the achievement and maintenance of a just, honorable and durable peace.

Bulwark for the Free World

The military strength of the United States has been a key factor in the preservation of world peace during the past four years. We are determined to maintain that strength so long as our security and the peace of the world require it.

This Administration, within six months after President Eisenhower's inauguration, ended the war in Korea by concluding an honorable armistice. The lesson of that war and our lack of preparedness which brought it about will not be forgotten. Such mistakes must not be repeated.

As we maintain and strengthen the security of this nation, we shall, consistent with this Administration's dedication to peace, strive for the acceptance of realistic proposals for disarmament and the humanitarian control of weapons of mass destruction.

Our country's defense posture is today a visible and powerful deterrent against attack by an enemy, from any quarter, at any time.

We have the strongest striking force in the world -- in the air -- on the sea -- and a magnificent supporting land force in our Army and Marine Corps. Such visible and powerful deterrents must continue to include:

A jet-powered, long-range, strategic air force, and a tactical air force of the fastest and very latest type aircraft, with a striking capability superior to any other;

The most effective guided and ballistic missiles;

A modern Navy with a powerful naval aircraft arm prepared to keep the sea lanes open to meet any assignment;

An Army whose mobility and unit fire power are without equal;

Bases, strategically dispersed at home and around the world, essential to all these operations.

We will maintain and improve the effective strength and state of readiness of all these armed forces.

To achieve this objective, we must depend upon attracting to and retaining in our military services vigorous and well-trained manpower, and upon continuously maintaining in reserve an enthusiastic and well-informed group of men and women. This will require incentives that will make armed service careers attractive and rewarding. A substantial start has been made toward bolstering the rewards and benefits that accompany a military career. We must continue to provide them.

In order that American youth in our armed services shall be provided with the most modern weapons, we have supported, and will continue to support an effective and well-directed program of research and development, staffed by men of the highest caliber and ability in this field. There is no substitute for the best where the lives of our men and the defense of our nation are concerned.

We fully appreciate the importance of scientific knowledge and its application particularly in the military field.

We pledge ourselves to stimulate and encourage the education of our young people in the sciences with a determination to maintain our technological leadership.

In this age of weapons of inconceivable destructiveness, we must not neglect the protection of the civilian population by all known means, while at the same time preparing our armed forces for every eventuality.

We wholeheartedly agree with President Eisenhower that our military defense must be backed by a strong Civil Defense, and that an effective Civil Defense is an important deterrent against attack upon our country, and an indispensable reliance should our nation ever be attacked.

We support his proposals for strengthening Civil Defense, mindful that it has become an effective Government arm to deal with natural disasters.

We shall continue to carry forward vigorously and effectively, the valued services of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, as well as all other Government intelligence agencies, so as to insure that we are protected at all times against subversive activities. We will never relax our determined efforts to keep our Government, and our people, safely guarded against all enemies from within.

We agree and assert that civilian authority and control over our defense structure and program must be maintained at all times. We believe, without qualification, that in our present Commander in Chief, Dwight D. Eisenhower, this nation possesses a leader equipped by training, temperament, and experience in war and in peace, for both that personal example and that direction of our national defense in which the American people will continue to have confidence, and in which the peoples of all the free world will find an increasing sense of security and of opportunity for peace.

Veterans

We believe that active duty in the armed forces during a state of war or national emergency is the highest call of citizenship constituting a special service to our nation and entitles those who have served to positive assistance to alleviate the injuries, hardships and handicaps imposed by their service.

In recognizing this principle under previous Republican Administrations we established the Veterans Administration. This Republican Administration increased compensation and pension benefits for veterans and survivors to provide more adequate levels and to offset cost-of-living increases that occurred during the most recent Democratic Administration.

We have also improved quality of hospital service and have established a long-range program for continued improvement of such service. We have strengthened and extended survivors' benefits, thus affording greater security for all veterans in the interest of equity and justice.

In advancing this Republican program we pledge:

That compensation for injuries and disease arising out of service be fairly and generously provided for all disabled veterans and for their dependents or survivors;

That a pension program for disabled war veterans in need and for their widows and orphans in need be maintained as long as necessary to assure them adequate income;

That all veterans be given equal and adequate opportunity for readjustment following service, including unemployment compensation when needed, but placing emphasis on obtaining suitable employment for veterans, particularly those disabled, by using appropriate facilities of Government and by assuring that Federal employment preference and re-employment rights, to which the veteran is entitled, are received;

That the Veterans Administration be continued as a single independent agency providing veterans services;

That the service-disabled continue to receive first-priority medical services of the highest standard and that non-service disabled war veterans in need receive hospital care to the extent that beds are available.

Natural Resources

One of the brightest areas of achievement and progress under the Eisenhower Administration has been in resource conservation and development and in sound, long-range works programming.

Policies of sound conservation and wise development -- originally advanced half a century ago under the pre-eminent Republican conservation team of President Theodore Roosevelt and Giffird Pinchot and amplified by succeeding Republican Administrations -- have been pursued by the Eisenhower Administration. While meeting the essential development needs of the people, this Administration has conserved and safeguarded our natural resources for the greatest good of all, now and in the future.

Our national parks, national forests and wildlife refuges are now more adequately financed, better protected and more extensive than ever before. Long-range improvement programs, such as Mission 66 for the national parks system, are now under way, and studies are nearing completion for a comparable program for the national forests. These forward-looking programs will be aggressively continued.

Our Republican Administration has modernized and vitalized our mining laws by the first major revision in more than thirty years.

Achievements: Reversed the fifteen-year trend of neglect of our national parks by launching the ten-year, $785,000,000 Mission 66 parks improvements program. Has nearly completed field surveys for a comparable forest improvement program. Obtained passage of the so-called "week-end miner bill." Added more than 400,000 acres to our national park system, and 90,000 acres to wildlife refuges. Has undertaken well-conceived measures to protect reserve areas of all types and to provide increased staffs and operating funds for public recreation agencies.

We favor full recognition of recreation as an important public use of our national forests and public domain lands.

We favor a comprehensive study of the effort upon wildlife of the drainage of our wetlands.

We favor recognition, by the states, of wildlife and recreation management and conservation as a beneficial use of water.

We subscribe to the general objectives of groups seeking to guard the beauty of our land and to promote clean, attractive surroundings throughout America.

We recognize the need for maintaining isolated wilderness areas to provide opportunity for future generations to experience some wilderness living through which the traditional American spirit of hardihood was developed.

Achievements: approved conservation programs of many types including improvement of Western grazing lands through reseeding programs, water-spreading systems, and encouragement of soil and moisture-conservation practices by range users. Returned to the states their submerged lands and resources off their coasts, out to their historical boundaries -- an area comprising about one-tenth of the area of the Continental Shelf and about 17 per cent of the mineral resources. Initiated leasing of the Federally-owned 83 per cent of the Continental Shelf which is expected ultimately to bring from 6 to 8 billion dollars into the Treasury and already has brought in over $250,000,000. Enacted new legislation to encourage multiple use of the public domain.

We commend the Eisenhower Administration for its administration of our public lands and for elimination of bureaucratic abuses. We recommend continuing study and evaluation of the advisability of returning unused or inadequately used public lands.

We commend the Administration for expanding forest research and access-road construction.

We shall continue to improve timber conservation practices, recreational facilities, grazing management, and watershed protection of our national forests and our public domain.

Recognizing that a vigorous and efficient mineral industry is essential to the long-term development of the United States and to its defense, we believe the Federal Government should foster a long-term policy for the development and prudent use of domestic mineral resources, and to assure access to necessary sources abroad, without dangerously weakening the market for domestic production of defense-essential materials.

We favor reasonable repletion allowances. We favor freedom of mineral producers from unnecessary governmental regulation; expansion of government minerals exploration and research, and establishment of minerals stockpile objectives which will reduce, and, where possible, eliminate foreseeable wartime shortages.

Achievements: St. Lawrence Seaway and power projects, Colorado River storage project, Great Lakes connecting channels, small watershed protection and flood prevention under local control, Mississippi gulf level canal, extension of water-pollution control program, survey of power potential of Passamaquoddy Bay tides, expansion of small project development for flood control, navigation, and reclamation; extension to all forty-eight states of Water Facilities Act, accelerated research on saline water conversion, authorized planning surveys and construction of more than 200 navigation, flood-control, beach erosion, rivers and harbors, reclamation and watershed projects throughout the nation, advanced partnership water resource developments in a number of states.

Water resource development legislation enacted under the Eisenhower Administration already has ushered in one of the greatest water resource development programs this nation has ever seen. A soundly conceived construction program that will continue throughout this century and beyond.

We recognize that the burgeoning growth of our nation requires a combination of Federal, state and local water and power development -- a real partnership of effort by all interested parties. In no other way can the nation meet the huge and accelerated demands for increasing generating capacity and uses of water, both by urban and agricultural areas. We also are aware that water demands have been accentuated by the ravages of drought, creating emergency conditions in many sections of our country. We commend the Eisenhower Administration for encouraging state and local governments, public agencies and regulated private enterprise to participate actively in comprehensive water and power development. In such partnership we are leading the way with great Federal developments such as the Upper Colorado project and with partnership projects of great importance, some of which have been shelved by the Democratic Eighty-fourth Congress.

In the marketing of Federally produced power we support preference to public bodies and cooperatives under the historic policy of the Congress.

We will continue to press for cooperative solution of all problems of water supply and distribution, reclamation, pollution, flood control and saline water conversion.

We pledge legislative support to the arid and semi-arid states in preserving the integrity of their water laws and customs as developed out of the necessities of these regions. We affirm the historic policy of Congress recognizing state water rights, as repeatedly expressed in Federal law over the past ninety years.

We pledge an expansion in research and planning of water resource development programs, looking to the future when it may be necessary to re-distribute water from water-surplus areas to water-deficient areas.

Achievements: Accelerated research and administrative action to rehabilitate our long-neglected fishing industry. Approval of measures for additional conservation and propagation of fish. Development of the comprehensive program for fisheries management and assistance adopted by the Congress.

We favor continuation of the Eisenhower program to rehabilitate our long-neglected domestic fishing industry.

We advocate protective treaties insuring the United States commercial-fisheries industry against unfair foreign competiton.

The Republican party is acutely aware that a foundation stone of the nation's strength is its wealth of natural resources and the high development of its physical assets. They are the basis of our great progress in 180 years of freedom and of our nation's militay and economic might.

We pledge that we will continue the policies of sound conservation and wise development instituted by this Administration to insure that our resrouces are managed as a beneficial trust for all the people.

For a Brighter Tomorrow

The Republican party pledges continuous, vigorous development of atomic energy:

For the defense of our own country and to deter aggression, and for the promotion of world peace and the enhancement of our knowledge of basic science and its application to industry, agriculture and the healing arts.

From the passage of the first Atomic Energy Act in 1946 to the beginning of this Republican Administration, a stalemate had existed, and only an arms race with the prospect of eventual catastrophe faced the nations of the world.

President Eisenhower has inaugurated and led a strong program for developing the peaceful atom -- a program which has captured the imagination of men and women everywhere with its widespread, positive achievements.

The Government and private enterprise are working together on a number of large-scale projects designed to develop substantial quantities of electric power from atomic sources. The first power reactor will be completed next year. More and more private funds are being invested as the Government monopoly is relaxed.

In relaxing its monopoly, Government can stimulate private enterprise to go ahead by taking recognition of the tremendous risks involved and the complexity of the many technical problems that will arise, and assist in those ways that will make advances possible.

The Atomic Energy Commission also is encouraging a vigorous rural electrification program by cooperatives.

Every day, radioactive isotopes are brought more and more into use on farms, in clinics and hospitals, and industry. The use of isotopes already has resulted in annual savings of hundred of millions of dollars and the nuclear age has only begun.

It is to the benefit of the United States, as well as to all nations everywhere, that the uses of atomic energy be explored and shared. The Republican party pledges that it will continue this imaginative, world-embracing program. We shall continue to chart our course so as to fortify the security of the free nations and to further the prosperity and progress of all people everywhere.

With utmost confidence in the future and with justifiable pride in our achievements, the Republican party warmly greets the dawn of our second century of service in the cause of unity and progress in the nation.

As the party of the young and in glowing appreciation of his dynamic leadership and inspiration, we respectfully dedicate this platform of the party of the future to our distinguished President, Dwight D. Eisenhower, and to the youth of America.

RURAL AND URBAN FORCES IN CONGRESS

There was much ado about the farm vote and the big-city vote during the 1956 campaign, but just how important are these constituencies to control of Congress?

Congressional Quarterly assessed the influence of farm areas, small towns, medium-sized cities and big metropolitan centers in the House of Representatives, in a study published March 30. Answers were sought to these questions:

- Where are Democrats and Republicans strongest, where are they weakest?
- What kind of districts are most likely to change?
- Are urban centers really under-represented in Congress?

Initial step in CQ's analysis required assigning each of the 435 House seats to one of four types of districts:

I -- Rural

II -- Small-town

III -- Mid-urban

IV -- Metropolitan

The table on page 789 shows how many districts exist in each classification, for the United States as a whole, for the nation excluding the South, and for each region, broken down by the winning party's margin of victory in the 1954 Congressional election. Comparable figures for the U.S. in the 1952 Congressional contest also are given. (Regions defined on p. 792)

Some key findings:

- Despite legitimate interest in the farm vote, perhaps a more critical battleground for control of the 85th Congress will be the Mid-urban districts -- principally those containing cities of 50,000 to 200,000 population -- and the big-city or Metropolitan districts.

These two classes of districts encompass two-thirds (61) of the 93 Congressional districts currently termed politically "Doubtful" -- where incumbents won by less than 55 percent of the vote in 1954.

The Mid-urban group has fewer Safe seats than any other, and is the only type of district where less than one-half the seats in the group currently are classified "Safe" -- where incumbents won by more than 60 percent of the vote in 1954, or where there was no contest. These districts, characterized by their medium-sized cities, similarly furnished the highest proportion of marginally-won seats in 1952.

- The greatest source of Republican strength is in Small-town and Mid-urban districts. These are the two types of districts where the GOP won a majority of seats in 1954 and 1952. Together they contribute about three-fifths of the seats currently held by Republicans.

Outside the South, the GOP controls four-fifths of the Small-town districts, and more than 70 percent of the Mid-urban districts.

Rural - Urban Definitions

According to the 1950 Population Census definition, the urban population constitutes all persons living in places of 2,500 or more inhabitants, and in the densely settled urban fringe around cities of 50,000 or more. The remaining population is rural.

Because the term urban is applied indiscriminately to tiny villages and huge metropolitan centers, CQ's classification for Congressional districts takes into account city size as well as the percentage urban. Here is how the types are defined:

- I. Rural district. General characterization: predominantly rural. Specifically: (a) At least two-thirds rural; or (b) One-half to two-thirds rural, with no city of 25,000 or more population.
- II. Small-town district. General characterization: substantial rural population but with one or more cities of 25,000 to 50,000 population. Specifically: (a) One-third to one-half urban, and with a city of 25,000 to 50,000; or (b) More than one-half urban, but with no city of 50,000 or more; or (c) One-third to one-half urban with a city of 50,000 or more, the city having less than one-third the total district population.
- III. Mid-urban district. General characterization: substantially influenced by a city of 50,000 to 200,000. Specifically: (a) More than one-half urban, and with a city of 50,000 to 200,000; or (b) One-third to one-half urban and with a city of more than 50,000, the city having more than one-third of the total district population; or (c) One-half to two-thirds urban and contains or is partly contained in a city of 200,000 or more.
- IV. Metropolitan district. General characterization: predominantly "big-city" -- including metropolitan suburbs. Specifically: (a) More than two-thirds urban, contains or is partly contained in a city of 200,000 or more; or (b) More than two-thirds of the population lives in the urbanized area of a city of 200,000 or more.

For Senate and state-wide At-Large House seats, a classification system slightly different was used. However, for six out of nine states with At-Large Representatives, the Senate At-Large definitions gave results identical with the House scheme. For this analysis, At-Large seats in New Mexico, Vermont and Wyoming each had to be "downgraded" one class -- that is, assigned a more rural classification as state-wide constituencies, than they would have if treated as ordinary districts.

Some estimating was required in tabulating the urban population in a few districts. All district urban percentages are firm -- most likely not more than 1 or 2 percent in error in any district.

• The traditional picture of the GOP as a party moored fast to northern agriculture needs re-examination. Eighty-eight of the 435 U.S. districts are classified as Rural by CQ, but of these only 12 are currently "Safe" Republican districts. (Over one-half of the Rural districts are in the South, and all but a handful of these are Safe for the Democrats.)

Even in 1952 there were only 24 Safe Republican farm districts in the nation -- compared with 48 Safe GOP Small-town districts.

It should be remembered that farmers might hold the balance of power even where agriculture is not the principal industry. An earlier CQ survey of the 129 midwestern districts, for instance, showed only 25 districts where more than 30 percent of the employed were farmers. But there were 72 Midwest districts where the proportion of farmers was at least as great as the winning candidate's margin of victory. In addition, many voters work in industries dependent on agriculture.

• Democrats have the edge in Rural and Metropolitan districts. The hard Democratic core in the House -- the South (heavily rural) and the big northern cities -- go a long way toward furnishing enough votes to control the chamber (182 of the necessary 218 in 1954).

• In the nation as a whole, Rural seats currently enjoy the highest proportion of Safe seats -- those least likely to change party allegiance; but if the South is excluded, then almost two-thirds (25 out of 39) of the Rural districts fall into the marginal category.

• The very safest group of seats outside the South, based on the 1954 election, are the Metropolitan districts. Some 50 of them throughout the nation -- but principally in the East -- appear to be securely in Democratic hands, having remained safely Democratic during the 1952 Eisenhower landslide. Republicans nevertheless still hold 57 of the 142 big-city districts, though many by small margins.

• Small-town areas rank second in stability, claiming the next-to-lowest proportion of marginal seats. They constitute the largest single bloc of Safe Republican districts (32).

City Vote in Elections

Until recent years, big-city voters displayed a clear tendency to climb aboard the winning candidate's bandwagon with greater enthusiasm than the nation as a whole.

For instance, the average GOP Presidential percentage of the two-party vote in the nation's 10 most populous counties in 1920 was 73.7 percent, compared with only 63.9 percent throughout the United States. Democratic fortunes were at their lowest then, but in 1936 -- at the peak of Franklin D. Roosevelt's popularity -- the biggest metropolitan counties on the average voted 70.1 percent Democratic, contrasted with a 62.2 Democratic vote for the entire U.S.

By 1952 these counties seemed to have cast their lots more or less permanently with the Democrats -- though the Democratic margin fell sharply from what it had been during the New Deal days. Dwight D. Eisenhower secured 55.4 percent of the national vote, but he averaged only 46.6 percent in the 10 counties.

Cities Under-Represented?

Big-city spokesmen long have fumed over alleged discrimination by Rural-dominated state legislatures in allotting Congressional districts to city and farm areas. Urban dwellers charge that city districts are assigned larger populations -- hence there are fewer Urban districts, and more Rural districts with fewer people in them.

CQ examined these charges, found:

- Metropolitan districts are, in fact, one-fifth larger than Rural districts throughout the nation.

- Metropolitan areas would be entitled, on the basis of their population, to about one dozen more seats in Congress than they now have.

As the accompanying table shows, the average population in Rural districts is around 310,000, compared with 378,000 in Metropolitan districts. The typical Metropolitan district thus contains 68,000 (or 22 percent) more persons than the typical Rural district. Small-town and Mid-urban districts fall midway between these extremes.

Translated into seats in Congress, this means that -- if each Rural-Urban group of districts were represented by the number of Congressmen its total population entitles it to have -- Metropolitan areas would be entitled to 35.8 percent of the 430 seats, or 154 seats, for a gain of 12 seats. Conversely, Rural areas would lose 10. There also would be four fewer Small-town districts, and two additions to the Mid-urban group.

This Urban under-representation is more pronounced in the South. There the average big-city district contains more than 1½ times as many people as the typical farm district (472,000 and 310,000, respectively).

Committee Control

CQ also analyzed the districts represented by the 38 chairmen and ranking minority Members of the 19 House standing committees in another effort to assess Rural-Urban influences in Congress. These senior Representatives wield enormous power over legislation.

Results showed that big cities are seriously underrepresented on top committee posts, while in other respects the regions and types of districts where each party is strongest enjoy a tremendously disproportionate influence in committee control. For instance, of the 19 Democratic committee chairmen:

- 13 are southerners.
- 11 represent Rural districts, and only three represent Metropolitan districts.

Of the 19 ranking Republicans:

- 13 are midwesterners.
- 15 represent Small-town and Mid-urban districts, two are from Metropolitan districts.

The 11 western states have one chairman and one ranking minority Member; the six New England states have only one top-ranking committee Member.

CQ Fact Sheet On Negro Voting

WHERE DOES NEGRO VOTER STRENGTH LIE?

Political repercussions following the 1954 Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in the public schools led to speculation in 1956 that United States Negroes, who generally had supported the Democratic party since early New Deal days, might switch their support to the Republican party in the Nov. 6 election. In an attempt to assess this speculation, a Congressional Quarterly study in May analyzed population and pre-1956 election data and the estimates of political leaders, seeking answers to these questions:

- Where, outside the South, do Negroes constitute a significant portion of the population?
- Where, outside the South, can it be said that Negroes hold the political balance of power?
- Where, in these balance-of-power areas, do the politicians look for political shifts -- if any?

Distribution by District

Using 1950 census data, the latest complete figures available, CQ established the number of Negroes in each of the nation's 435 Congressional districts at that time. This number was then converted to the percentage that number represented of each district's total 1950 population. The percentage or proportion of Negroes in each of the districts appears in column 1 of the chart on page 796.

Distribution of the 435 districts -- by relative proportion of Negroes, by region and by the political party of the incumbent Representative -- is shown in the chart, p. 798. This table shows that, of 315 districts outside the South, only 35 districts had populations that were 10 percent or more Negro; of these 35 districts, 29 elected Democrats to the House in 1954.

In only 14 of the 315 districts outside the South did Negroes constitute 20 percent or more of the population. One is represented by a Republican -- the rural Eastern Shore First District of Maryland. The other 13, all in midwestern and eastern metropolitan areas, long have elected Democrats to the House. These are: Illinois 1st and 7th (Chicago), Maryland 3rd and 4th (Baltimore), Michigan 1st and 13th (Detroit), Missouri 3rd (St. Louis), New Jersey 11th (Newark), New York 10th and 16th (New York City), Ohio 21st (Cleveland), Pennsylvania 1st and 4th (Philadelphia).

Three of these 13 districts elected Negroes to the House in 1954 -- the only ones to sit in the 84th Congress. They are Reps. William L. Dawson (Ill. 1st), Charles C. Diggs Jr. (Mich. 13th) and Adam C. Powell Jr. (N.Y. 16th). Dawson's district, which was 91.7 percent Negro, and Powell's, which was 86.8 percent Negro, were the two most heavily Negro populated districts in the nation, followed by the Mississippi Third, which was 69.1 percent Negro.

VOTE DECLINE

These 13 districts averaged 37.5 percent Negro, with nine between 20 percent and 30 percent Negro. In 1954, Democratic candidates for the House averaged 70.8 percent of the vote in these districts, only two receiving less than 60 percent. Their 1954 share of the vote was up slightly from the 68.2 percent average in 1952. But in the two Philadelphia districts, the Democratic share of the vote dropped from 1952 to 1954.

In terms of the actual numbers of votes cast, the Republican turnout in these 13 districts dropped 38.9 percent from 1952 to 1954, the Democratic turnout 26.2 percent. In both cases, the falloff was greater than the national average -- 29.5 percent for the GOP, 21.5 percent for the Democrats.

President Eisenhower averaged 33.5 percent of the 1952 Presidential vote in these 13 Democratic-held districts. Two gave him a majority -- Maryland 4th (53.7 percent) and New Jersey 11th (52.2 percent). These also were the only two of the 13 districts that elected Democratic Congressmen in 1952 and 1954 by less than 60 percent of the vote. Smallest vote for Mr. Eisenhower was 17 percent in Powell's Harlem district.

In the 10 percent to 20 percent Negro group were 21 districts outside the South; 16 elected Democrats in 1954, five elected Republicans. Twelve of the 16 Democratic-held and four of the five GOP-held districts are in metropolitan areas. The 16 held by Democrats are: California 23rd and 26th (Los Angeles); Delaware At Large; Illinois 24th; Indiana 1st (Gary); Maryland 5th; Maryland 7th (Baltimore); Michigan 15th (Detroit); Missouri 5th (Kansas City); New York 9th, 18th and 23rd (New York City); Pennsylvania 2nd and 3rd (Philadelphia); Pennsylvania 28th (Pittsburgh) and West Virginia 5th. The five held by Republicans are California 7th (Oakland); Indiana 11th (Indianapolis); New Jersey 2nd; Ohio 2nd (Cincinnati); Ohio 12th (Columbus).

MARGINAL DISTRICTS

Three of the 16 Democratic-held districts are "marginal" -- that is, they were won by less than 55 percent of the vote in 1954. They are the Delaware At Large, and the Maryland 5th and 7th. The Delaware At Large and Maryland 5th seats were won by Republicans in 1952. These three districts also were the only ones among the 16 that gave Mr. Eisenhower a majority of the vote. His share of the 1952 Presidential vote averaged 42.7 percent in the entire 16 districts. In 1954, Democrats got from 55 percent to 60 percent of the vote in two districts (Missouri 5th and Pennsylvania 3rd), and more than 60 percent in the other 11.

Two of the five GOP-held districts were marginal in 1954 -- California 7th and Indiana 11th. But in two others -- New Jersey 2nd and Ohio 2nd -- Republican candidates increased their share of the vote from 1952 to 1954. President Eisenhower carried all five districts in 1952.

In the 5-to-10 percent Negro group were 37 districts outside the South, 27 in metropolitan areas. In 1954, 20 of the 37 districts elected Democrats, all but three by margins of more than 55 percent, and all but five by margins of more than 60 percent. The five are Illinois 3rd (Chicago), Illinois 25th and Ohio 9th (Toledo) by less than 55 percent, and New Jersey 4th and 6th by less than 60 percent. Democrats replaced Republicans in the Illinois 3rd, 25th and New Jersey 6th. In 1952, President Eisenhower carried six of the 20 districts.

Republicans won 17 of the 37 5-to-10 percent Negro districts in 1954, eight by less than 55 percent of the vote: California 6th; Illinois 4th (Chicago); Kansas 2nd (Kansas City); New Jersey 12th (Newark); New Jersey 1st (Camden); New York 5th (New York City); Ohio 14th (Akron); and Ohio 3rd (Dayton). In 1952, President Eisenhower carried all but two of the 17 districts -- the California 6th, which elected a Democrat that year, and the New Jersey 1st.

In summary, the 1950 Negro population constituted more than 5 percent of the total population in 72 of 315 Congressional districts outside the South. In 1954, 49 of the 72 elected Democrats to the House, six by less than 55 percent of the vote, and 23 elected Republicans, 10 by less than 55 percent. Forty of the 49 Democratic-held districts and 16 of the 23 GOP-held districts were in cities. President Eisenhower carried 11 of 49 Democratic-held districts, 21 of the 23 GOP-held districts.

Balance of Power

The foregoing data tell in large part where Negroes live in significant numbers outside the South. While the percentages used may be outdated for many of the 72 districts, the bias probably is on the low side, especially for the 35 districts where Negroes numbered more than 10 percent of the 1950 population. Recent samplings indicate the earlier movement of Negroes from the South to metropolitan centers in the East and Midwest continues. This movement, coupled in some instances with the movement of whites to the suburbs, probably has resulted in an increase in the proportion of Negroes in most of the metropolitan districts.

Negroes numbered more than 30 percent of the population in only four of the 315 Congressional districts outside the South -- Chicago 1st (91.7 percent), New York 16th (86.8 percent), Detroit 1st (37.1 percent) and Philadelphia 4th (44.8 percent). In these districts, the political significance of Negroes is preponderant -- Democratic candidates averaged 77 percent of the vote in 1954, while President Eisenhower averaged 23 percent in 1952. But in other districts, although numbering as little as 5 percent of the population, Negroes may wield the balance of power in close elections -- provided they register and vote in a bloc.

There are no complete and authoritative statistics on how many Negroes vote and how they vote throughout the nation. Such data would be most readily available in cities where entire wards are known to be exclusively populated by Negroes, and where the actual vote tells the story. These likewise are the areas, at least outside the South, where Negroes are most highly organized politically and where they register and vote in proportions similar to those in non-Negro metropolitan areas.

MARGIN OF VICTORY

Nevertheless, Negroes may be said to hold a theoretical balance of power in those districts where the Negro percentage of the population is larger than a winning candidate's margin of victory. This is, of course, the case in many southern districts, but the power remains theoretical because of the barriers raised to discourage Negro registration and voting in much of the South. Outside the South, however, and especially in the cities, Negroes are encouraged to vote by both parties. In these areas, the number voting as a bloc tends to determine the extent to which, as a practical matter, they wield the balance of power.

On the basis of the 1954 Congressional election, CQ selected those districts outside the South that qualify, in terms of the above definition, as ones where Negroes hold the balance of power. There were 61 such districts; 32 elected Democrats, 29 elected Republicans. All are listed in the chart on page 795. Cities are named when the districts lie wholly or largely within them. An asterisk following the percentage of Negroes within a district signifies that the percentage is two or more times as large as the winner's margin of victory, while a double asterisk marks the district as having been won by 55 percent of the vote or less. Roman numerals in the right-hand column indicate the districts' relative degree of urbanization.

Total number won in 1954	32	29
Type of district:
Metropolitan	21	17
Mid-urban	7	7
Small-town	2	4
Rural	2	1
Proportion of Negroes in 1950:
Over 20 percent	10	1
10-20 percent	9	3
5-10 percent	5	10
Under 5 percent	8	15
Negro proportion two or more times winner's margin in --	13	17
Districts won by more than 60%	12	--
Districts won by 55-60%	6	4
Districts won by less than 55%	14	25
Districts captured from other party in 1954	10	2

The 12 districts that elected Democrats in 1954 by more than 60 percent of the vote contained populations more than 10 percent Negro; eight of the 12 were more than 20 percent Negro. This suggests that in these 12 districts -- all metropolitan -- Negroes voted overwhelmingly for Democratic candidates. Short of a mass, nationwide switch by Negroes, it is doubtful that Democrats are in any danger of losing these districts.

Less certain may be the six districts won by Democrats in 1954 by 55 to 60 percent. Four were 15 percent or more Negro -- Maryland 4th, Missouri 5th, New Jersey 11th, and Pennsylvania 3rd. The other two are in New Jersey -- the 4th, with 8.6 percent Negro, elected Rep. Frank Thompson by 58.4 percent of the vote; the 6th, with 6.4 percent Negro, gave Rep. Harrison Williams 56.1 percent of the vote. Even in these districts, however, it would take a major defection by Negroes to defeat the Democratic incumbents, although they might be defeated for other reasons.

Most vulnerable of the 32 Democratic-held balance-of-power districts are those 14 classed as "marginal" that elected Democrats by less than 55 percent of the vote in 1954. In 1950 Negroes numbered from 10 percent to 20 percent of the population in three of the 14, from 5 percent to 10 percent in three, and under 5 percent in eight.

Key to Roman numerals: I – rural district; II – small town district; III – mid-urban district; IV – metropolitan district. For definitions, see page 788.

More important, perhaps, Democrats replaced Republicans in 1954 in 10 of the 14 districts, their share of the vote increasing from an average of 47 percent in 1952 to 53 percent in 1954. However, there is nothing to indicate the extent to which a Negro vote contributed to these changes. In assessing the degree of Negro voting participation in the 10 districts that switched in 1954, it is worth noting that only two qualify as metropolitan: Illinois 3rd and Wisconsin 5th. Five are mid-urban: California 12th; Delaware At Large; Indiana 8th; Michigan 6th; Pennsylvania 19th. Two are small-town districts -- Maryland 5th and West Virginia 4th -- and one is rural -- Illinois 25th.

To illustrate the balance-of-power concept, take the last-named district, the Illinois 25th, which includes 15 counties at the southern end of the state. Largest city in the district is Cairo, with a 1950 population of 12,000. In 1954, the total Congressional vote of 132,000 represented about 40 percent of the district's 1950 population. Democrat Kenneth B. Gray won by a plurality of 6,903 votes. The 1950 Negro population of the district was 6 percent or about 20,000. If we assume that 40 percent or 8,000 of the Negroes voted and that, as in many big city districts, three out of four voted Democratic, these 6,000 votes in theory supplied almost all of Gray's plurality. In any event, had less than 3,500 of Gray's votes been cast instead for his Republican opponent, the latter would have been elected. If we assume that at least 3,500 Negroes voted for Gray, it is apparent they held the balance of power.

At the other end of Illinois, in Chicago's 3rd District, Democrat James C. Murray got 53.8 percent of a total 1954 vote of 144,000, which was 41 percent of the district's 1950 population. His plurality was 10,908, while the 1950 Negro population was about 32,000. Assume that 41 percent of these or 13,000 voted and that three out of four, or 9,750 voted for Murray. A switch of less than 5,500 votes would have defeated him.

Headnotes

I. Percentage of Negroes in the total population of each Congressional district, according to 1950 Census.

II. Single asterisk (*) shows districts where size of census sample ranges from 80 to 100 percent. Double asterisk () indicates 12 districts where sample is less than 80 percent. All others are 100 percent.

III. Winning candidate's share of the 1954 vote.

IV. O designates so-called marginal districts won by 55 percent of the vote or less in 1954. X indicates districts -- not marginal -- in which Negro percentage exceeds 1954 margin of victory. Both symbols combined, ⊗, show marginal districts in which Negro percentage exceeds 1954 margin.

For 313 of the 435 Congressional districts, CQ's statistics on the Negro population are based on complete 1950 census information. In the remaining 122, district boundaries cut through counties, census tracts and other basic census units. Hence, data for these districts must be drawn from a "sample" of each district's population. This "sample" ranges from 80 to 100 percent of the district's total 1950 population in all but 12 of the 122.

— No major party opposition in 1954.

Whereas 24 of the 32 Democratic-held balance-of-power districts were more than 5 percent Negro in 1950, 15 or one-half of the 29 GOP-held districts were less than 5 percent Negro in 1950. But in seven of the 15, Republican candidates won with less than 51 percent of the vote, marking these as districts open to strong Democratic challenge. If, however, we assume that the majority of Negroes voting in these districts in 1954 voted Democratic, any shift of Negro support to the Republican party in 1956 would have the effect of diminishing Democratic chances for capturing these seats.

An instance is the Indiana 3rd, composed of four counties on the Michigan border centering on South Bend. The 1950 Negro population numbered about 12,000 or 4.5 percent of a 396,000 total. In 1954, Rep. Shepard J. Crumpacker Jr. won by 2,033 votes, at a time when South Bend was suffering heavy unemployment. A switch by Negroes to the GOP column might frustrate Democratic hopes of winning this district in 1956, even though Crumpacker is retiring.

Outlook for 1956

The case for a switch was explained in blunt terms April 11 by Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in a speech before 5,000 Chicago Negroes. Referring to the largely-voteless southern Negroes, he said:

"Up here we can have something to say about the party that made (Sen. James O.) Eastland (D Miss.) Chairman of the (Senate Judiciary) Committee which can choke us whether we live in Mississippi, Illinois or Montana.

"Up here we can strike a blow in defense of our brothers in the South, if necessary by swapping the known devil for the suspected witch. It could be that the witch, if freed of the political necessity of teaming up with the devil, just might do better by us.

"Certainly, with Eastland on our necks, and with every southern politician yelling that we won't get our rights until doomsday, we cannot be any worse off than we are now."

In order to assume control of the 85th Congress in 1957, Republicans must score a net gain of two Senate and 15 House seats in the November election. In only two non-South states where Democratic Senators are up for re-election can it be said, on the basis of 1950 statistics, that Negroes hold the balance of power -- in Missouri (7.5 percent Negro) where Sen. Thomas C. Hennings Jr. got 53.6 percent of the 1950 vote, and New York (6.2 percent Negro) where Sen. Herbert H. Lehman was elected by 52.6 percent of the 1950 vote. Republicans also are conceded a chance in Kentucky (6.9 percent Negro), where Sen. Earle C. Clements was elected in 1950 by 54.4 percent of the vote.

As pointed out above, Negroes held the balance of power, at least theoretically, in 14 districts that elected Democrats in 1954 by less than 55 percent of the vote. In 10 of these districts Democrats replaced Republicans. A major switch by Negro voters in these districts could elect Republicans in 1956.

Interviews with Democratic and Republican professional political students of the subject produced substantial agreement on these points:

- A majority of Negroes backed Democratic Congressional candidates in 1954; in the case of many close contests they provided the margin of victory.

Based on 1950 census figures

- It appeared certain that in 1956 Democrats would lose and Republicans would gain some Negro votes.

(NOTE: A significant switch of Negro voters to President Eisenhower and many other GOP candidates occurred Nov. 6. Unofficial returns showed the switch was heaviest in southern cities but occurred also in cities like New York, Philadelphia and Chicago, where up to 85 percent of Negro voters formerly voted Democratic. The extent of the switch cannot be measured until official returns are available for analysis in 1957.)

Aside from the civil rights issue, some Negro leaders feel that the Republican party today offers Negroes greater opportunities for participation, recognition and advancement, just as the Democratic party sought and welcomed potential Negro leaders in the early Thirties. If true, this trend might have long as well as short run significance in developing an independent Negro vote.

STEEL, AUTOWORKERS' DISTRICTS

Congressional Quarterly in 1956 analyzed official census figures to determine which Congressional districts were most directly affected by the well-being of the steel and auto industries. Results of CQ's study:

STEELWORKERS

CQ's study was based on the 1950 census of population, latest complete figures available. Included in this steelworker category were all employees of what the Census Bureau calls the "primary metal industries." About three-quarters of the employees work in blast furnaces, steel mills and iron and steel foundries. The bulk of these persons are in plants organized by the United Steelworkers. The others are engaged in industries connected with copper, lead, zinc and aluminum processing. Many of these plants, too, have Steelworker unions. Generally speaking, this is a steel industry study, but in certain states the majority of the workers may be in other plants. In Connecticut, for example, more than half the employees referred to are engaged in nonferrous metal rolling and drawing, primarily copper and brass.

The survey located 206 districts where more than 1,000 persons were employed in steel and other primary metal industries. The districts are listed in the chart on page 801. Of the 28 districts with the largest number of steelworkers, 11 are in Pennsylvania, seven in Ohio, two each in Illinois and Maryland, and one each in Indiana, Alabama, West Virginia, Michigan, New York and Connecticut.

Political Makeup

The districts were represented in the 84th Congress by 97 Democrats and 109 Republicans. They have been divided into three categories for political analysis in the table below:

Winning Candidate's Share of '54 Vote:	Democrats	Republicans
More than 60%	58	41
55-60%	20	35
Total	97	109

The marginal districts -- those in which the winning candidate received less than 55 percent of the vote -- are indicated by an asterisk in the chart on page 801.

Twenty-eight of the 206 districts have more than 10,000 steelworkers. The analysis of their political makeup shows:

Winning Candidate's Share of '54 Vote:	Democrats	Republicans
More than 60%	13	3
55-60%	1	5
Less than 55%	2	4
Total	16	12

The five districts with the largest number of steelworkers elected Democrats in 1954: Indiana 1st, Pennsylvania 30th, Ohio 19th, Pennsylvania 25th and Alabama 9th. Illinois' 4th District, with 22,704 steelworkers, sixth largest total in the country, elected a Republican in 1954. Results were the same in 1956.

The most notable fact about the districts with 1,000 or more steelworkers is their relative political stability. Only 15 of the 206 -- 7.3 percent -- switched party representation in 1954. By comparison, 11 of the 117 districts with 1,000 or more auto workers -- 9.4 percent -- switched in 1954.

Thirteen of the steelworkers' districts switched to the Democratic column in 1954: Delaware at-large; Illinois 3rd and 12th; Michigan 6th and 17th; Missouri 4th; Ohio 9th; Oregon 3rd; Pennsylvania 11th, 19th and 25th; West Virginia 4th; Wisconsin 5th. Two switched to the Republicans: California 6th and Ohio 15th.

In 1956 10 steelworker districts changed party control. All of the Republican gains in the House -- nine seats -- came in steelworker districts: Connecticut 1st; Delaware at-large; Illinois 3rd; Michigan 6th; New Jersey 6th and 14th; Pennsylvania 19th; West Virginia 1st and 4th. (Five of these were 1954 switches.) The Democrats picked up one new seat in the steelworker category: Montana's 2nd.

The large steel districts -- those with more than 10,000 steelworkers -- display the greatest political stability. In 1952, none of the 28 big steel districts wavered in party allegiance. In 1954 and again in 1956 only one of the 28 switched parties: Pennsylvania 25th switched to the Democrats in 1954; West Virginia 1st turned Republican in 1956.

Balance of Power Districts

Steelworkers may be said to hold a theoretical balance of power in 27 of the marginal districts won with less than 55 percent of the vote in 1954. (Comparable figures for the 1956 election will not be available until 1957.) In these districts, the proportion of steelworkers to the total number of workers was greater than the winning candidate's margin. These 27 districts elected eight Democrats and 19 Republicans in 1954.

The Democrats held these eight: Ohio 6th and 9th districts; Pennsylvania 11th, 19th and 25th; West Virginia 1st and 4th; Wisconsin 5th.

These were held by Republicans: California 6th; Colorado 3rd; Connecticut 3rd, 5th and at-large; Illinois 4th and 11th; Indiana 3rd, 5th, 6th and 9th; Kentucky 3rd; Michigan 7th; Montana 2nd; Ohio 3rd; Pennsylvania 6th, 8th, 22nd and 24th.

There are, of course, cross-currents at work in these districts. For instance, in 14 of the 27 districts where steelworkers hold a theoretical balance of power, Negroes also do. In nine of the 27 districts, autoworkers hold a theoretical balance of power. (See next page) Seven districts were so closely contested in 1954 that bloc voting by either steelworkers, autoworkers or Negroes could have thrown the election to the other party.

AUTOWORKERS

The census figures for autoworkers include all managerial and production employees in motor vehicle and motor vehicle equipment manufacturing but exclude employees in plants making tires, auto glass, hardware and trim, metal stampings, headlights, ignitions and storage batteries, when those plants are separate from automobile manufacturing and assembly operation.

CQ's study found 117 districts where more than 1,000 persons were employed in motor vehicle and motor vehicle equipment manufacturing. The districts are listed in the adjoining column. They are centered in 10 states: California, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

Political Makeup

The districts were represented in the 84th Congress by 68 Republicans and 49 Democrats.

They have been divided into three categories for political analysis:

Winning Candidate's Share of '54 Vote:	Democrats	Republicans
More than 60%	31	27
55-60%	8	20
Less than 55%	10	21
Total	49	68

The marginal districts -- those in which the winner's share was less than 55 percent of the vote -- are indicated on the adjoining chart.

Balance of Power Districts

In any district with a close political balance and a large number of autoworkers, their influence is bound to be felt, even if it cannot be proved they hold the "balance of power." To check on this potential influence, CQ computed the percentage of workers in the marginal Congressional districts employed in the automotive industry. Fifteen marginal districts were found where the proportion of autoworkers was greater than the winning candidate's 1954 margin of victory.

The 15 "balance of power" districts were represented in the 84th Congress by nine Republicans and six Democrats. The six Democratic districts all switched from the Republicans in 1954; one of the nine GOP districts had gone Democratic in 1952.

These were the Democratic seats: Indiana 8th; Michigan 6th and 17th; Missouri 4th; Ohio 9th*; Wisconsin 5th*. The Republicans held these: California 6th*; Indiana 3rd*; Kentucky 3rd*; Michigan 7th* and 18th; Ohio 3rd*; Pennsylvania 6th* and 8th*; Wisconsin 1st.

(Districts marked with an asterisk in the list above were those in which steelworkers also had a possible "balance of power.")

Only one of these 15 switched in the 1956 election; the Michigan 6th, the largest autoworkers district in the country, went back to the GOP. Three other districts with more than 1,000 autoworkers also switched to the Republicans while the Democrats made no pick-ups.

Autoworkers' Districts

Congressional districts which had more than 1,000 persons employed in motor vehicle and motor vehicle equipment manufacturing according to the 1950 census.

Asterisk indicates the district is politically marginal, i.e., the winning candidate in 1954 received less than 55 percent of the vote. †shows switches to the GOP in 1956.

GAS LOBBYISTS PLEAD GUILTY, FINED $2,500 EACH

Elmer Patman of Austin, Texas, and John M. Neff of Lexington, Neb., lawyers for the Superior Oil Co. of California, Dec. 14 pleaded guilty to violating the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act by failing to register while lobbying for the natural gas bill (HR 6645) to exempt producers from federal regulation. They were fined $2,500 each and given one-year suspended jail sentences by U.S. District Judge Joseph C. McGarraghy in Washington, D.C.

The Superior Oil Co. was fined $5,000 on each of two counts of "aiding and abetting" the failure of Patman and Neff to register. The government dropped all other counts of the indictment. Superior Oil, Neff and Patman had been charged with conspiracy to commit offenses against the United States; Neff and Patman also were charged with improperly trying to influence the vote of Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) on the natural gas bill by offering him a $2,500 campaign contribution. (See p. 478)

The two lawyers and the oil company were the first convictions under the lobbying law enacted Aug. 2, 1946.

Under terms of the lobby law Neff, Patman and the Superior Oil Co. also are prohibited, for a period of three years from the date of conviction, from attempting to influence directly or indirectly the passage or defeat of any proposed legislation, or from appearing before a Congressional committee in support of or in opposition to proposed legislation. They will be on probation for one year.

The Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act requires the registration with the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of any person who "shall engage himself for pay or for any consideration" for the purpose of attempting to influence the passage or defeat of legislation. Registrants are required to file quarterly reports of their receipts and expenditures.

U.S. Attorney William A. Paisley said the case was not one of a "trivial violation of the statute." He said the Superior Oil Co. spent about $5,000 to publish a brochure, The Natural Gas Issue, which was "liberally distributed in the Senate." He said the case was aggravated by the campaign contribution offered Case.

Attorneys Edward B. Williams for Patman and Edward Burroughs for Neff told the court their clients had previously unblemished records. They described the violation for which guilty pleas were entered as highly technical, adding that the language of the law made it difficult to determine a violation. Judge McGarraghy agreed it was difficult at times to tell just who had to register as a lobbyist, but said that when he was in private practice he advised clients, "when in doubt, register."

In requesting dismissal of the conspiracy charge against Superior Oil, the government introduced a motion of information charging the company with two counts of aiding and abetting the failure of Neff and Patman to register. Under the law of the District of Columbia this action made Superior liable as a principal in the case. Attorney Roger Robb, representing the oil company, said the company entered its plea of guilty because Neff and Patman had "acknowledged that they have been technically guilty of violating the Lobbying Act." He said neither the company nor any of its officials or directors "ever had any intention of violating the act or any other law." Robb said "no official or director of the company knew anything about the actions" of Patman and Neff.

Judge McGarraghy said he imposed the one-year jail sentence "as a warning to others that they could not take this law lightly." Paisley told CQ that he thought it was a "very sensible judgment."

The case was set into motion Feb. 3 when Sen. Case announced during Senate debate on the gas bill that he had rejected a $2,500 campaign contribution he felt was offered in connection with the bill. Neff said he had left the money with the chairman of Case's campaign committee "without any strings attached." Case voted against the bill, although he had been listed as one of its probable supporters. The Senate Feb. 6 passed the bill by a 53-38 roll-call vote, sending it to the White House. The House had previously passed the bill July 28, 1955, by a 209-203 vote. President Eisenhower Feb. 17 vetoed the bill because of what he said were "arrogant" and "highly questionable" activities.

The Senate Feb. 7 adopted, by a 90-0 roll-call vote, a resolution (S Res 205) setting up a Select Committee to investigate the campaign contribution offer. Headed by Sen. Walter F. George (D Ga.), the Committee heard testimony from Patman that the $2,500 offered Case came from the personal funds of Howard B. Keck, president of Superior Oil. Neff said he got the money through Patman and the purpose of the offer was to aid Senators they believed to be of the economic school of thought that would aid the gas bill.

The Committee April 7 said (S Rept 1724) "the objective of the individuals who initiated and carried out this chain of events was to influence by political contribution the vote" of a Senator. The report said "there was neither a bribe nor an attempt to bribe," but "this is a case of irresponsibility run riot."

The Committee recommended the Justice Department examine the transcript of the hearings "in order to determine whether or not any federal statutes" had been violated and to "take such action as is appropriate."

Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. July 24 announced that a federal grand jury had indicted Neff, Patman and the Superior Oil Co. on charges of conspiracy. Neff and Patman were charged with attempting to bribe a Senator and failure to register under the lobbying law. Patman and Neff Sept. 7 pleaded innocent to charges of conspiracy to violate the lobbying law and attempting to influence a Senator.

The maximum penalty for conviction of conspiracy is a fine of $10,000 or imprisonment for five years. For conviction of giving money to a Member of Congress with intent to influence his decision, the law provides a maximum fine of three times the amount of money, or imprisonment for three years, or both. For violation of the Lobbying Act, the law calls for a maximum fine of $5,000 and imprisonment for 12 months, or both.

The last major prosecution under the lobbying law was in 1954 when, in U.S. vs. Harriss, et al. (347 U.S. 612), the Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the law, but limited its application to persons engaging in "direct communication with Members of Congress on pending or proposed federal legislation."

Judge McGarraghy Dec. 14 said since the defendants pleaded guilty in the gas case it was not necessary for him to interpret the language of the law, but only to consider the violations and the punishment necessary.
